Congress Studies Billion in Bonds For U.S. Housing

Bills Proposing Unified Federal Authority Introduced.

'Pay-as-You-Go' Policy Stipulated

Wagner Boosts Measure, Says It Is Certain of Passage.

By Sidney Olson.

A billion-dollar national housing program, coupling slum clearance with low-rent-house building on a scale larger than any yet conceived, was projected yesterday in a bill introduced in Congress by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, and Representative Henry B. Seagall (Democrat), Alabama.

The bill would create a United States Housing Authority, to embrace all the present scattered housing agencies of the Government, and outlines a four-year program based on a rigid "pay-as-you-go" system.

Bond Issue Planned.

Senator Wagner, predicting certain passage of the measure, said of the plan:

"No other undertaking of the Federal Government during the past four years holds forth such certain prospects of business stimulation, economy, re-employment and social advancement."

"The program provides $1,000,000,000, to be raised through a bond issue, and to be available for sound interest-bearing Federal loans.

"It also carries an appropriation of $50,000,000 to pay the annual contributions through Federal appropriations during this four-year period, at an average of only about $12,500,000 a year.

"When the housing program is in full swing, every $1,000,000,000 worth of low-rent housing will cost the Federal Government less than $20,000,000 per year, or less than 2 per cent."

Provisions Listed.

The bill's provisions, in brief, include:

Creation of the United States Housing Authority, headed by a board of three Presidentially appointed members at salaries of $10,000 per year.

This Authority may make grants and loans to public-housing agencies (State or local housing bodies), to assist in developing safe and sanitary low-rent dwellings within reach of low-income groups, and to clear slum areas.

Such loans would bear interest at not less than the going Federal rate and would be payable in not less than 60 years.

Provision of Federal grants in the form of annual contributions to supplement such loans, to be embodied in the contract of grant at the time of the project's inception, at uniform amounts annually for a fixed period of years, making the maximum subsidy 45 per cent.

Money for Federal loans to be raised by Government-guaranteed bond issues, similar to HOLC bonds, with $200,000,000 authorized for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1937, $250,000,000 for 1938, $250,000,000 for 1939 and $300,000,000 for 1940.

Complete decentralization of the Authority's work through the local agencies except in the building of Federal demonstration projects in low-rent houses and slum clearance in areas where local operations are inadequate. Such projects are to be sold to local agencies as soon as possible.

Payment of prevailing wages to all workers in all localities.

Improved Version.

The bill is an improved version of the measure that passed the Senate last session.

The New York Senator, often mentioned as a New Deal nominee for the Supreme Court in the event of a vacancy, and whose labor relations act now is being weighed by that body, said:

"Last year this measure received tremendous Nation-wide support from all groups interested in housing, including tenants, home owners, builders, workers, concerns

Lindberghs Vanish, Bombay Is Nettled

Bombay, Feb. 24 (AP).—The Charles A. Lindberghs, sufficient unto themselves, turned up in Bombay today.

They had dropped out of sight for two days, sightseeing in the walled city of Jaipur and at Udaipur on their way from Jodhpur.

Indians, anxious to display their Eastern hospitality, were nettled when the flying Americans drove from the airport into Bombay in a taxi and vanished, presumably in the home of friends. They refused to disclose their plans even to officials.

Small Deposits In Closed Bank May Be Paid

Mount Vernon Trustees Propose to Organize Mortgage Firm.

A plan whereby 23,500 depositors in closed Mount Vernon Savings Bank would be paid in full, perhaps within the next 90 days, was proposed yesterday by the trustees, Thomas E. Burke, E. C. Davison and E. Flavelle Koss.

About 7,000 of this number are Washington school children whose money was deposited in the bank, which closed its doors in voluntary liquidation during the bank holiday of March, 1933.

To Make Property Pay.

Only those holding certificates of deposit of $60 or less will receive immediate cash for their claim certificates. The plan is to clear the books of all small deposits as soon as possible.

Larger claimants, numbering 2,000, will be asked to trade their deposit certificates in a dollar-for-dollar exchange for stock in a proposed mortgage company to be known as "The Mount Vernon Mortgage Corporation," in lieu of cash.

The Mount Vernon Mortgage Corporation plans to vitalize considerable property once owned by the bank, now stagnated under the terms of the liquidating trusteeship. Under the trusteeship, the trustees are not permitted to build upon or improve real property. It is hoped by constructing buildings on much of the vacant property to make it salable.

The United Association of Journeyman Plumbers and Steamfitters voted to advance $150,000 to the liquidators at their convention December 29 to help pay off small depositors. More money will be supplied by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, trustees said. The closed bank formerly was a subsidiary enterprise of the union, and the union is the largest depositor.

Stress Mortgage Business.

The trustees yesterday asserted they had the verbal approval of 90 per cent of the large depositors, who will be the only ones permitted to vote on the proposal. Since small depositors will be paid in full in cash (without interest, however), they will have no vote.

If the 2,000 approve, the bank will go out of business permanently as a bank and the new organization will devote itself solely to the mortgage business. The present trustees will become the board of directors of the proposed mortgage company, under the plan.

Most of the depositors live in this city. The great bulk of the deposits are well below $60, the trustees said. A considerable percentage of the deposits was made up of savings accounts of numerous union locals spread over the United States. De-

Townsend Found Guilty Of Contempt

Conviction Will Aid His Cause, Says Pension Plan Author.

Doctor Admits Walkout Was 'Willful,' Lawyer Denies It.

Confident that the Nation will hail him as a martyr to the cause of old-age pensions, Dr. Francis E. Townsend yesterday calmly heard a District Supreme Court jury adjudge him guilty of contempt of the House.

Facing imprisonment of from one month to a year or a fine of from $100 to $1,000, Dr. Townsend, when the jury returned its verdict after deliberating for 50 minutes, declared:

"The verdict unquestionably will increase the activities of our old age revolving pensions organization because the consensus of opinion the country over is that I have been the victim of an injustice."

Huddled in his overcoat which he wore throughout the concluding hours of his trial, the elderly physician said, "The verdict is just what I expected because we were not allowed to introduce evidence justifying my action."

To Seek New Trial.

Last night Dr. Townsend appeared as master of ceremonies at what was termed a mass meeting to launch the organization of Townsend Clubs in the Nation's Capital. Only two score persons attended the "mass meeting" in Pythian Temple, however, and Dr. Townsend did not even mention his trial in his brief address.

Immediately after the second day's session of the trial got under way, Justice Peyton Gordon announced that he would direct the jury to return a not guilty verdict on the second count of the indictment, which was based on the alleged refusal of Dr. Townsend to testify before the House Old Age Pension Investigating Committee last May.

The first count of the indictment on which Dr. Townsend was convicted alleged he showed contempt for the House by refusing to obey a subpena which directed him to remain before the committee until he was excused.

After testifying for two and a half days before the committee, Dr. Townsend staged his dramatic walkout after announcing he did not intend to return unless he was under arrest.

Admits "Wilful" Action.

Justice Gordon in his charge to the jury declared Dr. Townsend should be acquitted unless it felt that the walkout was staged wilfully and without provocation.

Defense Attorney Elisha Hanson announced he would file a motion for a new trial, and Justice Gordon said he would delay imposing sentence for three days. If a new trial is not granted the case will be taken to the Court of Appeals, Hanson said.

After court adjourned, Dr. Townsend was surrounded by newspapermen.

"I did wilfully absent myself from the committee," Dr. Townsend said, "but with no thought of placing myself in contempt of the House."

Hanson overheard Dr. Townsend and hurriedly pushed his way into the circle to declare that the doctor did not "wilfully absent himself from the committee."

"You did not wilfully absent yourself," said Hanson to the physician. "Perhaps, doctor, you are not aware of the legal meaning of wilfully."

"I know I was my own moral agent when I walked out of the committee room," Dr. Townsend declared.

Earlier Dr. Townsend took the witness stand in his own defense to deny testimony of John R. Kiefer, former director of the old-age pension movement, that Dr. Townsend and other directors planned to stage the walkout two weeks before the subpena was delivered. The walkout was planned, Kiefer had testified, as a "masterpiece of strategy."

"I insisted upon appearing before the committee," said Dr. Townsend in a low voice. "I felt it was an excellent opportunity to get our plan before Congress."

Defense efforts to introduce testi-

Film Actor Is Killed During Blast Scene

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 24 (AP).—Explosion of a bomb during mimic warfare in a motion picture blew fragments of a plaster wall into the chest of George Daley, 40, today, fatally injuring him.

Daly was playing the part of a machine gunner in a World War film at Universal Studios. He died shortly after reaching a hospital.

Police said 300 extras had spent the night making a scene for the picture. The explosion, called for in the script, crushed the wall behind which Daley and Frank Hutter were crouched, police said. Hutter was uninjured.

Guy Standing, 'Kindly Actor,' Succumbs at 63

British-Born Movie Star Collapses in Garage At His Home.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Feb. 24.—Sir Guy Standing, 63, distinguished English motion picture actor, fell dead today while chatting with an attendant in the garage where he kept his automobile.

An instant before he collapsed, Sir Guy had replied in answer to a question about his health, "I never felt better."

Dr. D. D. Young, who hurried to the actor from Emergency Hospital, said he believed Sir Guy succumbed to a heart attack.

A Black Widow spider, his friends said tonight, probably was the indirect cause of death. He was bitten during the filming of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and had complained of recurrent pains in his legs ever since.

In British Navy.

Standing was born in London. Eldest son of a theatrical family, he ran away from home to join a touring troupe. In the theater when the World War began, he joined the English navy, rose to the rank of commander, and was knighted by the late King George V.

After the Armistice, he returned to the stage and eventually came to Hollywood. His most recent picture was "Lloyds of London;" his first, "The Story of Temple Drake." His work won such quick recognition as the stern old British officer in "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" he achieved prominence that led to stardom in "Annapolis Farewell." Stage plays in which he appeared included "Wild Oats," "The Constant Wife" and "Jenny."

In Hollywood he maintained sumptuous bachelor quarters at Malibu Lake, 30 miles from the studios. His only companion was his valet, Jim Fuller. He was devoted to sailing, golfing and music.

Was Widely Admired.

He was widely admired among the movie set, but seldom attended any of its social functions. Recently, when a young film actress he knew only slightly was stricken with a serious disease and required a year's hospitalization, he contributed $1,000 to her expenses.

His brother, Wyndham Standing, film actor, said Sir Guy had been married three times. His first wife, the brother said, was the late Isabel Urquehart, New York social figure. They were divorced and he married an actress, Blanche Burton, who has since died. Their children, Wyndham Standing said, are Guy Standing, jr., and Katherine Standing, both of whom are believed to be on the stage in England. The third Mrs. Standing was Dorothy Hammond, Sir Guy's brother said.

Funeral services will be arranged tomorrow.

N. Y. Fight Expected On Child Labor Bill

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 24 (AP).—Tension over proposed ratification of the Federal child labor amendment increased tonight in New York's legislature after notice by a Republican lawmaker that he will seek to force the measure from the assembly judiciary committee Monday night for a floor vote.

Madrid Wins Key Position In Big Battle

Clash on Pinzarron Hill Declared Heaviest Fighting in War.

Hospital Head Reports Casualties in Jarama Area 'Great.'

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Feb. 24.—The flower of Spain's rival armies battled tonight for possession of strategic Pinzarron Hill in what a government officer said was "perhaps the heaviest" battle in the nation's history.

Twice government militiamen charged up the slopes and twice they were thrown back by heavy machine gun and rifle fire. Then they gained a foothold on the sides.

"The hill is practically ours," said a studious-looking Spaniard who commands the government forces in that sector, southeast of Madrid. But he did not say the insurgents had been driven completely off the top.

From that summit the insurgent artillerymen have commanded a section of the vital Madrid-Valencia highway, the main road still linking Madrid with the government headquarters on the Mediterranean.

It lies about 20 miles southeast of Madrid in the embattled Jarama River sector, not far from Morata de Tajuna, a town pock-marked with gaping shell holes and battered buildings.

Casualties in the Jarama fighting were great. An American emergency hospital group, headed by Dr. Edward Barsky, of the Beth Israel Hospital, New York, alone cared for 900 wounded in one day's struggle.

Fighting continued to the west and northwest of Madrid, too, especially in the University City area, where government soldiers attempted to dislodge insurgents who have held on for weeks.

Far to the south, said a dispatch to the Febus (Spanish) News Agency, the government captured the town of Pitres, while the insurgents rushed eastward toward the important seaport of Almeria.

West of Madrid, a little-heralded government advance westward from El Escorial was pointed toward Navalperal de Pinares, lying on the insurgent communication line to Avila, said unconfirmed reports.

Capture of Navalperal would mean dislocation of the insurgent supply system in the rear of the troops battering Madrid. The government force, the reports said, recently took the town of Robledo de Chavela and passed Valdemaqueda.

Government troops struggling for possession of Oviedo, in the north, pressed against insurgent positions at nearby Villar and La Cadellada, press reports said.

Although the government claimed to have taken buildings of an orphanage on Oviedo's outskirts, the reports stated control of Villar was vital to further progress.

The insurgents' work of destruction was in evidence everywhere in the region around Morata de Tajuna and Pinzarron Hill.

Nearly all the civilians had left the town, but troops had taken their places. Government war planes droned over the shell-marked streets, en route to the scene of ac-

Duke of Windsor Discusses Future With His Brother

Vienna, Feb. 24 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor talked with his youngest brother, the Duke of Kent, today on the three subjects nearest his heart—money, houses and love.

The self-exiled former monarch, greeting his favorite brother for the first time since his abdication, discussed his marriage plans and his future home for Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The royal brothers, hurrying to a hotel from separate trains, were visibly affected by their meeting. An adjutant reported they immediately plunged into discussion of Edward's plans and his future financial arrangements.

Cannes, France, Feb. 24 (AP).—Wallis Warfield Simpson, swinging out into Riviera society, cast off her title of "The Hermitess of Lou Viei" tonight.

With Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, her hosts at the Villa Lou Viei, she dined with Sir Pomeroy and Lady Burton at the Chateau La Croe near Antibes.

Some sources declared Mrs. Simpson might be interested in buying the chateau for a future residence after her marriage to the Duke of Windsor.

Sir Craigie's Visit Viewed Significant

London, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Possibility that informal conferences on world sea armaments, as affecting the United States and Great Britain particularly, may be held soon at Washington, arose tonight after announcement Sir Robert Craigie will sail for America March 17.

Sir Robert is assistant secretary of state for foreign affairs and the foremost naval expert of the foreign office. The announcement explained his trip was "purely personal," and that he would visit relatives in the United States.

It was recalled another "purely personal" visit of a British high official to the United States resulted in the unofficial Roosevelt-Hull-Runciman conversations on reciprocal trade policies in Washington.

Senate Foes Forecast Court Change Defeat By Margin of 10 Votes

Capital Preachers Challenge Court Program of Roosevelt

Methodist Episcopal Group Adopts Resolution Opposing Increasing Supreme Tribunal by Congressional Act Instead of by People.

A resolution of "vigorous protest" against the President's Supreme Court program last night was forwarded to the Washington Federation of Churches by the preachers' meeting of the Washington District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, comprising clergymen of 60 Washington churches.

Action was taken at a recent meeting of the group, which appointed a committee of three Washington Methodist Episcopal clergymen to draw up the resolution. The committee's formal "protest" was finally approved by the preachers' meeting Monday, it was learned.

Objection to the court enlargement program, echoing similar protests by religious groups and newspapers in other sections of the country, was taken "on the ground that what the President asks for would repudiate the fundamental principles of the American Constitution, namely, the three-fold division of powers, executive, legislative and judicial, which safeguards our system of checks and balances."

The Washington Federation of Churches was called on to appeal for similar protests from affiliated bodies, and to petition Congress to oppose any change in the court without "direct appeal to the people."

The resolution was drafted by the Rev. Frank W. Collier, professor of philosophy at American University; the Rev. William A. Haggerty, of the Rosedale Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Ralph D. Smith, of the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church.

The resolution said "the desired end can be attained without illegally hampering the Supreme Court," which it called "the constitutional bulwark of the personal, political, and religious liberties of the American people."

It read as follows:

"The message of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Seventy-fifth Congress, with a bill attached, proposing an increase in the number of the justices of the Supreme Court, calls for vigorous protest by all Americans who prize our democratic heritage enjoyed for over 150 years.

"We, therefore, the members of Preachers' Meeting of the Washington District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, make our protest on the ground that what the President asks for would repudiate the fundamental principles of the American Constitution, namely,

Opponents Now Claim 42 Pledged to Fight Bill.

Collapse of Farm Support Is Hinted

Leftists Swinging Away From President's Proposal.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a burst of opposition strength attributed to collapsing farm support for the President's Supreme Court program, opponents of the plan in a private poll yesterday listed 42 Senators as "positively" opposed to the six-judge increase.

Opposition leaders challenged informal claims of upward of 50 votes for the President's plan, claimed "at least an even break" from 24 doubtful Senators, and declared the judiciary program "would be defeated in the Senate by a 10-vote margin if it came to a vote today."

Joining in the latter forecast were Senators Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, and Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri (Democrats), but Senators conducting the opposition poll declined to be quoted.

Leftists Swing Away.

The day's developments showed a sharp swing of leftists away from the President's program, combining opposition statements from the head of the Farmers' Union, most radical of the three major farm organizations; from Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, third party Presidential candidate in the last election, and a radio denunciation by Senator Rush D. Holt, West Virginia Democrat.

Spreading opposition of religious groups to the court enlargement plan meanwhile was reflected in Washington. A committee named by the Preachers' Meeting of the Washington District of the Methodist Episcopal Church petitioned the Washington Federation of Churches to call on all affiliated bodies to "protest."

Still another opposition development was the statement in Shanghai of Roscoe Pound, dean emeritus of Harvard Law School, that the President is "bluffing" in his court plan.

E. H. Everson, president of the national organization of the Farmers Union, in a statement to South Dakota papers, warned against further "encroachments" among the three co-ordinate branches of Government.

"Personally, I am no more in favor of making or attempting to make the Supreme Court of the United States a rubber stamp than I am in favor of making Congress a rubber stamp for the Executive, or any other department of Government," Everson said.

"Too Many Encroachments."

"My personal opinion is there already has been too much encroachment of the three departments of Government upon the functions of the other, and I also believe that in appointment of justices of the Supreme Court in the past there has been too much of a tendency to appoint men to these posts because of their inclination to political views or lines of reasoning."

Everson said his organization had gone on record as believing the court should not encroach upon functions of other departments, but

Church Groups Demand Free German Ballot

Boycott Threatened Unless Nazis Agree to Liberty of Assembly.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—Three large German Protestant church bodies threatened tonight to boycott elections on church control unless Nazi authorities accede to five conditions.

The conditions, set up by the Confessional Synod, the Lutheran state churches of Bavaria, Wurttemberg and Hanover and the non-Nazi church committees, embody freedom of speech and assembly and recognition by the state of the schism between the so-called Nazi German Christians and the Fundamentalists.

The Fundamentalists, who have expressed the fear the Nazis will try to pack the elections which are to be held after Easter, contend the Nazi German Christians are undermining Christianity by their conception of a gospel linked with a Mohammedan-like faith in Adolf Hitler as a new prophet.

The five conditions follow:

1. The elections must be conducted according to church practice. This would include registration of voters and the right to challenge registered persons. The elections must be indirect, in that only parish elders should be chosen directly by the voters, with delegates to the general synod to be selected successively from delegates to district and later state synods.

2. Decisions of the general synod must be ratified by churches of the German federated states.

3. Freedom of speech and assembly in the discussion of candidates and measures must be safeguarded.

4. Pastors who have been arrested and suspended for violating Nazi church regulations must be reinstated.

5. The state must recognize that the German Christians and the rest of the Protestants do not speak the same language, hence no effort must be made to compel them to work together after the general elections.

Chrysler Sets March 3 as Date Of U.A.W. Talk

Police Evict 107 Squatters in East as Strike Trouble Grows.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 24.—The United Automobile Workers of America, still negotiating strike issues with General Motors Corporation, aimed its drive for collective bargaining agreements tonight at a second major automobile producer—the Chrysler Corporation, employing 77,000 workers in nine cities.

Richard T. Frankensteen, organizational director of the United Automobile Workers, announced late today that Chrysler Corporation executives had agreed to meet with union representatives in a conference to discuss collective bargaining. He said that in a telephone conversation, Herman L. Weckler, vice president and general manager of Chysler, had set next Wednesday as a tentative date for the start of conferences.

Demands to Be Formed.

Union demands, Frankensteen said, will be formulated by its officers in a series of meetings.

Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, said recently the union will ask Chrysler for recognition as sole collective bargaining agency for employes of the corporation, but will not demand a closed shop. He has described the union's relations with Chrysler as "satisfactory."

In its requests for a conference, the union claimed among its members a majority of Chrysler wage earners. Martin has placed the total membership at 200,000, including "more than 100,000" in Michigan.

G. M. Pact Tentative.

Earlier, General Motors officials negotiating with union representatives on issues remaining from recent strikes said after their fourteenth session today tentative agreements were reached on methods of pay and speed of production demands.

C. E. Wilson, corporation vice president, said only three points were left for discussion—specific cases of discrimination, the 30-hour week, and minimum wages.

The request to Chrysler today was another step in the announced plan of the union, a Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate, to obtain collective bargaining agree-

2 Killed, 6 Demonstrators Shot As 267 Strikers Stay in Mine

By the Associated Press.

Pecs, Hungary, Feb. 24.—Two demonstrators were shot and killed and six, including two women, wounded tonight in a clash with police near the mine where 267 coal miners were entrenched on strike.

Three hundred men and women engaged in the demonstration and stoned police as they tried to clear the way to the pithead.

The government launched an investigation of the troubles.

Worried watchers, meanwhile, said they feared the miners, entrenched below the surface in a flooded mine, were bent on mass suicide.

Dank water rose, slowly but steadily, in the workings where the men, demanding a 20 cents a day pay raise from their present $1 wage, began a hunger strike this morning. The gauge on an idle pump showed the water had risen from the 200-meter to the 70-meter level.

Most authorities presumed, however, that the miners—from whom nothing had been heard since morning—still were above the waterline, now almost at its maximum. But they pointed to an increased danger from explosives and poisonous gases. The miners have shut off water and air pumps.

On the surface, in the mining suburb of Vadas, the excitement was feverish.

Congressional Hearing Halted for Reveries By Mention of Strip Teaser Gypsy Rose Lee

A momentary hush fell on the hearings before the Dickstein Committee on Immigration yesterday, and Representatives, witnesses and spectators alike halted to do a bit of brooding.

The name of Gypsy Rose Lee had been mentioned.

To one and all the name brought visions of the streamlined "strip-tease" beauty of burlesque, who rose from three-a-day "bump dancing" to statuesque posing in the "Follies," and who is now undressing elegantly for the movies.

Two of the numerous Minsky brothers, the "Ziegfelds of Burly," were testifying before the committee yesterday on artistic standards of present-day burlesque, when Miss Lee's name threw the roomful of customers into a pleasant stupor.

These were Herbert and Morton Minsky, who are violently in favor of Representative Dickstein's bill to bar foreign stage and screen stars from invading American theaters.

Herbert, middle-aged, quiet, baldish, dressed in conservative businessman fashion, discussed briefly the essentials of the "strip-tease art," as he termed it.

Said Mr. Minsky:

"Strange as it may seem, the strip-tease artists have to be trained and schooled. They have to be taught rhythm in a manner synchronous with the music. They are taught to strip and unclothe by specialists in the atmosphere and lighting of the stage. There are plenty of Americans only too glad to work in theaters, although plenty of foreign artists want the privilege of becoming strip-tease artists."

Said Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, and committee chairman:

"You don't want any foreign competition in strip-teases?"

Minsky pounded the table, his expression pained. "We do not!" he answered.

Dating the rise of strip-tease from the Winter Garden Theater in New York in 1922, Minsky said the art has made such strides that there are now about 150 burlesque theaters offering the art of strip-tease specialists to thousands of delighted customers.

It was then that Minsky enumerated the stars who have risen from supplying laughs and heart-throbs to the traditional bald-head row of burlesque to bigger things. He named Eddie Cantor, Jack Pearl, Fanny Brice, Joe Penner, Bert Lahr and Bobby Clark. There was little response. He mentioned Gypsy Rose Lee, and it was then that the beatific lassitude settled down on the hearing. He went on, "Gypsy started with us five or six years ago. Today she is one of the most highly publicized stars in the country and her salary is $2,000 per week."

A lesser sensation, but still definite, was caused when he spoke feelingly of the productions at the French Casino in New York as an example of the dangers of foreign competition.

This enterprise, with which the majority of spectators seemed to be familiar, judging from their beaming reminiscent expressions, Minsky said is now operating in Chicago, Cleveland and Miami also. "Their type of show is very salable in this country," he said.

The committee's interest, which was at a high point during discussion of the exact talents a "burley queen" must have—good looks, a sense of finesse and a knowledge of the consumers' psychology—fell away as other witnesses were called. Gradually the audience slipped away, but each with a firm resolve not to miss next Wednesday's session.

Court Change Plan a 'Bluff,' Asserts Pound

Dean Emeritus of Harvard Law School Scents Attempt to Scare Bench.

By the United Press.

Shanghai, Feb. 24. — President Roosevelt is "bluffing" in his proposal to make over the United States Supreme Court, Dean Emeritus Roscoe Pound, of Harvard University law school, told newspapermen today when he arrived on the Japanese N. Y. K. liner Asama Maru.

The dean, on an around-the-world tour, believes that Mr. Roosevelt is "just trying to scare" members of the court because of adverse decisions they have given on New Deal legislation.

He forecast defeat for the President, asserting that anybody who knows the members of the court ought to know that "they will not scare easily."

"Scheme," Says Pound.

The President's whole plan, Dean Pound asserted emphatically, "is a scheme to try to get the judges to throw over the law and render decisions on a basis of what the President wants the law to be rather than what it really is."

The dean suggested that the President now probably is awaiting for public opinion to crystallize on the controversy and added:

"He will find that the bulk of intelligent Americans are against him."

Supports Court.

The jurist denied Mr. Roosevelt's "insinuations" that the Court is "backward" or that progress is being held up because of the time it requires to dispose of cases in its docket.

Discussing the court's decision that the national recovery act was unconstitutional, Dean Pound said:

"The NRA unquestionably was unconstitutional. Students of the law knew that and the Court's unanimous decision was in accordance with the best tradition of American legal practice and philosophy."

N. Y. Bar Attacks Plan.

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—A committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York tonight called President Roosevelt's proposals for altering the personnel of the Supreme Court "indefensible."

The committee declared that reasons for the President's recommendations to Congress could be found only in his "desire to put into effect without constitutional amendment legislation of the character heretofore held invalid."

The committee's only dissenter was Attorney Simon H. Rifkind, a law partner of Democratic Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, who urged in his minority report that the association approve the President's plans.

Mr. Roosevelt is himself a member of the association, his name having been transferred since his election to the Presidency to the honarary list, where it follows those of three Supreme Court justices—Hughes, Stone and Cardozo.

Would Create Jobs.

"By stimulating the durable goods industries, now lagging farthest behind in the recovery drive, and by facing the problem of technological unemployment, it will create jobs in private industry for the men and women still idle and dependent upon public relief despite their overwhelming desire to earn a decent living in a normal way.

"And at a cost much cheaper than the terrible social and business toll of unhealthy housing—in terms of disease, crime and maladjustment—it will provide better living quarters for millions who now dwell in dismal and insanitary surroundings . . ."

Must Build New Homes.

"Instead of saving old homes, new ones must be built. The undertakings of the RFC and the FHA can do no more than to facilitate the financing of homes for people who can afford homes and who have credit standing."

The scope of the four-year program is indicated by the fact that 375,000 family dwelling units would be constructed at a total capital cost ($4,000 per family unit) of $1,500,000,000, with loans of 500,000,000 in non-Federal moneys and $1,000,000,000 in Federal moneys.

Both Wagner and Steagall stressed the decentralization of the measure's intent, as well as its safeguards against competition with private industry.

Congressional Furor Over Roosevelt Bill Echoes Jefferson Age.

By Franklyn Waltman

HISTORIANS are fond of telling us that there is nothing new under the sun—that whatever happens now has had its counterpart in some distant year. And in a large degree they are correct. Thus members of the Seventh Congress became as excited and as oratorical about Thomas Jefferson's proposal for repeal of the "Midnight Judges" act, passed by the Federalists, as are the members of the Seventy-fifth Congress over President Roosevelt's judiciary proposal.

WALTMAN.

An exception to the general rule laid down by historians, however, is that President Roosevelt has no precedent for increasing the size of the Supreme Court in order to make that body amenable to his will—which is what he actually is attempting to do—although seeking to justify his plan on the ground of congestion and thus make it conform to the reasons for previous increases in the size of the high tribunal.

But even though Jefferson's proposal in 1801 to repeal the "Midnight Judges" act is not on all fours with the Roosevelt program, there is a close analogy between the circumstances of the two undertakings. Thus a reading of the Congressional debates on the Jefferson proposal reveals his opponents as declaring for "independence of the judiciary" and warning that any tampering with that independence spelled the doom of the Republic. The Jeffersonians, on the other hand, had much to say about bringing the courts into harmony with the will of the people, with denunciations of their arrogance and reaction.

But the most striking anology between the two events is found in the message sent to Congress by the two Presidents, projecting their proposals. Each incorrectly described the condition of Federal court dockets, and each was severely assailed for the misrepresentation. The only difference is that Jefferson retracted his errors in a second message to Congres, while President Roosevelt—so far—has admitted his errors only by abandoning his original contentions.

In his first message to Congress on the State of the Union, on December 8, 1801, Jefferson indirectly suggested repeal of the "Midnight Judges" act, which, passed on the eve of the Jefferson Administration, provided for 16 Federal circuit judges, and provided that the next vacancy on the Supreme Court should not be filled, thus reducing that body to 5 members. That, however, never materialized, because the act was repealed before a vacancy occurred.

Jefferson undertook to show there was no need for the additional judges named by the Federalist Adams—that the number of pending cases was small and not burdensome—and therefore he attached to his message what he termed "an exact statement of all the causes decided since the first establishment of the courts and of those which were depending (sic) when additional courts and judges were brought to their aid."

The figures contained in the Jefferson statement were searchingly examined both within and outside of Congress and were assailed as erroneous—as not depicting the true condition of the dockets of the Federal courts, where, it was contended, more cases existed than had been recorded by the President. These contentions figured in the debate on the bill.

When the debate on the bill in the House had reached a point of white heat on February 28, 1802, Jefferson sent a second message to Congress, accompanied by a revised statistical statement of the court dockets and with affidavits from some of the court clerks. The new statement showed the first to be in error in several instances, recording in the aggregate 82 more cases instituted and 90 more "depending" than did the December statement.

"Some statements have been lately received of the causes decided or depending (sic) in the courts of the Union, in certain States, supplementary, or corrective, of those from which was formed the general statement accompanying my message at the opening of the session," Jefferson said in his February 28, 1802, message.

"I therefore communicate them to Congress, with a report of the Secretary of State, noting their effect on the former statement, and correcting certain errors in it which arose partly from inexactitude in some of the returns, and partly in analyzing, adding and transcribing them, while hurried in preparing the other voluminous messages accompanying that message."

President Roosevelt's contentions regarding congestion of dockets in the Supreme and Federal courts being allied to the presence of judges over 70 years of age have been shown from the last annual reports of his Attorney General, his Solicitor General and from independent inquiry to be without factual foundation. There is no doubt existing that the Supreme Court is free of congestion and that in only four of the 34 district courts where congestion exists are there judges over 70 years of age.

Undoubtedly President Roosevelt, as did Jefferson, sincerely believed the contentions he was making were accurate. He cannot be expected to have first-hand knowledge of the condition of court dockets. However, his errors have been pointed out to him, as were Jefferson's to him. Can we expect another Roosevelt message to Congress retracting the errors of the February fifth message?

the threefold division of powers—executive, legislative and judicial—which safeguards our system of checks and balances. In this American plan the powers are co-ordinate and independent; and the verdict of history is that individual liberty is thus best preserved.

"Only an honest, independent judiciary can protect the liberties of all the people, especially in times of emotional stress, against coercion on the part of the executive or legislative branches of the Government, or both."

"The fundamental law as embodied in the Constitution has been changed in the past and may be changed in the future; but it can be properly changed only by direct appeal to the people as provided in the Constitution itself. Any method of change by indirection is a violation of democracy, and thus is politically reprehensible, a betrayal of trust, and, hence, profoundly immoral.

"If there be a present need for change, the people should be appealed to directly. No mandate has been given by the people for what the President asks. To grant his request would be a betrayal of trust by the Congress and a surrender of its legislative function. This may possibly result in irreparable harm to America, to democracy and thus to civilization.

"And we request the Washington Federation of Churches to call upon all of the affiliated bodies to protest through the federation the action of the President, and to petition the Congress to seek changes as may be necessary by plain, direct appeal to the people. Thus the desired end can be attained without illegally hampering the Supreme Court, the constitutional bulwark of the personal, political and religious liberties of the American people."

Missing Fliers Battle Way Out of Jungle

Lima, Peru, Feb. 24 (AP).—Reports from Puerto Maldonado today said Capt. Americo Vargas and two other men, missing since January 30, when their army plane was forced down in a jungle, had reached safety after pushing their way upstream on improvized rafts in the Piedras River for more than 20 days.

Their first raft was swept away while they were resting on the river bank, and they were using a second when a rescue party in a small motor launch reached them and took them to Puerto Maldonado. There Vargas delivered air mail and a quantity of money which he had guarded during the long days on the river.

Leftist Support Swinging Away From Proposal of President.

he would not attempt to say what stand his organization would take on the President's court recommendations, although he personally was opposed to court remodeling. The National Grange already has opposed the program and Farm Bureau Federation leaders have remained cool to it.

As young Senator Holt, opposed to the plan, broadcast a radio appeal "to the youth of America to join in the battle to protect the American form of Government," Representative Lemke, whose farm-debt moratorium bill was invalidated by the Supreme Court, lashed out in its defense.

Cites Italian Action.

"The assasination of 600 people in their own country by Mussolini shows what can be done by an untrammeled dictator," said Lemke, Union party leader and crusader for more liberal farm legislation. "That wasn't done by any court. My position is that the amending of the Constitution belongs to the people who made it.

"I do not believe that the Supreme Court has divine wisdom, but I never found divine wisdom in any President. In the last 50 years the Presidents have defeated the will of the people more often than the Supreme Court has done so. There was the killing of the Frazier-Lemka farm refinancing bill, the McNary-Haugen bill, and a host of other measures, defeated by the veto or the pressure of a President. History tells us that rights once surrendered are seldom recovered without bloodshed."

Meanwhile, Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, who has been reported favoring the President's plan if no other solution could be found, called again at the White House.

Talks to President.

After talking with the President ten days ago, Norris told reporters he saw "danger" in the President's plan of enlarging the court personnel. Yesterday he told reporters he wouldn't "say just that" but did say "I would rather not do it that way."

The veteran Nebraska liberal said he believed limiting tenure of justices by constitutional amendment is the proper solution.

"You can't get permanent relief without changing the Constitution," he commented, "though you might get temporary relief as the President suggests."

There was some discussion of the court issue with the President yesterday, the Nebraskan admitted.

"God never made a man big enough, broad enough and wise enough to have unlimited power for life and a luxurious salary for life, not responsible to anyone," he continued. "Therefore I believe the term of a judge should be definite and limited. Life tenure is a beautiful theory but it doesn't work out in practice."

Other developments:

A unanimous consent request for immediate consideration by the Senate of the Sumners bill for full pay voluntary retirement of Supreme Court justices at 70 was blocked by two objections, Sentaor Patrick McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, said he will move to call it up after Senate action on the reciprocal trade bill. The measure is viewed as a possible solution of the controversy if two or more justices retire under its terms.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace at a press conference said farm sentiment might be slow in developing. He said "farmers are naturally conservative and slow about a thing like this," and added: "Most farmers until the Supreme Court (AAA) decision knew very little about the Supreme Court."

Tells of Support.

James Wolfe, former Democratic national committeeman from Minnesota, said he told the President he was satisfied that "the rank and file of the people of the States are just as loyal to him on this proposition as they have been on others." He said he believed the people of Minnesota would back the court plan.

Representative Raymond J. Cannon (Democrat), Wisconsin, who claimed the American Bar Association's president had influenced the Texas Senate to object to the President's court plan, introduced a resolution in the House to investigate the association.

List Is Surprising.

There were several "surprises" in the informal list of Senators compiled by the opposition leadership yesterday as definitely opposing Supreme Court enlargement. The list (carried elsewhere in this paper), counted Senator Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, in opposition to the six-judge increase.

The bulk of Shipstead's liberal colleagues in the Senate already are committed against the plan, including Senator Wheeler, Montana Democrat; Senators Frazier and Nye, of North Dakota, Senator Borah, of Idaho; and Senator Johnson, of California, Progressive Republicans. The opposition check lists the liberal Norris as ultimately voting for the plan. Senator Lundeen, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, first list for the plan, was counted as "doubtful" and inclining against it.

Counted against the plan in the opposition poll are such officially uncommitted Senators as Walsh, of Massachusetts; Maloney, of Connecticut; Moore, of New Jersey; Adams, of Colorado; Johnson, of Colorado; Bachman, of Tennessee; Lonergan, of Connecticut. All of these Senators have declined to make public statements, but one, Senator Walsh, is expected to come out publicly within the next week.

Asking for Time.

It was learned last night opposition leaders, organized only informally as yet, have asked Chairman Henry F. Ashurst of the Senate Judiciary Committee, to allow time for opponents of the program following supporting testimony on the opening day of committee hearings, March 9.

Chairman Ashurst plans to call Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, principal author of the President's bill, as the first witness, with possibly one or two of his Justice Department witnesses following. Opponents of the plan are seeking assurance that both sides of the issue may be presented at each hearing, by permitting witnesses in opposion to follow proponents.

In one quarter it was predicted hearings will last at least a month, unless a time limitation is placed on testimony. As the fight on the plan stiffened, there was renewed talk in the lobbies of an ultimate compromise.

Senator Burke, playing a prominent role in the opposition, reiterated to reporters that "there can be no compromise with principle." Burke insisted no Senator who opposed a six-judge increase could afford to "compromise" on a lesser number. White House attaches have represented the President as opposing any modification in his original plan.

In his radio attack on the President's plan last night, the youthful Senator Holt declared "wisdom and justice are more important on the Supreme Court bench than youthful energy and vivacity."

"Why don't these proponents of the plan set up specifically what justice or justices of the Supreme Court are mentally and physically unable to do his or their work," Holt said. "Their reply would not be that the justices' mental faculties were at fault, but that the opinions of the justices were too independent to suit their purposes."

Holt said that even if judicial encroachments were granted, "the situation will not be corrected by changing the usurpation from the judiciary to the executive." He said he had personally been critical of many of the high court decisions, but did not believe that stop-gap legislation would cure the complaint.

G. W. U. Group Opposed.

Meeting in special session last night the George Washington University Union, student political forum, adopted a resolution opposing President Roosevelt's plan to reorganize the judiciary. The vote was 47 to 35.

The union, whose 101 members are elected from the student body, has been meeting since the opening of the school year to discuss political questions.

Bank Bill Adopted.

By the Associated Press.

The House passed and sent to the White House yesterday a bill to contiue until June 30, 1939, authority for Federal Reserve banks to use direct obligations of the United States as collateral security for Federal Reserve notes. The vote was 270 to 105.

Roll of Senators on Court

N. J. Expects 9 Million From Brisbane Estate

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 24 (AP).—The New Jersey Farm Bureau estimated today this State would collect $9,000,000 inheritance taxes on the Arthur Brisbane estate and that the sum would solve the 1937 relief problem.

Brisbane (noted editor who died recently) voted in New Jersey and there isn't any question but that the State is entitled to the inheritance tax on his estate, estimated at $20,000,000 to $30,000,000, Harry E. Taylor, executive secretary of the farm bureau, said in a statement prepared for a legislative hearing on a proposal to divert highway funds for relief purposes.

Flood Relief $21,417,209.

Killer of Wife Sobs on Stand As He Testifies

Hunter Declares Mind Went Blank When He Shot Pair to Death.

John Francis Hunter, 40-year-old former railroad brakeman, wept on the witness stand in Arlington County Courthouse late yesterday as he described events which led him to shoot to death his wife, Mrs. Ann Delmas Hunter, and Henry E. Corcoran, Veterans Administration attorney, May 7, 1934.

His mind went blank that day in their little home in Virginia Highlands when he killed Mrs. Hunter, mother of his three children, and Corcoran, Hunter said.

Shifting nervously in his chair, the war veteran said he remembered nothing after Corcoran told him his wife belonged to him.

"He said," asserted Hunter, "that he would have her whenever he damned pleased."

Before Corcoran made this remark to him, Hunter testified, his wife admitted she had been untrue to him.

He said he had been on a trip to Linden, Va., the day before the double killing, and when he returned that evening, he found Corcoran and his wife together on the back porch.

Next day, Hunter testified, his wife told him she did not feel well, and had decided not to go to work at the Veterans' Administration, where she was employed.

"I planned to go across the river into Washington and report my wife sick, and then go to see about a job," Hunter said.

He added that he had secured a possible job as a liquor salesman.

Encountered Corcoran.

In a voice that sometimes rose to a high pitch as he toyed with a handkerchief he held in his hands, Hunter said he went to the Veterans' Bureau, and encountered Corcoran in the hall.

"I'll go back across to Virginia with you, and explain why I was there with your wife last night," he quoted Corcoran as saying.

So the two got into the Hunter automobile, the witness said, adding that he bought a pint of whisky.

At the Hunter home the three had a drink, Hunter said. Then they had lunch, and Corcoran avoided the subject of Mrs. Hunter, stating that he was planning to bring his wife and his two daughters up from New Orleans to Virginia to live.

"I begged Corcoran to quit his job—to leave my wife alone," said Hunter.

He then quoted the dead attorney as saying:

"I'll have your wife whenever I damned please."

"When he refused my request," Hunter testified, "I remember nothing. The next thing I remember at all is waking up in Emergency Hospital with my chin and jaw shot away."

During his testimony Hunter said he had known his wife since early youth, and that they were engaged at the time of the World War.

Served in Navy.

But, he asserted, while he was serving in the Navy overseas, Corcoran, also in the service, kept company with his fiancee.

Whenever he mentioned his two small sons and daughter, Hunter wept.

While the defense is stressing the "unwritten law" in its effort to save Hunter from the electric chair, his mother, Mrs. Rosa Hunter, of 330 Madison street northwest, laid the foundation for an insanity plea when she took the stand and said that five of her relatives were under treatment for mental conditions, including her husband.

Dr. O. D. Darden, of Westbrook Sanitarium, took the stand and said he thought Hunter was suffering from a mental disease at the time of the double-murder.

"I don't believe he knew he was committing a crime," the physician said.

None of the Hunter children will be called on to testify. One child, only 4 at the time, was clasped in his mother's arms when his father began shooting. The youngsters now are with their grandmother in Roanoke.

The case probably will go to the jury late today, after both the State and the defense conclude their final arguments.

Maryland School Children Protest Muddy Roads

Youth Enters Plea of Guilty In Sex Murder

Defense Attorney Terms Pennsylvania Crime 'Brutal,' 'Gruesome.'

By the Associated Press.

West Chester, Pa., Feb. 24.—Alexander Meyer, stocky farm youth, pleaded guilty today to the murder of Helen Moyer, 16-year-old Coatesville High School student.

Entering the plea for him, his attorney, J. Paul MacElree, handed Justice of the Peace R. J. Patrick a statement that "I cannot and will not insult the intelligence of our county."

Meyer was held without bail for court in a hearing lasting only a few minutes.

"Murder has been committed—one of the most brutal and gruesome murders of all time," the statement said.

"With the entry of a plea admitting guilt the law has been vindicated. At a proper time the court will fix the punishment. The whole truth has been told, untarnished and shorn of excuse."

Meyer, arrested last Saturday, told police he deliberately ran down the girl with his truck February 11, took her to an abandoned farm, stripped and attacked her, threw her in a well, and dynamited the well.

County authorities interpreted the statement to mean that the defense would seek to place the case before a judge and not a jury, the judge to determine the degree of guilt and fix the penalty.

'Mud' Is Chant of 15 Pupils In Sit-Down for Good Road

Urbana Children Park Selves on Courthouse Steps in Plea to Commissioners; Muddy Highways Block Education.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 24.—Rallying to the slogan of "mud, mud mud," and led by a motorist who was so maddened by the impassable condition of the Thurston-Poole's Bridge road that he dynamited his automobile, 15 Urbana School children staged a sit-down demonstration here.

The failure of Roger Hood Geisbert, the school bus driver, to negotiate the road yesterday precipatated the demonstration after the children waited hours for a ride to school.

The group marched into town, displaying protest placards, sat down on the courthouse steps, left written protests with the county commissioners, and returned home to await developments. Among the adults accompanying them was Lester L. Gregg, who recently blew up his car when it bogged down on the road.

When efforts to free the ancient vehicle failed, Gregg took up a collection from motorists lined up behind him, and dynamited the car out of the mudhole.

On the placards carried by the school children were such phrases as "mud, mud, mud," "We demand decent roads," "give us roads," "me too," said the sign carried by 4-year-old Almetta Dixon. Mrs. Edna Dixon, Almetta's mother, was in the rear of the procession.

The parade was directed by Charles L. White, secretary of the Farm Neighbor League—which some time ago voted to pay no more county taxes until roads in the Urbana section are improved. Hamilton Linthicum, E. E. Lilly, and other Urbana residents were in the line of march.

Members of the group left this note in the county commissioners' office:

'All winter long we can seldom go to church or Sunday school because the roads are too hard on the family car. Will you please try to get our roads fixed so we can get a good education?"

76% of Soldier Bonus Redeemed by Treasury

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury reported yesterday 76 per cent of the soldier's bonus bonds have been redeemed in cash.

As of February 20, it said, $1,799,155,200 of adjusted service bonds have been issued and $81,801,289 paid veterans in odd-amount checks. Of the bond total, $1,368,012,200 worth have been redeemed.

The Treasury said 3,465,466 of the estimated 3,550,000 veterans eligible for the bonus had applied for it on February 20.

N. Y. Senate Approves Week-End Jail Terms

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 24 (AP).—Week-end jail sentences in Rochester as an experiment preliminary to Statewide legislation needed only Gov. Lehman's signature tonight to become legal.

The Senate concurred with the Assembly today in approving the measure, asked by Rochester City Court Judge Jacob Gitelman because "it enables the first offender who might otherwise lose his job to serve time without harm to dependents." The law would permit persons convicted of misdemeanors to serve sentences up to 60 days on week-ends.

Quints' Funds Mount; Trustee Asks to Resign

Ontario Official Reports Guardianship Takes Too Much Time.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—Welfare Minister David A. Croll today introduced a bill in the provincial legislature to permit him to retire as guardian of the Dionne quintuplets and announced the five little sisters now had $543,046.39 invested in gilt-edged bonds.

He also declared: "We hope and expect from now on the parents will assume a larger responsibility, and that as the physical progress of the babies has been such as to permit it, the Dionne family will be reunited."

New Guardian Asked.

Croll's bill would make the Ontario official guardian, Percy D. Wilson, one of the Dionne guardians in place of himself. He would serve with Judge J. A. Valin, of North Bay; Olivia Dionne, the quintuplets' father, and Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, their doctor.

"The quints have become big business," said Croll. "I have virtually had to choose between the guardianship and my work for this government."

Declaring the little sisters' fortune had been swollen more than $500,000 since April, 1935, Croll said it all was in government or government-guaranteed bonds and that there were, in addition, contracts assuring $200,000 a year further income.

Father Now Likes Aid.

Oliva Dionne, he added, now "is one of the keenest advocates of continued government protection and assistance."

He also suggested that, in the future, some part of the Dionne revenue be devoted to child welfare work.

The Dionnes will be 3 years old on May 28.

Callander, Ont., Feb. 24 (AP).—Oliva Dionne in two short sentences tonight confirmed announcement in the Ontario legislature the quintuplets' father is one of "keenest advocates for governmental protection" of his five daughters.

"We appreciate the protection of the government," said the father who has bitterly opposed government guardianship in the past. "We couldn't get along without it."

$10,000 Is Awarded In Traffic Injury

Damages of $10,000 were awarded Numeriano Del Rosario, of 916 Eighth street southeast, in District Court yesterday, with the Nevin Midland Lines, of Washington, Inc., and Leon Alamo, a worker in the Navy Yard, named as defendants.

In the suit, Rosario charged that the bus company and Alamo, in whose car he was riding, were both negligent when their machines collided at New York avenue and Fairmont avenue northeast. Rosario was permanently injured. The jury did not attempt to determine which of the defendants was to be assessed costs of the suit, it was pointed out by Attorneys Dorsey K. Offutt and Eugenio Fonsbuena.

Bingham's Wife, Sons Willed $2,000,000

New London, Conn., Feb. 24 (AP).—The seven sons of former United States Senator Hiram Bingham, and their mother, Mrs. Alfreda Mitchell Bingham, are the chief beneficiaries under the will of Mrs. Bingham's mother, Mrs. Annie O. Mitchell, admitted to probate court today by Judge S. Victor Prince.

The estate is expected to approximate $2,000,000.

Police Evict 107 Squatters In East as Strike Trouble Grows.

ments in all the automotive industry, from parts manufacturing plants to the "Big Three"—General Motors, Chrysler and Ford.

Striker Ranks Swell.

Meanwhile, demands for higher pay and union recognition sent hundreds of recruits into the ranks of the Nation's strikers.

Approximately 25,000 persons were idle in labor disputes at more than 40 industrial and business firms scattered from New England to the Pacific Coast.

Production was curtailed or halted in textile and paper mills, cigar and auto parts factories, laundries, ship yards, steel and iron foundries, and a huge airplane plant.

In a dozen centers the employes participated in "sit-down" demonstrations. Commenting on this strategy, Secretary of Commerce Roper declared:

"Any sit-down strike that undertakes to take over private property is a serious and fundamental thing and in my opinion would not be long endured by the courts."

Police Remove Squatters.

He spoke after Connecticut State police removed 107 of these squatters from the property of the Electric Boat Co., builders of submarines for the Government at Groton. Union leaders, protesting the use of officers as "illegal and unwarranted," formed a picket line.

At Decatur, Ill., 47 sit-down strikers unexpectedly gave up possession of the Century Wall Paper plant late today and appeared in court to answer contempt citations issued by Circuit Judge John Armstrong, of Urbana.

The strikers climbed out plant windows after Sheriff Emery Thornell appeared with a strong force of police and read the citations from outside.

Removal Request Ignored.

Several hundred "sit-downers" ignored the management's request to leave the Douglas Aircraft Co.'s plant and "avoid trouble" at Santa Monica, Calif. The concern's $24,000,000 construction program—including $19,000,000 in Federal contracts—was at a standstill and 5,600 workers were jobless.

Nine hundred persons were thrown out of work at the Illinois Watch Case Co. at Elgin when 600 members of the Jewelry Workers Union sought recognition and a minimum pay scale. The plant was patrolled by the strikers in a test of the "efficacy of a legal picket strike." Organizer Harry F. Gill, of the American Federation of Labor, asserted:

"This is a legal strike. The sit-down strike has been held illegal by several courts."

Pay Hike Halts Strike.

Picketing orders went out, too, along the New England shoe strike front, but the movement dwindled after more than a score of manufacturers agreed to a demand for a 15 per cent pay hike by the United Shoe and Leather Workers Union.

Six strikes in the Detroit area were settled—five of them by wage increase concessions—but a dozen other factories were held by strikers or closed because of controversies.

Two of the main plants of the Northern States Power Co. in Minneapolis and St. Paul were tied up by a walkout instituted by the Electrical Workers Union. More than 400 men were idle in the controversy over recognition and wage adjustments. Company officials announced service would not be interrupted.

Approximately 80 "sit-downers" began their second week in possession of two Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation factories in North Chicago. Gov. Henry Horner strove to end the stalemate without immediate success.

C. I. O. Flooded With Appeals.

At Detroit, John Brophy, a director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, said this group headed by Labor Leader John L. Lewis was receiving more appeals than it could handle to aid the organization of employes of small industrial plants.

In the offing were campaigns to unionize the thousands of men employed in the big steel and oil industries.

Although a wide range of strikes was extant, the number involved was small compared to the 210,000 jobless shortly after the turn of the new year. Since-settled strikes were in effect then among General Motors employes, maritime crews and flat glass craftsmen.

Plane Crash Laid To Fall of Engine

By the Associated Press.

Commerce Department officials expressed the belief yesterday that an engine fell off a big air transport which crashed in San Francisco Bay February 9 with a loss of 11 lives.

J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Commerce Secretary in Charge of Transportation, said it appeared "unmistakable" some structural failure had caused the crash.

He asserted Air Commerce Bureau engineers planned further study of the engine, which he said was found in the bay some distance from where the plane fell.

Chamberlain Asks Pajamas of King For Serving Ruler

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—My Lord Ancaster wanted "His Majesty's night robe" as part of his reward for serving the King at coronation, but he is willing to take the pajamas.

Because, his lawyer admitted in arguing before the court of claims, times do change and this is the twentieth century.

Lord Ancaster, the joint hereditary Lord Great Chamberlain of England, has the traditional privilege of rendering special service to a new sovereign when he is crowned—and the right of claiming something for a souvenir.

The court of claims, which rules on all manner of quaint petitions for coronation services, couldn't decide definitely such an obtuse matter, so it turned it over to King George VI for his personal decision.

Educator Backs Change in Court

New Orleans, Feb. 24 (AP).—George S. Counts of Columbia University Teachers College said today that President Roosevelt was seeking democracy, not dictatorship.

Addressing the department of superintendence of the National Education Association, with 10,000 delegates present, he said:

"The charges of dictatorship which are being hurled at the President today because of his proposals to make the Federal Government efficient and sensitive to the popular will either reflect confusion or are calculated to create confusion.

"The essence of dictatorship is the suspension of all civil liberties and rule by police power. Of this the President has displayed not the slightest trace."

He said the great problem confronting America today was whether the "institutions of political democracy, or government, could rebuild the economic substructure along democratic lines." The issue was forced by concentrated wealth and an industrial aristocracy, he asserted.

Shell Hurts 5 on Ship.

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—The explosion of a Spanish antiaircraft shell square on the quarterdeck of the British battleship Royal Oak injured four officers and a seaman and, tonight, aroused some concern lest other such "incidents" mar a six-power neutrality patrol of the Iberian Peninsula.

The admiralty disclosed today that the shell, fired from a Spanish government antiaircraft gun during yesterday's insurgent air bombardment of the Port of Valencia, had slightly injured Capt. T. B. Drew of the Royal Oak and four other members of the crew.

Official spokesmen said the affair would not be protested, terming it an "act of God."

U. S. Won't Prosecute.

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Acting United States Attorney John A. Dailey announced today there will be no Federal grand jury investigation here into recruiting of war volunteers for service in Spain.

Dailey said the decision was made after a conference in Washington yesterday with heads of the State and Justice Departments, during which the situation of Samuel A. Shacter, New York attorney, was discussed.

"We reached the conclusion, based on facts in my possession," Dailey said, "that no law had been violated by Shacter or by any other persons who might have been engaged in the obtaining of the services of men for war service in Spain."

Dailey, likewise, said there would be "no investigation or prosecution" of Bert Acosta, Eddie Schneider and other aviators Schacter assisted when they went to Spain to fly for the loyalist government.

The principal reason for the Government's hands-off decision, Dailey said, is the loosely-worded, 100-year-old statute which makes it a crime to solicit and retain persons to volunteer for service in foreign armies. He said he felt no successful prosecutions could be obtained under the ancient law.

RA Investigation Begun by Wallace

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace said yesterday "a routine inquiry" is being made into housing activities of the Resettlement Administration.

The New Deal agency, set up under Rexford G. Tugwell, was transferred to the Agriculture Department under Wallace at the beginning of the year.

The Secretary expressed surprise at statements of Administration leaders in Congress that an investigation of the agency asked by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, had been delayed pending an inquiry by Wallace.

"We are doing our best to increase its efficiency," Wallace told a press conference. "I am making a continuing inquiry into its activities. But the word 'inquiry' can often be misunderstood."

Gila Monster Bites Affectionate Woman

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Lilly Holderness attempted to kiss a Gila Monster—that's why she's in a hospital tonight. She said she sold the reptile to a Californian who held it aloft and suggested Mrs. Holderness "kiss her pet good-by."

As she bent her head toward the "pet" the Gila Monster clamped its teeth in her cheek and held on until its jaws were forced open with pliers.

THE BICARBONATE OF SODA HABIT
If You Have Stomach Trouble Due to Excess Acid Soda May Make It Worse

Bicarbonate of Soda is a wolf in sheep's clothing. You think it's helping you—and it does for the moment. But all the while it is making matters worse.

Bicarbonate neutralizes the excess acid that causes heartburn, sour stomach, belching, sourness, bloating, acid indigestion. THEN it starts neutralizing the NORMAL acid content of the stomach. This normal acid content is essential for good digestion. If it's knocked out of balance—made alkaline—your stomach is knocked out, too.

So lay off Bicarbonate. There's a better, safer way to stomach relief—Cal-Trate Tablets. They neutralize ONLY the EXCESS acid that causes the trouble. Then they harmlessly pass out of the system. Be sure you ask for and get Cal-Trate Tablets—they contain no Bicarbonate of Soda and are not a laxative. Sold and recommended by Peoples, and all good druggists. (Adv.)

U. S. May Make Steel for Navy; DeadlockHolds

Reopening of W. Va. Plant Studied; Private Bid Hopes Dimmed.

By William V. Nessly.

Government production of the steel needed in its naval building program, likely to be expanded in view of the new British construction plans, appeared more of a possibility yesterday as new hopes that private steel concerns would submit belated bids to supply the Navy ware dashed.

There were these developments in the situation, nearing the critical stage, which has arisen from steel companies' failure to submit bids on Navy steel because of the requirement that they observe the 40-hour week while on Government work:

Secretary of the Navy Swanson revealed he has ordered studies of possible reopening of the $22,000,000 Government projectile and armor plate plant at South Charleston, W. Va.

Secretary of Commerce Roper said "it would be more likely to look for Government production of steel" than for removal of the tariff on steel, as was suggested by Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady said the effort to have steel plants work on their regular schedule by paying overtime to men engaged on Government work, in excess of the 40-hour limit, had collapsed.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was awaiting return to the city of Attorney General Cummings so he might take up with the Justice Department "impressions" of collusion among steel producers failing to bid on Navy work.

"Reasonable Hours" Cited.

Saying he always had thought the steel companies were "too apprehensive" over effects of the Walsh-Healey act, which provides the 40-hour week for Government contractors, Secretary Swanson said "it simply gives reasonable hours and reasonable wages."

Recalling that the Navy building program was based on determination to have a Navy second to none by 1941, the Secretary said there had been no change in the program.

"But," he added, "other nations, by their rapid increase and acceleration of building, might make that change."

He said the Government was awaiting official confirmation of the new $7,500,000,000 British defense program. Seven United States battleships will be over-age by 1941 and the Vinson-Trammel bill, he said, authorizes replacement of over-age battleships.

Britain Plans Three Warships.

Britain laid the keels of two new battleships January 1, and President Roosevelt soon after announced this country would construct two. The new British program calls for three more battleships and numerous smaller craft.

Secretary Swanson recalled the Charleston plant was authorized in 1913 and, starting in 1918, made about $4,000,000 worth of guns and projectiles. It was abandoned after signing of the 1920 Washington naval limitation treaty. One year would be required to get it in operation again for making projectiles, the Secretary estimated, and three years for full operation, including production of armor plate.

Secretary Roper pointed out that use by the government of patented processes for steel making would be "an important problem."

New Complication.

Meanwhile, a new blow was delivered at the hopes that steel companies yet would submit bids to supply the Navy and end the impasse. On Tuesday, Miss Perkins had expressed the hope bids would be received "within 48 hours," saying it had been explained to manufactureres they might operate crews beyond the 40-hour limit by paying time and one-half for overtime.

Yesterday, however, Assistant Secretary McGrady said manufacturers had replied to the suggestion by pointing out it would be impracticable to be paying part of their employes time and a half and the remainder straight time on weekly shifts of the same length, 48 hours.

They pointed out that Navy orders come in such small lots it would be impossible to keep an entire plant busy on them, and that consequently only a portion of the employes of a plant could be employed on Government work, at the higher pay for a week of the same length as was observed by other workers.

To Split Up Work.

McGrady, in whose hands much of the negotiating on the bid deadlock has been left, said efforts were being made now to induce different mills to take different types of the work involved in Navy contracts, one to take angle work, another flat work and still another armor production.

Green, Labor Federation head, made it plain yesterday he will press labor's charge there is collusion among steel companies in the protracted failure to submit bids to the Navy.

Soviet Icebreaker Sank, Says Note; Second Is Missing

Moscow, Feb. 24 (AP).—The mystery of the disappearance of the Hussian icebreaker Shaumian in the Caspian Sea last year was believed cleared up today just as another similar disaster was reported in the Black Sea.

Fishermen along the Caspian's shores found a bottle containing what purported to be a note from the Shaumian's crew, which said:

"We are dying. Heavy seas have torn the rudder loose and the ship is full of water and sinking. We have lost our bearings and given up hope."

The Shaumian was lost February 16, 1936, the note said.

Hope was virtually abandoned for the crew of 36 men aboard the icebreaker Semyorka, which foundered in the Black Sea Sunday.

Wage-Hour Study Report Submitted

By the Associated Press.

Three Government officials and one former Administration aide reported to the White House late yesterday on progress of studies they are making for President Roosevelt on wage and hour legislation.

The group was made up of Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General; John G. Winant, who recently resigned as chairman of the Social Security Board; Benjamin V. Cohen, of the Public Works Administration, and Thomas G. Corcoran, Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The latter two are advisers to the President on new legislation.

The report was made to James Roosevelt, the President's son and secretary. He will co-ordinate the data before turning it over to his father.

White House officials would not say what particular phases of wage and hour legislation the group has been working on. They said it would be sometime before any proposal is ready for submission to Congress.

Eastern Star Dedicates New Capital Shrine

Mrs. Frances Haun Declares 'Temple Realizes Long Cherished Dream.'

Filled to capacity by 1,200 Eastern Star members, Perry Belmont's old home, New Hampshire and Eighteenth street northwest, once occupied by the visiting Prince of Wales, was dedicated last night as the organization's newest shrine.

The building, purchased in November, 1934, and since then under repair, was accepted for the order by Mrs. Frances Haun, most worthy grand matron of the General Grant Chapter. Saying the "temple is the realization of a long cherished dream," Mrs. Haun said she hoped it would be a means and "a place for advancing human happiness."

Taking as the text for the latter part of her acceptance speech the symbolic star which hangs over the main entrance to the shrine, Mrs. Haun pointed to its colors, blue for fidelity, yellow for patience and constancy, white for purity and loyalty, green for faith and red for love. She hoped those virtues would always be present in this new temple.

Attendance Large.

So large was the crowd listening to Mrs. Haun that most of them, seated in downstairs rooms, a floor away from the dais, could not see her. Her voice was carried to them by amplifiers.

After the call to order and welcome, Toastmaster Paul B. Cromelin, most worshipful grand master of Masons, Distric of Columbia, sitting in the old art gallery behind a dais banked with flowers, introduced the guests from out of town; Right Worthy Associate Grand Master Sister Anna W. Smalley, of Montana; Ella Morriss Mount, worthy grand matron of Kenucky, and Most Worshipful Brother Neale Rutland, grand master of Masons in Tennessee.

Perry Belmont, from whom the shrine was purchased, a member of Holland Lodge in New York, also was introduced.

Symbolic Ceremony.

As part of the acceptance ceremoney, cups of corn, wine and oil, symbolic of nourishment, refreshment and joy, were presented to the temple. In this presenation, William A. Duvall, who had charge of repairing the temple; Grand Master Cromelin, Harry B. Wright, most worshipful grand master of Maryland Masons, and Grand Master Rutland took part. Invocation was asked by Most Worhy Grand Patron Duvall.

Other events on the program were an opening organ prelude by Theodore C. Lewis, a quartet, Mrs. Selma S. Klein, Mrs. Leonor Ebert Reed, George A. Myers and Harry M. Furker, singing "The Lord Is in His Holy Temple" and "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings," reading of the dedication honor roll by Minnie E. Keyes, most worthy grand matron, and an informal reception held in the old state dining room after the assembly had been sung, "Blest Be the Ties That Bind."

War-Torn Spain To Be Described

Conditions in Spain, where 45,000 children are in need, will be described here Sunday by Sylvester Jones, just returned from that war-torn country, in an address at the Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida avenue.

Jones investigated Spanish conditions on behalf of the American Friends Service committee. The Quakers, in co-operation with the Mennonites and the Church of the Brethren, are planning relief work for Spanish children and mothers.

Of the 45,000 children in need, Jones estimates that 15,000 refugee minors of the Loyalist persuasion are suffering and that the rebels already are caring for 30,000 orphans. The Washington meeting Sunday is under auspices of the Friends Peace Committee.

Move for Green Ouster Faces Lengthy Delays

Coshocton, Ohio, Feb. 24 (AP).—Union leaders predicted today possible protracted appeal maneuvers in the United Mine Workers order for expulsion of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Green holds his mine union membership in the Morgan Run local, which he joined at its inception here in 1890. He was ordered expelled on the grounds that he criticized actions of John L. Lewis in the Detroit automobile strike. Lewis, bitter rival of Green, is president of the mine workers.

Millionth Air Customer Gets Flight to Europe

A trip to Europe on the dirigible Hindenburg, an award of $1,000 and a gold medal are being given the 1,000,000th passenger on American Airlines, H. D. Ford, Washington representative of the company, announced last night. The millionth passenger, company records have just determined, is Theodore C. Baker, of Brookline, Mass. He made his flight last Thursday.

At the same time, air trips to Hawaii and prizes of $500 each are being given to the airline's first 999,999th and 1,000,001th passengers. Their names shortly will be made public.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. (Adv.)

Former Owner Sees Home Dedicated as O. E. S. Shrine

D. C. Petroleum Group Sketches Gas Tax History

The District of Columbia Petroleum Association yesterday took a historical bent and sketched the gasoline tax idea from its inception in 1919. Today is the eighteenth anniversary of the first tax levy of this kind.

The association pointed out that from a humble beginning of $1,022,514 in the first year, gasoline taxes now bring the Federal Government, States and other political subdivisions a total of $875,000,000 yearly.

Since the first operation of the tax in Oregon the total cost of taxes to motorists was estimated at $6,200,000,000, which the association reported, represents $772,658,000 in "duplicating Federal gasoline taxes."

Conclusions of the association were: "That gasoline should be taxed only by the States. Second, that State tax rates should be reasonable, revenues fully collected, and tax laws rigidly enforced. Third, that revenues should be used exclusively for highway financing. Fourth, that revenue from gasoline taxes is a yardstick wherewith to measure how much money should be spent upon each mile of road. Fifth, that highway development should be based upon a long-term planned highway program prepared only after an exhaustive and scientific survey of highway needs."

Government May Take Hot Springs Supervision

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 24 (AP).—Authoritative State House sources said today a bill to enlarge the Hot Springs National Park area to include the City of Hot Springs and cede criminal jurisdiction in the city to the Federal Government probably would be introduced in the present Legislature.

A special legislative investigating committee last week asked impeachment proceedings against the Hot Springs circuit judge and special grand jury investigation of local officials on charges of laxity in law enforcement. The House voted to drop the investigation.

Flaming Kerosene Spray Burns Man On Home Project

Badly burned while tending a temporary kerosene burner in one of the "model" homes at Greenbelt, Resettlement Administration's project at Berwyn, Md., Charles Gracey, 36, of Baltimore, was in serious condition in Casualty Hospital last night.

Gracey, a laborer, suffered first, second and third-degree burns when the fuel line broke, spraying him with flaming kerosene.

John Safar, a carpenter on the project, extinguished the flames by pushing the laborer into a mud puddle.

After receiving first aid at the Greenbelt dispensary, Gracey was taken to the hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad.

Motorcyclist Badly Injured In Collision

Maryland Youth Fractures His Skull in Crash on Capital Street.

Concussion of the brain, a possible skull fracture and severe cuts and bruises were suffered yesterday by John G. Shebby, 21, of 23 H street northwest, when his motorcycle collided with a truck at Second and H streets northwest.

At Casualty Hospital, where Shebby was taken after the accident, physicians said his condition was critical.

Lawrence Caldwell, 19, of Mount Rainier, Md., a passenger in a tobacco truck, suffered a fractured skull and cuts and bruises yesterday when the driver of the vehicle, Stanley Werming, of Vienna, Va., swerved to avoid a collision and crashed into a tree at First and Q streets northwest.

He was treated at Homeopathic Hospital, where physicians said his condition was serious.

Mrs. Rosie Reeder, 50, of Riverdale, Md., was hurt internally yesterday when she was struck by an automobile as she crossed the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near Hyattsville. She was taken to Sibley Hospital. Nathan J. Bell, 18, of the 1400 block of Meridian place northwest, is being held pending outcome of the woman's injuries.

A coroner's jury today will review the facts of the death of Mrs. Sophia M. Glezos, 48, of 3555 Georgia avenue, who succumbed Sunday after being struck by an automobile in front of her home. Thomas O'Connor, 28, of the 600 block of Seventh street northeast, said by police to have been the driver of the car, will appear at the inquest.

Jewish Dates Planned On Methodist Calendar

San Francisco, Feb. 24 (AP).— Dr. Edgar Allen Lowther, pastor, announced today Temple M. E. Church henceforth would publish all Jewish holidays in the official calendar.

"It is hoped the General Methodist Conference will approve the recognition * * *" he said, "and that Methodist churches throughout the Nation will adopt this method of 'taking the first step' to bring Jews and Christians closer together."

Woodring Kin Dies.

Virginia Physiology Professor To Study Animals in Panama

Dr. Sydney W. Britton Will Head 3-Man Expedition Into Central American Jungles for Gland Experiments.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 24.—Dr. Sydney W. Britton, professor of physiology in the University of Virginia, will head a three-man expedition that will go to Panama next week for a two-month study of wild animals of the Central American jungles.

Dr. Britton, accompanied by the curator of the expedition, William Atkinson, who has been associated with the laboratories here for several months in an honorary capacity, and by Raymond F. Kline, research assistant, will sail from New York Tuesday on the U. S. transport Chateau-Thierry.

Two months will be spent at the Barro Colorado Laboratory, maintained on an island in Gatun Lake by Harvard University, the National Research Council and other scientific organizations.

The physiological studies carried on by scientists from the university will be similar to those that have been conducted here, but instead of using rats, mice, guinea pigs, ground hogs and raccoons, the native animals of Albermarle County, use will be made of sloths, bats, armadillos, anteaters, peccaries, porcupines and monkeys.

Investigations will be made of the relations of salt, sugar and water in the body and of their regulation by the adrenal glands and the kidneys. Studies of body temperatures will be made in some primitive mammals as well as in some of the subhuman types.

Dr. Britton hopes to be able to bring some of these animals back alive in order that they may be observed over long periods in the laboratories of the medical school here. The expedition will get back to the United States in midspring, it is expected, which will make it possible for the tropical animals to become acclimated.

While he is in the Canal Zone, Dr. Britton has been invited to speak before the Panama Canal Natural History Society.

Zionists Will Meet In Capital Sunday

Plans to strengthen Zionist youth organizations throughout the Southeast Atlantic seaboard will be considered at a meeting of representatives from all parts of the region Sunday at the Willard Hotel.

At the same time, the Seaboard Zionist Regional Council will meet to discuss Zionist problems. A joint luncheon of the two groups will be held at 1 p. m. at the hotel.

The Washington committee on arrangements for the conference includes Mrs. John M. Safer, Nathan Karp, Morriss Klass, Abe Savage, Hy Lytton, Hyman Chozick, G. W. Herzenberg, Sophie Baynard, Charlotte Turke, Shimon Q. Janus, Sol Alpher, Seymour Guthman, Mrs. Morton Steinburg, Ben Ellman, Miriam Wydra, Myrtle Kaminsky, Rebecca Rosenbloom, Judith Freilicoff and Mrs. M. R. Bernstein.

Rep. Cannon Asks Bar Investigation

By the Associated Press.

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Wisconsin, demanded yesterday that the House investigate the American Bar Association. He charged the association was a "band of rapacious corporation-controlled lawyers" that had "impeded the Government," and criticized Frederick H. Stinchfield, of Minneapolis, Bar Association president, on grounds he had influenced the Texas Senate to protest against President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan.

Denies Accusation.

Minneapolis, Feb. 24 (AP).—Frederick H. Stinchfield, president of the American Bar Association, denied today he had influenced the Texas Legislature against President Roosevelt's Supreme Court proposal.

NEW YORK SPORTS EDITOR: "I was under the impression that I was money to the good by staying with the same make of car," says Fred Keats, handicapper, N. Y. Mirror. "When I saw this new 1937 Dodge, I decided to switch. It's the smartest car buy I ever made. Why, I'm getting 20 miles to the gallon!"
HOLLYWOOD HOUSEWIFE: "Because Dodge is giving us 7 more miles to the gallon than we got from our old, small car, our car budget will show a saving of $75 this year." —Juanita Brown, Hollywood, Cal.
CHICAGO BUSINESS MAN: "I found that Dodge delivered for less than any car, with the exception of those in the lowest-priced group," says George H. Luehrman, Chicago. In other words, for but a little more, I could own a big, new Dodge!"
ST. LOUIS SALESMAN: "I need a car that's a miser for gas as well as one that's comfortable to ride in," says Eugene H. Gidionsen, St. Louis. "There's the reason I switched to Dodge. I get 19½ miles to the gallon and the longest day's driving doesn't tire me out."

People Everywhere report SAVING MONEY BY SWITCHING TO DODGE!

They Say They're Getting 18 to 24 Miles to the Gallon of Gas... Using Up to 20% Less Oil!...and Saving in Many Other Ways!

FROM Maine to California thousands of motorists who had formerly owned smaller cars are today driving the big, new Dodge! They unhesitatingly say that switching to Dodge saved them money from the very start... that this bigger, roomier, more luxurious car is so easy on gasoline and oil that anyone who can afford a small car can easily afford the big, money-saving Dodge!

Think of it! Owners everywhere report 18 to 24 miles to the gallon of gasoline, saving up to 20% on oil, with additional savings on tires, general lubrication and upkeep!

Think, too, of the great combination of extra-value features that this big, new Dodge gives you... New "windstream" styling!... New "high-safety" interiors!... New Chair-Height seats!... Low, level floor!... New "Silenced Ride!"... Even stronger safety all-steel body... Genuine hydraulic brakes, the world's finest brakes!

Yet, these are just a few of the advantages Dodge gives you for just a few dollars more than the lowest-priced cars! See and drive this greatest money-saving Dodge of them all!

Montgomery Is Facing Loss Of Relief Grant

County Omitted From List Sent to Legislature by State Board.

Threatened loss of relief allotments for the ensuing year stirred Montgomery County Commissioners and other officials in Rockville yesterday when it was disclosed that the county was not included in the list of those in line for allotments which was sent to the General Assembly by the Board of State Aids and Charities.

The county's relief allotment last year amounted to $35,700 and the needs for general public assistance for the current fiscal year have been estimated at $30,000. About 250 families are on the relief roll.

P. Ray Souder, supervisor of county aid, who administers public assistance funds, declined to comment on the situation beyond expressing concern at the possibility of the money being withheld from the county.

One explanation for omission of the county from the list was that no estimate of the needs of the county was filed with the State board. Souder said he made no estimate because he had not been required to do so last year and had not been told it was necessary.

Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary of the county welfare board, said her agency had not presented the estimate because it no longer administers public assistance, pointing out that the county is one of four in the State where the welfare board does not handle the money used for this type of relief.

She said in view of this fact the routine request of the State board for an estimate of future needs had been turned over to Souder this year. Later she said at his request she had drawn up an estimate for next year which approximated $30,000, and had forwarded it to the State board.

Frank H. Karn, president of the board of county commissioners, promised an effort to get the county put back on the list. "If we have been left off," he said, "we'll have to take some measures to get back on before the appropriation is made or else try to have a special appropriation made."

Dickinson Improving.

By the Associated Press.

Hospital attendants said the condition of former Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, was "quite satisfactory" yesterday after a second abdominal operation. Dr. W. A. Bloedorn performed the operation at George Washington Hospital. Dickinson underwent the first operation about two weeks ago.

Pope Reported Very Sick.

Rome, Feb. 24 (AP).—Pope Pius, still a very sick man, lay for several hours in the sunshine of his Vatican loggia today—too weak to receive the new Minister from El Salvador, Raoul Contreras. A semiofficial report said his condition was unchanged. But it was known that the ulcers on his legs again were troubling him, and that he sleeps with difficulty.

Bazooka Practice Takes Place of Basketball

These five young men from the Christ Child Society are prepping between basketball workouts for the March 6 bazooka contest. They are (right to left), Henry Ragsdale, James Brady, Allen Loube, Bill Work and Addy Bassen.

Athletes Also Start Training For The Post Bazooka Contest

From basketball to bazookas!

That is what is happening at the Christ Child Society these days as the young athletes prep for the big Bob Burns-Washington Post bazooka contest March 6.

Of course, basketball goes on just as usual but the big list of prizes in the contest is enough to capture the interest of any basketball star and to make bazooka playing activity in his spare time.

The boys above are applying themselves seriously to bazooka practice. When this picture was made by The Post photographer, the bazookas were being used for the first time. As a result it has not been determined whether this combination of five will be entered as a quintet or as the nucleus of a bazooka band.

Several boys and girls have telephoned The Post to ask how long each number should be. In order that every contestant may be heard the Saturday morning of the contest, it is suggested that each entry—whether a duo, trio or entire band—limit the number to two or three minutes.

In a few days an official entry will be printed in The Post. Watch for it, clip and mail or bring it to The Post.

And in the meantime, keep everlastingly practicing; work out some unusual and catchy effects on your bazooka. Watch The Post for daily details.

Youth, 2 Women Hunted In Fredericksburg Theft

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 24 (AP).—Police sought today a young man about 25 years old and two women accomplices for the robbery of three apartments in the Wakefield Building of jewels and money valued at $3,000.

Officers said they learned the apartments were ransacked yesterday while the women reportedly kept watch outside. They expressed the opinion the thefts were executed by "professionals."

Frederick County Pastor Called to West Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 24.—The Rev. Allen Jones, pastor of the Opequon group of Presbyterian Churches in Frederick County which includes historic Opequon Memorial, has received a call from the Presbyterian Church of Moorefield, W. Va., it was learned today.

Ratification Asked.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt submitted to the Senate for ratification yesterday a fisheries convention between the United States and Canada.

Control of ChickenSex Is Developed in Japan

Tokyo, Feb. 24 (AP).—Professor Kiyozumi Ninomiya announced tonight he can guarantee to produce a female chicken from any hen's egg.

He has had 100 per cent success in this line by injecting a female hormone into the egg, he said. An injection costs about two sen (slightly more than half a cent) per egg.

The announcement created a sensation in poultry and scientific circles. The professor teaches at the agricultural school at Setomachi, in Okayama prefecture.

Mrs. John Garner Stricken at Home

Mrs. John Nance Garner is ill, suffering from a severe attack of indigestion which will keep her confined to her apartment for several days, Vice President Garner revealed yesterday.

"She suffered the attack yesterday—the second one in her whole life—and is still pretty sick, but she is getting along all right today," Garner said. "She ought to be out and about in three or four days."

Dr. George Calver, Navy physician assigned to the Capitol, is treating Mrs. Garner, the Vice President said. Dr. Calver has ordered Mrs. Garner to remain in her apartment for several days.

Rescue Squad At Clarendon Loses Its Car

'Sit-Down Strikers' Find Ambulance Taken for Repairs.

The alleged sit-down strike of the Clarendon Rescue Squad following order of County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan that all calls for the ambulance be handled by the sheriff took a new turn yesterday when the ambulance was removed from the Clarendon fire house to the county property yard.

Hanrahan stated that the ambulance was removed following receipt of a letter from Maynard Saunders, captain of the rescue squad, requesting that the ambulance be moved from firehouse on or before February 28. The county manager said he then issued orders to Joseph Meadows, superintendent of the county property yard, to move the machine to the county shops, and give it a thorough overhauling.

When asked to comment on his action, Hanrahan stated that he had nothing to say except that he hoped the matter would work itself out in a satisfactory manner.

Merchants Assail Gas Tax Increase

Going on record as opposing the bill to raise the gasoline tax from two cents to four cents a gallon, the board of governors of the Merchant and Manufacturers Association at its annual meeting yesterday declared the present rate is sufficient to maintain District roads.

The association also opposes the Mapes auto weight bill, which would tax passenger automobiles at the rate of $1 to $1.25 per 100 pounds.

Ford E. Young was re-elected president of the association. Other officers elected were Arthur E. Sundlun, first vice president; John J. Hasley, second vice president; Bert L. Olmstead, third vice president; Louis Levay, treasurer; Edward D. Shaw, secretary, and Ringgold Hart, general counsel.

At the close of its session the association passed a resolution of sympathy in the death of Charles Schwartz, local jeweler, who died February 16 at Miama Beach.

New Cabinet Formed.

Caracas, Venezuela, Feb. 24 (AP).—President Eleazor Lopez Contreras formed a new cabinet today, including only four ministers who were not members of the government which resigned Monday.

"Pauper" Leaves $50,000.

Chicago, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—When Arnold Bell, 69, was ill in his hall bedroom, he was asked why he did not call a doctor. He said he couldn't afford it. Today, after his death, police found $50,000 in negotiable bonds and mortgages stuffed into the crevices in the room.

News Is Broadcast In Halls of College

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP).—Florida Southern College henceforth will have a campus crier to give a brief broadcast of news of the world each morning while students are changing classes.

Insisting that college students devote too little time to newspaper reading, President Ludd M. Spivey said he hoped the broadcasts would stimulate greater interest in current events. Warren Willis, Tampa, Fla., junior, will relate the news through a megaphone. Journalism students will take turns at writing the news digests.

Screams Rout Thief With $3,000 Gems

Stepping out of her room for a moment late last night, Miss Josephine Scholl, 130 B street northeast, returned to find a tall slim colored man had invaded her apartment.

Frightened, she screamed, and the colored man broke a window and fled down the fire escape.

Suffering from shock, Miss Scholl was taken to a hospital for treatment.

Miss Scholl is assistant secretary to Senator F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin. Coming from the Senator's home town, Fond du Lac, Wis., she has been employed by him for a number of years.

Upon examination, she found jewelry valued at $3,000 had been taken.

Missing were one platinum ring set with pearls, one gold ring set with diamonds, one platinum and gold brooch set with 40 small diamonds, a pair of ebony earrings set with pearls, and a number of gold bracelets.

Offer to 'Fix' Summons Was Move to 'Get a Date'

Philadelphia, Feb. 24 (AP).—Twelve men decided today that Peter Pawlicha, 27, could offer to "fix" a traffic summons for pretty Ruth Frances Simon, 20, to get acquainted with her, and that it wasn't necessarily obstructing justice.

Pawlicha testified he offered to fix the summons when Miss Simon was stopped by a park guard. The guard arrested him. Pawlicha said he had no intention of fixing the summons, but made the offer merely to get acquainted "and get a date."

In No Way Coercive.

Having passed the House, and having been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee, the bill providing full-pay retirement pensions for Supreme Court Justices 70 years of age and over will undoubtedly be speeded to passage. This bill, first introduced by Representative Sumners about two years ago, merely extends to members of the highest court retirement privileges long enjoyed by judges of the lower Federal courts.

At present, members of the Supreme Court may resign and, following established practice, draw full pay. They forfeit their status as judges, however, and Congress may reduce or even eliminate their salaries if it so chooses. Under the proposed law the retiring judge would still be subject to call for certain specified services and his salary would as a result be fully protected.

Except for the "unfortunate coincidence" that this pension bill was brought up immediately following receipt of the President's message calling for reconstitution of the Supreme Court, the essential desirability of the proposed reform would be universally conceded. There is no reason to suppose that passage of the measure would further the plan to pack the court. Retirement would necessarily be entirely voluntary, ince the Constitution provides that the judges' tenure of office is for life.

It would, however, be an insult to the present justices to assume that any of them could be lured into retirement, while under Administration fire, by the bait of full-pay pensions. Probably not one of those over 70 remains on the bench because of the salary attaching to his office. And if salary were a major consideration, the justices are already for all practical purposes fully protected against loss of income in the event of resignation.

About all that the proposed reform does, therefore, is to systematize and insure pension arrangements and make it somewhat easier for a member of the Supreme Court to surrender his duties when he is ready to do so. While the proposal to pack the court remains undecided the retirement plan is not likely to have any effect in causing vacancies on the bench. Indeed, it is unfortunately more apt to have an inhibiting effect upon judges who might be contemplating a well-earned rest if fully persuaded that no ulterior purpose lies behind the emphasis on the retirement plan at this particular juncture.

Under present conditions, it is difficult for anyone to view this desirable, although relatively minor, judicial reform with complete objectivity. Nevertheless it should be adopted, since it is a reasonable, completely noncoercive measure which is in fact entirely separable from the proposals that threaten the independence of the judiciary. In face of that major threat the older members of the Supreme Court can be counted upon to follow the course of conduct that seems to them in the public interest, regardless of their pensionable status if or when they decide to quit the bench.

Far From Pacified.

The recent bombing episode at Addis Ababa and its bloody sequel indicate that all is not well in Italy's newly-acquired empire. Repeatedly, during recent months, statements from Rome have asserted that Ethiopia is quiescent and even happy under Italian rule. Such assertions now sound rather hollow.

The Italians themselves admit that at least 3,000 natives participated in an attempt to recapture Addis Ababa coincident with the effort to assassinate Marshal Graziani. And it is also significant that the military command, as a retaliatory measure, has felt it necessary to execute hundreds of natives suspected of harboring concealed weapons. Such wholesale massacres are a sign of uneasiness on the part of the conquerors. They also throw a sardonic light on the nature of Italy's "civilizing" activities in the land once ruled by Haile Selassie.

As others before her, Italy is discovering that victory in the field is merely the prelude, not the final act, in the process of subjugating a backward people. At a time when national finances are none too prosperous a large army of occupation must continue on the alert in Ethiopia. The idyllic picture of swords being beaten into plowshares by happy Italian colonists is far from fulfillment.

Some day, perhaps, the alleged wealth of Ethiopia may repay Italy for the blood and treasure spent in the conquest of the East African kingdom. That day is not yet. The subjugated kingdom continues to be a drain on the Italian exchequer and a chronic cause of alarm. The bombing episode at Addis Ababa cannot be dismissed, as the Italian press at first attempted, as an "episode of common criminality."

Labor And The Roads.

The principle of collective bargaining has become firmly established in the railroad field. Prolonged and costly battles such as that waged between General Motors and its employes over the question of union representation no longer arise, because the workers are strongly organized. The representative character of those who are selected by the employes to negotiate for them is assured and consequently there are no obstacles to speedy consideration of the wage increases and the employment guarantees which the rail unions are now demanding.

Of course this system of collective bargaining was not built up in a day. It is the result of many years of patient effort, the product of experience sometimes dearly bought. Prior to the World War only the train and engine service employes were strongly organized. And not until 1934 did certain carriers abandon opposition to recognition of unions outside the powerful brotherhoods.

Under amendments to the Railway Labor act passed in that year, a National Mediation Board was set up, empowered not only to mediate like its predecessors but to protect the employes' right to select representatives without interference from management. If the board fails in its mediation efforts it may offer to arbitrate the dispute. If the parties refuse to accept its offer, and a serious interruption of transportation is threatened, the President may then appoint a special emergency board to investigate and report the result of its inquiries. Until 30 days after that report has been made, the status quo must be maintained. In other words, there must be neither strikes nor lockouts.

This elaborate machinery for mediation, arbitration and investigation puts no direct compulsion upon labor and management to settle their differences peaceably. But it does result in postponement of hasty action pending a thorough discussion of the controversial issues. As a last resort it brings the pressure of public opinion to bear by calling for an impartial inquiry. As the National Mediation Board states, however, "there must be a desire to maintain peace, if industrial warfare is to be avoided."

The strength of that desire will no doubt be severely tested by the present union demands, which would add an estimated $360,000,000 to the carriers' annual wage bill.

While the roads have made a rapid recovery during the past year their gross earnings are still far below the level of 1929 or even 1930. Despite a rise of over 30 per cent in 1936, net earnings were less than two-thirds as large as in 1929 and about $240,000,000 below the level of 1930. With about 40 per cent of the country's railway mileage last year unable to cover fixed charges, and with the roads confronted by a heavy loss of revenue from the dropping of emergency freight surcharges, the industry does not yet seem in a condition to shoulder any large additions to operating costs.

Commissioner Eastman pointed out upon many occasions, while he was acting as coordinator, that employes and management must co-operate to preserve the railway industry against competitive inroads from other transportation agencies. Helpful cooperation calls not only for acquiescence in plans for reducing operating costs but also for moderation in wage demands. Otherwise, the roads will be thrust back into the depression from which they have been belatedly emerging.

During the negotiations between the roads and the representatives of their employes, all these arguments will doubtless be threshed out. The outcome of the conferences will provide a major test of the value of a well-established system of collective bargaining as a means of preventing industrial conflict and as a method of reaching an equitable settlement of demands for wage increases.

Slums In The Making.

Interest in the housing problem is naturally centered on large-scale production of new buildings at reasonable cost. Because of the acute shortage of decent dwellings available to low-income families, many cities, States and even the Federal Government have undertaken the clearance of slums and the erection of new housing units. While this admirable objective is being pursued, however, many of the conditions which led to the creation of slums in the first place remain uncorrected.

New York is now confronting an amazing illustration of lax building supervision. Shocking disclosures accompany the trial of six men for second-degree manslaughter in connection with the collapse of a seven-story apartment while still under construction. In this disaster, last June, 18 persons were killed. The frame-work, it now develops, was fabricated and erected with old steel by a company which evidently cared nothing about the safety factor. There was no technical supervision of the building, and the city's building inspectors, two of whom are on trial, appear to have been grossly negligent in enforcing the law.

An official of the offending company has admitted that it was his sole duty to arrange and fulfill contracts so as to obtain the greatest possible net profits, with no regard for safe construction. Since he has been contracting similar jobs for 10 years it is a fair inference that a number of dwellings now filled with tenants are constructed of rotten steel, weak cement and brick of "very poor quality."

It is futile to spend public funds for slum reclamation so long as the erection of such sub-standard dwellings is permitted to continue. With a reasonable housing code, and strict building regulations, slums can be gradually eliminated without cost to the taxpayer as they fall below the minimum standards. That process is too slow to meet modern demands for good housing. The desirability of wiping out blighted areas by an organized community effort is now generally recognized. But all the achievements of slum reclamation will be counter-balanced if flagrant jerry-building is permitted to continue unchecked.

This illustration from New York sharpens the advice of the local housing committee of the American Association of Social Workers. They urge that Federal aid should be extended to housing agencies only in those communities where desirable minimum standards for all dwellings are not merely set up but are rigidly enforced.

Divided We Fall.

As the District Commissioners prepare for a comprehensive study of our municipal government, the Budget Bureau has provided them with a perfect sample of the abuses that ought to be corrected. An assistant director of the bureau has told the heads of the local government, in effect, that they don't know how to handle Washington's relief problem, and that their request for a supplementary appropriation will not be passed on to Congress.

Under such conditions, responsible administration in the District is impossible. The Commissioners believe that an appropriation of $850,000 is essential to avert a crisis in the management of relief. Certainly they know more about local relief needs than any subordinate in a Federal bureau. Yet such an official appears to have vetoed the Commissioners' plan even before it could be laid before Congress for analysis on its merits.

Of course, this is only one of many similar instances in which the local government has been frustrated by this Federal bureau. The Commissioners have just submitted a score of bills, having little relationship to the budget, to be scrutinized by this agency. Before these measures can go back to Congress the Budget Bureau will have to decide whether they conform to the policies of the President. Under this arrangement officials who have no connection with the District government, and very little knowledge of its problems, may effectively block anything undertaken by the city heads.

While this is probably the most flagrant example of divided authority in Washington, it is by no means unique. The Commissioners may well include within their reorganization project consolidation of the Metropolitan and United States Park Police. With more than 600 park areas scattered throughout the city, it is patently absurd to maintain a special police force to patrol them. Indeed, the committee ought to investigate the desirability of bringing the parks as well as the park police under the jurisdiction of the Government which raises the bulk of the money for their upkeep. Such a logical transfer would make it possible to eliminate further confusion and duplication of facilities.

Consolidation of the District's water system is another urgent problem. No reason can be found to perpetuate the hodgepodge arrangement under which the War Department collects and filters the city water supply while the District distributes it. Termination of this anomaly is especially desirable so that the water system may be set up as a public utility, thus avoiding a further drain upon tax funds for improvements that will be needed within a few years.

A redistribution of functions between the United States Attorney and the corporation counsel likewise appears desirable. Indeed, wherever it is practical a clear dividing line should be drawn between national and local functions, the latter being definitely assigned to agencies under control of the Board of Commissioners. This problem has already been extensively studied. What is most needed is the co-ordination of obvious reforms into a program that can be carried to Congress with unanimous support of the community.

Consistency may be a jewel, but only the stupid wear it.

"One Touch Of Nature."

From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

As the great Ohio flood of 1937 becomes a life-long memory, no feature of it will linger in that memory more enduring, more impressive than the sympathetic response manifested by that part of the country not immediately affected by the flood's ravages.

We and our children and our children's children will cherish with pride for all time the story of the fortitude, the courage, the indomitable resourcefulness with which a stricken community fought and conquered the disaster, but beyond even all that, the pulse will quicken and the heart will warm at thought of the manner in which the outside world, far and near, came to our help. It sent us funds, food, boats, policemen, firemen, physicians, volunteer workers, tireless in their zeal and self-sacrifice. It was a glorious demonstration that we are one people, undivided by sectional boundaries; a demonstration of the immortal truth that "one touch of Nature makes the whole world kin."

Shave And Haircut.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Barbers and their fees are being discussed. Well, yes their union rates are a little stiff—25 cents for a shave (the price of a breakfast) and 50 cents for a haircut. Those unwilling to go without breakfast, shave ourselves. The barbers know this, and so the price of the haircuts which we must have makes up for all this lost shaving money.

As I see it the fellow who can afford to pay 25 cents for a shave (regularly) can also dig up 50 cents for a haircut. And with us others it's only a very occasional barbering expense—about once a month and longer. Nothing to cry over. Or else we can go to the Barber College on Pennsylvania avenue. There the students turn the trick for 15 cents. The Volunteers of America maintain a soupline right next door. And so if you are good and hungry you can get a free bowl of soup along with your hair cut.

When the price was 35 cents this writer always chipped in a 10-cent tip. This made for good feeling all around. When I found the price raised I simply said, "You can have me if you want me. But no tip."

The writer to The Post also passes remarks on the "foreign" methods practiced by union barbers. Well, then let him patronize an American shop—one that's operated on the John L. Lewis principle by John L. Lewis' help. And may the Lord have mercy on his soul.

Strike Responsibility.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I listened with great interest to the address of Dr. Edmund Walsh at Continental Hall last night. He is a cultured and delightful speaker and, as such, it is a pleasure to listen to him, but his attempt to create fear of Communism or dictatorship in this country was far from convincing, and rather left an impression that this was a first figure of a picture of fear he plans to paint at a later date, of the dangers of President Roosevelt's recommendations to Congress in regard to the Supreme Court.

I was quite in agreement with him in all he said in criticism of the "sit down" strikers, their disrespect for the law, and the danger of the spread of this disrespect growing out of its condoning, but I thought him illogical and inconsistent in holding the Secretary of Labor responsible for allegedly condoning this lawlessness while he, at the same time, praised Governor Murphy for his part in handling the strike situation.

It seems to me that if anyone should be held responsible for condoning this lawlessness it was Governor Murphy, whose plain duty was to enforce the law, and not Secretary Perkins, who has nothing to do with enforcing the law, but whose duty it is to look after the interests of labor as far as she can do so in a way consistent with the general welfare.

As a matter of fact, as I understand it, the Federal Government cannot interfere to enforce the law in a State until called upon to do so by the Governor.

"Forward March."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of Feb. 18 Mr. Charles H. Probert criticizes the poem "Forward March."

Like Mr. William Lyon Phelps, I think "Forward March" is a worthwhile poem and has "an ingenious metrical scheme." "Real poetry is the imagination, simple, sensuous and passionate."

"It illustrates the art of good declamation," writes Mr. Phelps.

"How does he know this, since he does not say that he actually heard the poet read it?" asks Mr. Probert.

Does one have to hear a poet read his poem to know whether or not it is declamatory? To know whether a poem is declamatory one should read such poems as "Erin's Flag," "Rienzi to the Romans" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" and many other dramatic thrilling poems.

Preventive Of Editorial Degeneracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your muscular editorial, "Great in Anonymity," occasioned by the death of Rollo Ogden, editor of the New York Times, you quote one of the obvious eligibles as his successor, Arthur Krock, as follows: "Mr. Watterson was the last of the great editors, for the reason that he was the last of those editors who wrote with the power of ownership."

Mr. Ogden, you observe, was of that type which surmount "anonymity, self-effacement, even subordination, to build the collective product which he himself properly termed 'greater and more important than any one man.'" Mr. Krock was speaking 15 years or more ago. You wonder whether Mr. Ogden's service for the Times, beginning at about that date, would not now suggest a revision of that judgment.

Doubtless. Another phase, however, challenges consideration. Adolph S. Ochs, who in the Times had the power of ownership and hence the function of engaging and controlling editors, incarnated nature's preventive of degeneracy in the editorial breed. The publisher enlisted and maintained an editor of authentic caliber, and not only sanctioned and fostered his intellectual and moral integrity, but lifted from his shoulders the burden and harassment of responsibility for paper bills and pay rolls, which used to bring the gray hairs of the Wattersons in sorrow to the grave. Mr. Och's editor concentrated upon the editorial job the faculties that made him an editor. In a different sense from that intended by the originator, one may apply the famous injunction of Joseph Pulitzer: "The business of an editor is to edit."

What ended with Watterson newspaper ownership by the great editor was that the newspaper as a business had got beyond the grasp of any congenital editor, even if he had given the business side his whole strength; and as a function incidental to the chief task of editing, the struggle for financial solvency was hopeless. The editor had hired the business manager. Now the business manager hired the editor.

The business manager was perhaps put in by the creditors. Or the estate sold the property, rarely to an editor, though now and then to someone with a budding editor in the family. The new owner was either a successful publisher or a capitalist of personal or vicarious ambition to engage in the diffusion of intelligence. In either case his greatness as a publisher is manifested in the dimensions of the editor and the scope vouchsafed him.

Mr. Ochs, a successful publisher in a small city, made it his first care on taking over the Times to confirm the tenure and dignity of Mr. Ogden's predecessor, Charles R. Miller, whose ideals were never too lofty for the owner; and when, as Mr. Miller—dare we say matured?—and new blood must be transfused over against the inevitable, the search was long and diligent, and the result young Ogden, aged 64, whose nearly a third-century at the Evening Post left nobody in doubt what type of editor Mr. Ochs had sought or that he had found him.

More recently we have had an illustration of the capitalist purchaser turned publisher after a career in other pursuits, calling and sustaining an editor in the same spirit; but you would prefer me not to name names here.

Our era has seen not the decline and extinction of the great editor, but the rise of the great publisher, the mark of whose greatness is his great editor

Co-op Schools.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those interested in the consumer-co-operative movement in this region will no doubt be interested to know that special schools and special classes are opening up in various parts of the Nation for enterprising workers and socially minded individuals who look to the "co-ops" as a new "yardstick" in American business.

For example, only today I was authoritatively informed that Anthony Lehner, for many years education director of the Indiana Farm Bureau Co-operative Associations, will head a special "co-op" summer school during July and August at the American Peoples Schools, 67 Stevenson place, New York City. During the last year Mr. Lehner has appeared before many civic forums as an authoritative lecturer on consumers co-operation. In such projects we have witnessed the splendid co-operation which has been rendered by the United States Office of Education.

The American Peoples Schools have indorsed an eight-week session on co-operative history, philosophy, business problems, organization and management, which may draw students from many sections of the Nation. A similar summer school was conducted under the direction of Prof. Merlin Miller, of the College of Emporia, Emporia, Kans., with the co-operation of western consumers co-operatives, last year.

Field trips and close study of the numerous consumer-owned projects in and around New York City will be a feature of the "co-op" classes next summer. Among these projects are Consumers Co-operative Services, operating a chain of ten cafeterias, Amalgamated Co-Operative Houses, Eastern Co-operative Wholesale, the Finnish Co-operative Trading Co., and Co-operative Distributors, a co-operative mail-order house, and a number of co-operative stores, and suburban buying clubs.

It is a matter of record that Mr. Lehner pioneered in the field of adult education programs in Indiana. Under his guidance many co-operative institutes were conducted for a number of years with the sponsorship of the Indiana Farm Bureau Co-operative Associations.

In the District of Columbia, Dr. Leroy Halbert has directed a number of educational enterprises of this nature with the support of the Washington Consumers Club, during the past ten months.

No Mail On Holidays.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Something should be done to avoid the provoking experience which I have just sustained. I mailed a letter to a friend on Saturday morning in which was a request to communicate with me on its receipt on Monday, on a matter which was vital to both of us. Not having heard from him by Monday noon, I wired to ask him his reason for his failure to communicate with me. He replied that he had not received the letter and chided me for my negligence.

An investigation on the part of both of us revealed the fact that no mail was delivered on Monday, excuse—Washington's Birthday—a legal holiday.

What a silly observance for so important an artery of communication as the U. S. mails! Imagine—a letter mailed on Saturday will not be delivered until Tuesday morning, a lapse of nearly four days!

If the telegraph companies are open for business, the bus and railroad companies operating on schedule time, the telephone companies maintaining their efficient service on such holidays, then I think the Postoffice Department, which in my opinion is more important because it serves more people than all the other companies of communication put together—should remedy immediately these overlapping holidays that require nearly four days for the delivery of a letter. On such holidays there should be at least one delivery of mail.

The Post Impressionist

Joe Miller.

JOE MILLER, whose joke book has been a dependable stand-by for professional comedians, to say nothing of born amateurs and drawing room bores, for nearly 200 years, is reputed never to have made an original joke in his life.

He is one of the late seventeenth century personalities whose memory has been kept fresh by endless references; the present one is due to casual encounter in an old book of the date of his death, August 15, 1738. This led to tangential reading from which were extracted these facts:

Joe Miller was born in 1684 and rose from nothing to eminence as a comedian. The Drury Lane Theater bills mentioned him for the first time April 30, 1715, as playing the part of Young Clincher in Farquar's "The Constant Couple or a Trip in the Jubilee."

Since this was followed by his regular engagement, it is to be presumed that he made a hit. Two years later he was given a benefit; the play was Congreve's "Old Bachelor," and he had the role of Sir Joseph Whittel. No less an artist than Hogarth made a drawing, illustrating a scene in the play, for the tickets.

After appearing in London, he joined a company of players that traveled from place to place when the town theaters were closed; it made a special visiting (and probably, sometimes, vanishing), point of fairs, such as St. Bartholomew's, Smithfield May Fair, Greenwich Fair and, one authority states, "the Frost Fair on the Frozen Thames, for it was an extraordinary severe winter" (1715).

Later in life Miller had a booth-theater of his own that extended his popularity. He was a conspicuous figure at the Black Jack Tavern in Portsmouth street, London, a rendezvous for Drury Lane actors, writers and mere hangers-on—a sort of eighteenth century British Algonquin Hotel, apparently—and a tradition grew up about him.

He was greatly esteemed and liked personally, but according to contemporary report, he was so notoriously serious and so completely lacking in jokester's talent, despite his fame on the comedy stage, that his friends ironically ascribed every new jest that went the rounds to him.

Compilations of jokes had been popular in England for a couple of centuries; usually they were the same old stories, re-hashed, then as now. The custom was to attribute these wheezy anthologies to some celebrity or other, more or less recently deceased, and one of Miller's cronies, John Mottley, under the nom de plume of Elijah Jenkins, decided thus to capitalize, so to speak, the memory of his friend.

His book continued a succession that started in the sixteenth century with "Scoogan's Jests" and "Skelton's Jests;" "Tarlton's Jests," "Hobson's Jests," "Peele's Jests," "Hugh Peter's Jests" in the seventeenth; "Pinkethman's Jests," "Polly Peachum's Jests" (it's easy to imagine what they were like) and "Ben Johnson's Jests."

"Joe Miller's Jests or the Wit's Vade Mecum" was published in 1739 and before the year was out two more editions were necessary.

Miller was buried in the churchyard of St. Clement Danes, which later became the site of the King's College Hospital. The inscription on his gravestone was written by S. Duck, the farmer, whom George II's Queen Caroline made first a yeoman of the guard and later a parson. He had ridiculous literary aspirations and was actually proclaimed as the rival of Pope by court sycophants.

Duck had no more poetic ability than the fowl whose name he bore, but so convinced was he that he was a neglected genius that he committed suicide, an act that doubtless was hastened by Swift's poisonous epigram:

The thresher Duck could o'er the Queen prevail,
The proverb says: "No fence against the flail."
From threshing corn, he turns to thresh his brains
For which her majesty allows him grains;
Though 'tis confest, that those who ever saw
His poems think them all not worth a straw,
Thrice happy Duck employed in threshing stubble
Thy toil is lessened and thy profits double.

The Worst City.

IN HONEST BUT exaggerated civic pride a Jerseyman by the name of Vincent disputes the regent assertion of these dispatches that Chicago is the worst city in the matter of misgovernment, graft and the absence of civic conscience among the citizens. Mr. Vincent nominates Jersey City under Frank Hague for this honor and complains of a big debt, exorbitant costs of government, a political judiciary, high taxes and the suspension of constitutional rights.

Jersey City has her points, to be sure, and I would be the last one to run down any man's town, but the fact remains that Jersey City is really a model city by comparison with my old home town of Chicago. Why, in Chicago they don't worry about the cost of government at all, because they don't even know what the costs are, for they don't keep books. Mostly they just make memorandums on scratch paper and leave them around any old where or jot their figures down on the walls like the dingbats and phone numbers that you see scribbled in telephone booths.

If somebody gets officious, demanding to know something about some particular phase of the city's finances, they point to a pile of old scratch papers or the figures on the wall and say, "There it is, brother; help yourself." Of course, they keep some books, but they are mostly full of telephone numbers of bondsmen, all night judges, gambling houses and party girls who may be called as special counsel for extraordinary sessions of various committees of the Board of Aldermen.

• • • •

SOMETIMES by mistakes they may put some tax figures in one of these ledgers, but they never try to balance them, because you can imagine the confusion you would get if you should foot up the morning line at Hialeah, plus ten miles of pavement at so much per mile, plus the last election returns, divided by the telephone number of a girl named Edna (if man's voice answers, hang up). If a grand jury begins to ask foolish questions they tear the pages out of the books and paint the walls over, and if a private citizen gets too fresh they indict him—not anybody in the Administration.

This goes for any administration, you understand, because Chicago has always been that way and always will be. Back in my time as a cub reporter around the City Hall, which was then new, the system of accountancy was a little bit different. In those days they would have fires in the vaults, and when the firemen would come shuffling through the corridors in their rubber boots reporters like George Fox and Pat Henry and Jack Malloy, sitting in the penny-ante game, would say, "It must be the first of the month; the boys are balancing the books again." We got so used to fires in the vaults of the City Hall that we wouldn't even bother to phone them in.

WHY, JUST TO show you how naive Mr. Vincent is in his complaint about taxes for Jersey City, Chicago doesn't bother with taxes at all. They just decided not to pay any more taxes, and if you think I am kidding or exaggerating that only goes to prove my contention that Chicago is in a class by herself.

People in other cities can't believe that such a thing can be true, but it is. Honest to God, they just made up their mind that taxes were too much bother, what with all the hard feeling and the waste of the citizens' time hanging around the tax office waiting for the employes to come back from Hot Springs or Miami or the Michigan summer resorts. So instead of taxes they use a thing like a ruble or Pancho Villa money, called a tax anticipation warrant.

These warrants are liens on the taxes in case anybody should ever pay any taxes, and they used to move them on the banks in return for regular money to pay the contractors and supply companies which do business with the city. Such companies generally are owned by people in the administration—any administration—and you can readily understand why they wanted to get regular money with which to maintain the credit and the fair name of the city by meeting these bills. I don't know what the bankers are expecting to do with these rubles—play them on the piano, maybe. It sounds crazy, I know, but you ask anybody from Chicago and see.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Now and Then.

George Washington once rated high—
We used to think he had the stuff,
But now of greatness he seems shy—
He wasn't POSITIVE enough!

Once to his record we would bow—
His was a reputation stout;
But what a slow poke George now seems—
He used to stop to think things out!

John Hancock and those boys were tops,
We thought, and stood as figures great,
But they were (now we see it) flops;
If it seemed prudent they could WAIT!

How high Tom Jefferson once stood!
But that was in the long ago . . .
He thought some other minds were good
And, listening, was far too slow!

Abe Lincoln, he would seek a cure
For evils that the day might cite;
His trouble was he wasn't sure
That he ALONE was ALWAYS right!

For great reforms Abe went to bat—
He labored hard and labored long;
His big defect was thinking that
He could CONCEIVABLY be wrong.

Yes, Lincoln, once seemed quite okay—
A ruler and a leader great . . .
But what a bust he'd be today!
For he at times could hesitate.

Look backward! Each now seems a bust
With mind quite weak and insecure;
Unworthy of his public trust
Each sometimes wondered, "AM I SURE?"

The Educational Outlook.

Now that Dr. Charles Seymour has been made the new prexy at Yale to succeed Dr. James Rowland Angell, it may be said that to be at Yale is no longer to be among the angels.

But it may now be boasted that while the students at New Haven may not know more they will now Seymour.

Love Song.

I'm in love! You speak, I thrill,
Tho' what you say amounts to nil.

I'm in love! I fret and yearn,
Fearing you will not return.

I'm in love! You've made a hit.
Do I like it? Not a bit.

C. STRATTON.

The inscription, "War 1937. Must" has been found on a newly laid egg. A lot of eggs think that way.

Sailing beneath the Polar ice in a submarine is healthful, says Sir Hubert Wilkins. It kept a man we know well for years. He married into a superior set and worked all his life for an old-fashioned railroad president.

Next Five Years

England Reels Under Rearmament Program, With Conservatives And Left Wingers Both Disturbed Over Finances.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

LAST YEAR a book was published in London called "The Next Five Years." In it a number of public men of all political opinions mapped out an agreed program of political action to cover the next five years. Their argument was that England, once leader of the world in social legislation, was now laggard; that because left wing parties had different fundamental philosophies their combined electoral majority was diffused, and the conservatives were able to maintain power. To meet the problem they proposed to forget long-term difference, draw up a lowest-common-factor program which could be advocated by all progressives without prejudice to their subsequent differences. The "Next Five Years" became a group for action on these lines; the phrase became a mild and rather academic English equivalent of "New Deal."

That dream is dead. Mr. Neville Chamberlain has given the phrase the meaning by which it will henceforth be known. He is to take power to borrow for rearmament up to 400,000,000 sterling, in a period not longer than the next five years.

BEFORE this rearmament started, we were spending about 120,000,000 a year on the fighting services. We have already pushed up the level to about 200,000,000 a year. If that amount is now to be increased by taxation as well as borrowing, our bill for the next five years cannot be far from 320,000,000 a year for armament, plus 100,000,000 a year from revenue and 80,000,000 a year from borrowing, for rearmament. Over the next five years we are to spend, purely in the interests of peace we would have you understand, something like 1,500,000,000 sterling.

Replacement Program Has Become Biggest Ever.

WHAT STARTED as a process of merely "filling in the gaps in our defenses" has become the biggest ante ever seen in the armaments race. But, although the people were shocked, although there has been vociferous criticism, it seems that nothing will hinder the acceptance of the program. For at present England enjoys executive government. The Conservative majority in the House of Commons is large enough to rubber stamp anything the cabinet wants, and the Opposition is as functionless as the Republicans in the House of Representatives.

BUT THE CRITICISMS are still serious. They fall into three groups. In the first place, the method of raising armament expenditure is damned outright by all economists.

Up to the present, they say, recovery has meant a rise in the standard of living of those who have found employment, and of those employed whose wages have been increased; to push an inflationary credit expansion further will not bring prosperity to the depressed industries, nor will it raise further the standard of living of the employed, since costs of living may now be expected to rise faster than wages.

The time for a public works policy is at the bottom of a depression, or as the cycle of depression moves downward; as recovery of private industry reaches the top, government expenditures should fall, taxation should increase, the government should accumulate surpluses.

During depression Mr. Chamberlain, in the name of sound finance, refused to swallow the new doctrine of marshalling public works to counteract the effects of depression in private industry. Now he rushes in, at the most dangerous stage of the trade cycle, deliberately launches a colossal program of public works, and is determined that there shall be no flagging in the government's devotion to cheap money. This can only mean that the government is prepared to expand the credit base of the banking system fast enough to keep up the price of government securities, keep down the rate of interest.

Economists Agree On Undesirability.

THIS MAY PROVE to be impossible. But even if it is possible, it is undesirable, according to most of our economists. The demand on the banks for commercial advances, partly from industry, but mainly at present from individuals, is already rising rapidly. If this process continues, as it will if trade continues to boom and prices to rise, the banks will find it profitable to sell off their investments, apply their funds to loans to customers. Yet while the banks may be expected to sell government securities, the government proposes to increase the supply to the extent of some 80,000,000 a year. year.

Either the rate of interest must rise as prices of gilt-edged fall, or else the government must set the Bank of England to buying securities, and so provide the banking system with more funds with which it can both increase advances and continue to purchase the new supply of government issues. But if the latter course is chosen, as seems to be the case, nothing can stop an inflationary rise in prices, for in many lines of industry plant is working to full capacity, and there is no unemployment.

Outlays Described As Wasteful By Left.

A SECOND KIND of objection to the program comes from the left wing parties. Expenditure on armaments is wasteful and entirely unproductive; the cost cannot be postponed to any future generation. The sacrifice must be borne by somebody now, and it should be borne say the critics, by thosee most able to afford it. Taxation according to capacity to pay would distribute the burden in a just manner. Borrowing with an encouraged inflation means that the burden will be borne now by the poorer classes in the shape of a lower standard of living and, in addition, that a redistribution of income from poor to rich will be perpetuated in the future as interest on government debt is paid for out of taxation.

In large degree these criticisms are ingenuous. The present government is a Conservative government, ruling for the benefit of the propertied and monied classes, for producers and not for consumers, for the raising of profits and not of wages. Concessions to social reform are the minimum possible. It is absurd to expect such a government to adopt a method of paying for rearmament which would in fact bear most heavily on its own supporters.

Others Criticize Futility Of Arming.

THE THIRD CRITICISM is made not on any absurd expectation that leopards can change their spots. What is the good of rearming, ostensibly in the name of peace and defense, if at the same time the government pursues a foreign policy calculated to destroy all possibilities of peace, strengthen the prospective enemy, make the day of war more inevitable and the victory more uncertain?

The scale of our rearmament is apparently to build an air force larger than any other in Europe, a navy powerful enough to face simultaneous attack in the Pacific, the Mediterranean and in home waters. In addition to our own "paltry" contribution of 1,500 million sterling in five years the Dominions and India are being urged to shoulder their part of the burden: we may soon have an Indian navy as well as a South African air force. The empire is to be defended at all costs. Yet even right wing conservatives maintain that our present foreign policy imperils the empire more than rearmament can defend it. Best protection for the empire, says Winston Churchill, for example, was the League of Nations; yet the League has been reduced to pathetic ineffectiveness largely with our connivance.

Not even now has the lesson been learnt that it is insufficient protection for democracy and peace to buy time from the aggressive nations by yielding to their demands while we hurry to rearm ourselves. Our policy of inaction in Spain and of tacit support for the Italians and Germans is denounced by the left wing because we sacrifice democracy for fascism, and by the right wing because we allow a potential enemy, Germany, to establish a foothold on the southern border of our best ally, France, and allow Italy to establish herself in Malaga, secure command of the Mediterranean, and in conjunction with the Germans at Ceuta make Gibraltar look pretty sick. Does the government fondly believe, ask these critics, that the enemies we fear will calmly allow us to outbuild them in armaments? Are we so proud of our strength that we can afford to see our friends and allies successively weakened and undermined by those who finally will threaten us? Is 1,500 millions for rearmament our final reply to the just demand of the people of Europe that there shall be a revision of the system which seems in the name of national sovereignty to be leading us all to war?

The government has not answered these criticisms, nor is it expected that an answer will be given. We may prepare to shoulder our burden in the certain knowledge that the most optimistic part of the program is the hope that it will be achieved within the next five years.

Off the Record.

Blank Check

By Barnet Nover

Uncle Sam As Silent Partner.

HISTORIANS are agreed that the crisis which led directly to the outbreak of the World War began not so much on June 28, 1914, when the Austrian archduke and his wife were assassinated at Sarajevo, as on the following July 5.

It was on that fatal day that the German government, with the approval of the Kaiser, gave Austria-Hungary a blank check. The Hapsburg kingdom was promised Berlin's unhesitating support in dealing with obstreperous Serbia, long a thorn in the flesh of the Dual Monarchy. Weeks later, when, as a result of Austria-Hungary's use of the blank check, it became evident to Berlin that Europe was on the brink of no minor war, such as that between Austria-Hungary and Serbia alone, but of a major one with Great Britain likely to participate on the side of France and Russia, Germany sought to recall the blank check. It was then too late. The die had been cast.

Long ago Talleyrand pointed out that every alliance consists of a horse and a rider. This principle Bismarck understood. As long as he remained at the helm of affairs in Germany it was he who held the whiphand in the Austro-German alliance. His successors were not so skillful. In 1908-1909, at the time of the annexation of Bosnia-Herzegovina, and again in 1914, the weaker power, Austria-Hungary, rode the stronger, Germany, with disastrous consequences to those nations and the world.

THE POINT in recalling this bit of history is that the United States is, without knowing it, on the verge of committing the mistake made by Germany on July 5, 1914.

We, too, are about to write a blank check, which some nation or nations may at some future time cash under circumstances that may be disastrous to our interests. But it will then be too late to exercise any restraining force. Germany certainly did not know how Austria-Hungary would fill in the blank check. But at least the Berlin government was aware of the fact that Austria was its ally, indeed the one certain ally left the Kaiser's Reich.

Congress, however, is not even aware that a "cash-and-carry" policy would bind the United States in an alliance none the less real because such alliance would not exist on paper, contains no military provisions. Ostensibly the plan is designed to prevent this country under any circumstances from having to use its armed forces in any foreign war.

If we accept the presumption that Great Britain will continue to enjoy, as it does now, a preponderance of sea power over other European nations, the Pittman bill would, in effect, make us the economic ally of Great Britain and her allies. For as the measure is likely to operate, the British bloc would enjoy monopolistic control of American exports.

• • • •

NOW IT MAY be that the interests of the United States would best be served by making a de facto or de jure alliance with Great Britain. There are some who have long favored such a step. There are many others who have frequently expressed the belief that with the United States and Great Britain closely linked in ties of friendship, the peace of the world would be assured.

Whether that is so is not the immediate question. What is not open to argument is that if we are to become Great Britain's partner in international affairs we should do so explicitly, with our eyes open to the possible consequences and, last, but not least, with a partner's right to have a say in the operations of the joint concern.

As it is our policy is one of utter confusion. The Pittman bill is certainly not designed to make us an ally of Great Britain or any other country. Its obvious intentions are to keep us aloof from the rest of the world so that, in the event of another European war, the chance of our involvement would be reduced. The bill seeks no added power for the United States in international affairs. The exact opposite is true. The measure would bind us to inaction.

Far from giving us any opportunity of exerting pressure on Great Britain or any other nation to compel a course of action in line with America's interests, the bill, if enacted, would give Great Britain—the nation whose naval strength is greater than that of any other power with the one exception of the Unietd States—a blank check that the London government can fill in once war breaks out. For Great Britain, as has so often been pointed out here and elsewhere since the "cash-and-carry" plan was first expounded, has the money. It has the ships. And it has the sea power.

BECAUSE OF certain European developments Great Britain has already made up its mind to build up its naval defenses. Once the Pittman bill is enacted the British urge for increased naval rearmament would be redoubled. For only by remaining mistress of the seas will it then be possible for the British to tap American sources of food and raw materials. Since this Nation is intent on maintaining naval parity with the United Kingdom this means added rearmament on our part. The logical sequence is clear: A "cash-and-carry" policy means a larger British navy. A larger British navy means an enlarged American Navy. Ergo: A "cash-and-carry" policy means American naval expansion.

It is to be hoped that Great Britain will not misuse the great asset we may place in that nation's hands by the Pittman bill. Many will argue that since it is inevitable that we, consciously or unconsciously, must take sides in our international policies, it is better to pass laws that operate to the advantage of the peace-loving democracies such as Great Britain and France rather than to the advantage of the aggressive, totalitarian states.

But whether Great Britain uses our blank check wisely—for the furtherance of world peace—or in so blundering a manner that the drift to war is heightened, we shall have nothing to say about it.

It is a case of responsibility completely divorced from authority. At the moment the giant which is the United States insists on acting like a thoroughly frightened mouse. Defeatism is about to become the fixed principle of our international relations. Timidity is to be erected into a national dogma. It is a pitiful spectacle.

English Language

Its Oddities.

One of the reasons I love the English language is that it is so funny; it is charming, unusual, irregular, full of the unexpected, like attractive individuals. I hate simplified spelling: Thru is an abomination; we have had our spelling now for nearly 300 years; some of our greatest literature is preserved in it. There are many things that should be reformed before we reform spelling.

Here is an interesting document sent me by John W. Polk, district clerk of the Board of Education, in Tuckerton, N. J. He writes, "Aint we got a funny langwidge?" and supplies two columns. Many more words could be added.

Unionized Farms?

Middle West Observer Doubts Feasibility Of Alliance Between Industrial And Agricultural Workers.

By Hilding Siversen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Topeka.

THE NEWS in the press services last week that the American Federation of Labor plans aggressively to unionize all farm labor in the United States was given comparatively small space in the newspapers, but it is likely to result in a situation of major importance. The plan, as given to the press, is to organize 240,000 farmhands under the usual procedure of the American Federation of Labor, with the usual purpose of improving wages and working conditions. People who live in the metropolitan and industrial areas may not realize the awesome implications of this announcement.

When Rex Tugwell was a member of the Roosevelt Administration he made speeches about "farmers and laborers surging forward together," presumably following some technique theoretically laid down by the Farmer-Labor Party, which has gained considerable foothold in Minnesota. This is not a new theory at all, as it has been voiced many times by speakers and writers, especially those of redical tendencies.

A. F. Of L. Proposal Presages New Deal Split.

THE MINNESOTA Farmer-Labor Party has managed to function fairly well, thus far, because it is a political alliance and not an economic one. As soon as economic factors begin to emerge, there will be trouble ahead, for no matter how idealistic the arrangement sounds, and no matter how well pubicists may plot the course of a combined farm and labor movement, on a theoretical chart, the inherent conflict of interests is sure to become evident, and will probably wreck the artificial alliance.

The proposed unionization of the American Federation of Labor may be the beginning of the schism, for it can only imply a conflict of economic interest between the farmer and the laborer, just as there is inevitable conflict of interest between the automobile manufacturer and the laborer—taking things as they are, and not as they ought to be, of course.

No matter how humane and generous the employer, or how broad-minded the employe, the opposite points of view are inevitable, and even where open clashes are happily avoided, there is a continuous presumption of polarity and a degree of opposition.

A further factor which exists with regard to farmers, and which does not exist to a marked degree in the case of other employers, is that the farmer produces the laborer's food and clothing. A high price for farm products means hardship to the worker. It is to the interest of the farmer that foods, wool and cotton be as high as possible, and it is to the interest of the worker that they be as low as possible.

The plan of the A. F. of L., which probably arises from the confident assumption of increased power due to political conditions, will turn out to be bad strategy, and it will certainly put the present Administration squarely on the spot, for the New Deal has depended upon the farm bloc on one hand and the organized labor bloc on the other, for its two most powerful elements of support. If the two chief brigades of the New Deal army line up and start fighting among themselves, it is going to be mighty embarrassing, for the New Deal will have to act as umpire, and, no matter which way the decision goes, there will be trouble.

THIS PLAN is based upon a total lack of comprehension as to what the American farmer can and cannot do.

His economy is based upon a vastly different system that that which applies to factory or other urban labor. In the Middle West the usual stipend for farm hands is in the neighborhood of $20 to $25 a month and board. This is equivalent to anywhere from $65 to $100 a month in an urban job, depending entirely upon variable factors, such as type of room and board, the use of the family automobile or horse, liberality as to holidays or nights off, and other things. If the farm is at a considerable distance from town, the hand cannot go to town to attend picture shows or other entertainment. The very deprivation may result in the saving of more money than what he might save if he were working in the town filling station or for the village carpenter.

On the other hand, farmers demand, usually with justice, that the hired hand get up early in the morning—particularly during harvest and corn husking time. He has a variable job of chores. He has a long list of things to be done, and usually there is no definite specification. The farm hand in many cases becomes practically a member of the family, and tasks are shared and passed around. Sometimes the hand has to work 12 or even 16 hours a day. At other times he may work scarcely at all, and may hunt rabbits. No two farms are run alike. There is no hope of standardizing farm labor. Rainy weather enables the hand, sometimes, to sit around and read all day. At other times he is put to work mending or greasing harness, or repairing a tractor, or sharpening sickles, or cleaning out the cowbarn.

The farm is an individual plant, and it is run according to the individual notions of the owner, and the weather. It is therefore entirely out of the question to assume that uniform rules as to working hours can be made. It is also out of the question to establish uniform wage scales, for a hand would work for Farmer Brown for $10 a month, because of the superior food and lodging, and he wouldn't work for Farmer Jones for $30 a month.

Uniform Working Codes Impossible.

IF THE A. F. OF L. applies anything like the technique it does to the mill or railroad or trade unions, it will attempt to establish uniform wage scales, and it can be assumed that they will be high. What is more significant, it will attempt to lay down uniform rules as to hours of labor and working conditions, with time-and-a-half for overtime, or some such penalties.

The idea of what would happen if some one attempted to establish an eight-hour day on the farm has been discussed with considerable hilarity by many informal groups of farmers, ever since the labor union movement became important. All sorts of absurd situations have been imagined, such as the farmer himself getting up to harvest wheat at 5 o'clock in the morning and the laborer leisurely coming along at 8, or the hand insisting upon sleeping on a feather-bed, or having pie for every meal. The situation, of course, is vastly complicated because it is necessary that food, lodging and partial family relationship be made a part of the wage agreement, and these things are so variable that there would be no end to the difficulties.

In 1918 an attempt was made to unionize migratory farm workers under the old Industrial Workers of the World. Arthur LeSueur, one of the executives of the Farmers' Nonpartisan League of North Dakota, was also a member of the I. W. W., and he attempted to negotiate a wage agreement between the members of the league and the members of the I. W. W. It was a rather hilarious situation in one sense, for it was like trying to mix oil and water. In another sense it was serious, because the I. W. W. was composed of radicals who had subscribed to certain principles involving the complete destruction of the "capitalistic state," the abolition of the wage system and the reign of the proletariat.

Farmer-Labor Party Legatee Of League

IT IS WORTHY of note that the present Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota is the direct result of the Nonpartisan League movement, and is the legatee to all its principles and activities. The I. W. W. has gone the way of all flesh.

The Farmer-Labor Party and the John L. Lewis wing of the A. F. of L. are also on friendly terms, if not actually allied. There are many wheels within wheels, and it will be interesting to observe the play as among these elements during the next year or two.

The thtory as to whether the farmer and union labor have identical and sympathetic ideals will now be given a thorough trial, if the announced plan of the A. F. of L. is pushed. The threshing out of this point will provide much education to casual theorists who have been thinking of how lovely it would be if the farmers and laborers all got together in one happy family.

The farmers, particularly those of the Middle West, who have hitherto had very little insight into the technique of organized labor, will be given a dose of high life when the union organizers begin to get busy in their respective neighborhoods. And the New Deal executives, particularly Mr. Wallace and Miss Perkins, will be called upon to exercise the utmost, if not impossible powers of diplomacy to head off what usually happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable body.

Stock Market Members' Deals May Be Curbed

Rules Would Put Them on Basis With Public to Check Speculation.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission called upon national securities exchanges yesterday to adopt regulations which it said would curb "unwarranted speculation" by exchange members.

It sent suggested regulations to the New York Stock and Curb Exchanges, and announced they would be transmitted shortly to all other exchanges.

The proposed rules would put exchange members on the same trading basis as the public. They would have to put up the 55 per cent margin required of other securities purchasers, and would be required to do this by 5 p. m. of the day of purchases.

Commission officials said that, under present rules, it has been possible for an exchange member to buy a stock and sell it an hour later without putting up any money. This freedom, they contended, has been used by some "shoestring traders" as a speculative device.

In announcing the commission's step, Chairman James M. Landis told reporters:

"This procedure is in accordance with a plan of the commission to give the exchanges the opportunity to regulate the trading activities of their own members.

"This course, which has been adopted by the commission on previous occasions, will allow greater flexibility in the administration of the rules and will permit minor adaptations to the various exigencies of individual exchanges.

"While the responsibility for the enforcement of these rules will thus lie with the exchanges, the commission will observe both their enforcement and their effectiveness."

The suggested rules, in effect, would put exchange members and partners under the general requirement prescribed by the Federal Reserve Board for the public, that margins must be maintained constantly at 55 per cent.

Capitol Front Bill Meets Approval

The Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds yesterday voted to report favorably the Connally bill to extend the east front of the Capitol.

The measure is identical with the bill that passed the Senate last session except that the authorization has been increased from $3,500,000 to $4,000,000.

It sets up a congressional commission to select one of two plans for changing the east front. One would extend it about 12 feet, while the other would bring it forward approximately 32 feet. The latter plan includes a corridor connecting the galleries of the Senate and House.

While the bill is expected to pass the Senate again, its fate in the House, where there is opposition, is conjectural.

Italians Guard Against Attack By Ethiopians

Raid by Haile Selassie's Son-in-Law Revealed in Addis Ababa.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Feb. 24.—Machine gun outposts were strengthened tonight at the Ethiopian city of Dessye to guard against further anti-Italian outbreaks while executions of Ethiopians found with arms continued apace in Addis Ababa.

The precautionary measures were taken at Dessye—once the headquarters of Emperor Haile Selassie during the war which cost him his throne—in the face of assertions by Italian colonial officials that the Fascists were undisputed masters of that region.

They claimed, in fact, that nine-tenths of Ethiopia was in Italy's firm grip and that she was rapidly occupying the remaining tenth.

The officials admitted, however, that a column of 3,000 Ethiopians under Ras Desta Demtu—Haile Selassie's son-in-law—had staged an attempt to drive the Italians out of Addis Ababa but had been defeated two or three days' march from the city.

Corradi Zoli, writing in La Tribuna, said the Ethiopians' "desperate gesture" against Addis Ababa occurred at the same time native chieftains hurled hand-grenades which wounded Viceroy Rodolfo Graziani and members of his suite in the city Friday.

There still were no official figures on the number of natives sent before firing squads for their opposition to Fascist rule which flared in the attempted assassinations. Unofficial estimates had placed the executions in the hundreds.

Reich Denies Jews Charity Exemption

Berlin, Feb. 24 (AP).—Jewish charitable organizations are not included in the exemptions from property taxation which are general for such societies in Germany, the supreme court of finance holds.

The test case, involving a Jewish children's home, resulted in the finding that Jews are not citizens, says the "Juritische Wochenschau."

The court held that only those aims are charitable which tend exclusively and directly toward the support of needy German citizens (volksgenossen).

"A tax exemption for reasons of supporting Jews does not comply with the National Socialist 'weltanschanuung.'" (Nazi world ideology based on blood, soil and race.)

Injured Student Given Chapter Pin

Members of the George Washington University chapter of the Sigma Chi Fraternity yesterday gathered at the bedside of Vernon Rasmussen, shocked while "running an errand" in the interests of fraternalism, and presented him with his fraternity pin.

The 25-year-old student is recovering at Georgetown Hospital from burns suffered when he came near a 13,000 volt line after he had climbed a fence surrounding the Dalecarlia reservoir on Conduit road last Saturday night.

Usual rites were waived, due to Rasmussen's condition, but he now is a full fledged member of the group. His home is in East Salt Lake City, Utah.

English Social Worker Will Speak at Dinner

Miss Muriel Lester, English social worker, and A. J. Muste, former director of the Brookwood Labor College, will share the speaking program on "The Church and Social Action" at a public dinner of the Washington branch of the Fellowship of Reconciliation tomorrow at the Y. W. C. A. at 6:30 p. m.

Miss Lester, sometimes called the Jane Addams of England, was the founder of Kingsley Hall in London, an educational, religious and social center for the underprivileged. Muste is field and industrial secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. A former Congregational minister, he has been active in labor union circles.

G. O. P. Senators Battle Bill For Extension of Trade Pacts

Borah Denies Treaties Have Benefited American Farmers; Believes Prices of Products Are Periled.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, jumped yesterday into the fight to block renewal of the reciprocal trade program, charging on the Senate floor that "the burden of these reciprocal trade agreements falls on agriculture."

He denied the contention of Democratic defenders of the program that it has resulted in improved markets for American agriculture through increased foreign purchasing power. Reduction of farm tariffs has forced American farmers to compete with foreign producers, he argued.

Earlier Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, attacked the trade act as a measure "centralizing governmental functions in the hands of the executive." He said it was the duty of Congress to fix taxes and ratify treaties but that this power had been handed to the President.

The House has voted to extend the program three years after June 12.

Borah criticized the Canadian trade pact, which drew Republican fire during the Presidential campaign last fall. Asked by Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, who has championed the program, whether he thought the Canadian treaty had seriously affected American cattle prices, Borah replied, "if enough cattle came in to help the Canadian farmer, enough came in to hurt the American farmer."

Borah conceded that only 156,000 head of Canadian cattle entered the country in 1936, and added "it may be true there was no permanent or universal injury to the domestic cattle market," but he asked "why admit any when we had a surplus in this country?"

"The American market belongs exclusively to the American farmer to the full extent of his ability to supply it," he added.

Borah asserted the only "sound" trade program was one which brought into the country only those things which are not produced here and which are needed on the domestic market. "Any program which goes beyond is no longer on a sound principle of international trade."

He declared America's favorable trade balance had dropped $231,000,000, to $34,000,000 between 1935 and 1936.

School to Get Portrait of Taft

Mrs. Helen Taft Manning, dean of Bryn Mawr College, will present a painting of her father, the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft, to the Taft Junior High School, Eighteenth and Perry streets northeast, at an assembly tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, will preside at the exercises given by the pupils of the school, and Mrs. Margaret R. Merritt, principal, will receive the picture. Tea will be served with the officers and room representatives as hostesses.

Invited guests include Mrs. Joshua Evans, Miss Grace Lind, supervising principal of the fifth division; Miss E. B. McNaughton and Mrs. Claribel Welsh, of the University of Maryland; Mrs. Harriet Houdlette, of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. L. H. Dennis, of the American Economic Association; Mrs. Herbert J. Wollner, of the Waldon School, New York; Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president, and Mrs. O. G. Hankins, first vice president, of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, local parent-teacher association presidents, elementary school principals and the teachers and parents of Taft pupils.

Federal Dam Administrator Selection Urged

Roosevelt Asks Congress for Authorization of Appointment.

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to authorize appointment of an administrator to sell surplus power generated at Bonnerville Dam, near Portland, Ore.

The dam, on the Columbia River, will be producing power this year and it is necessary to provide for temporary administration, pending formulation of the national policy.

Mr. Roosevelt transmitted with a letter to Congress on the subject, a progress report from the committee on national power policy, suggesting legislation regulating operation of the Bonneville project.

The committee emphasized power production would be incidental to the major purpose of improving navigation, while the Grand Coulee Dam, farther up the Columbia, in Washington, will produce power as an incident to irrigation. Both projects are to tie in later with a permanent program.

Ickes Would Name Head.

Appointment of the administrator by the Secretary of the Interior is proposed. He would act with an advisory board of three, named, one each, by the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior and the Federal Power Commission.

"In order to encourage the widest possible use of available electric energy," the report says, "to provide reasonable outlets therefor, and to prevent the monopolization thereof by limited groups or localities," the administrator would be authorized to provide transmission lines to existing and potential markets and to inter-connect the project with others in the Federal program, building or to be built, for interchange of power.

To assure development of the project "for the benefit of the general public and particularly of domestic and rural consumers," preference would be given, in sale of electricity, to public and co-operative agencies, such as States, counties and municipalities, and to co-operative associations of citizens not doing business for profit.

Public Agencies Favored.

Until January 1, 1939, at least half of the power would be reserved for public and co-operative agencies, but if all of such energy were not purchased it could be disposed of otherwise, temporarily, until other public and co-operative groups were ready to make purchases. Even after the first of 1939 such agencies would have priority over all private agencies in case of conflict with private applications.

Rates fixed by the administrator would be subject to approval of the Power Commission. Contracts would extend not more than 20 years.

Rates would be readjusted at least once every five years.

A contract with a private agency which resold the bulk of the power purchased from the Government could be canceled on five years' notice if any part of the power it purchased was desired by public or co-operative agencies.

"Uniform Rates."

"Contracts may contain stipulations," the report said, "concerning resale and resale rates * * * to insure that resale to the ultimate consumer will be at rates which are reasonable and nondiscriminatory."

"The rate schedules," it added, "should provide for uniform rates or rates uniform throughout prescribed transmission areas, with a view to distributing the benefits of an integrated transmission system and encouraging the equitable distribution of the electric energy developed."

Public and co-operative agencies would be given "reasonable" time to authorize or market bond issues necessary to carry out their part of the transactions, and their applications for power would not be rejected in the meanwhile.

"The project should become self-supporting," the report said, "but in the meantime it will be necessary to provide funds for initial construction of transmission lines, operation and administration."

It called for setting up general administrative provisions, including application of the civil service laws to all positions except those of experts in the professional or technical fields.

Son of Hutton Boomed Tacks, Witnesses Say

Employes of Firm Testify He Urged Atlas Issues at SEC Hearing.

Government counsel produced testimony yesterday that William E. Hutton 2d, Detroit manager for W. E. Hutton & Co., "influenced activity in Atlas Tack Corporation stock.

It was the first time in the Securities Commission attempt to bar the New York brokerage house from the stock exchanges for alleged manipulation that a member of the firm has been linked with Atlas transactions.

The testimony was obtained from Wilfred Yockey, Cincinnati, and Albert S. Johnson, Lexington, Ky., both customers' men for Hutton.

"Atlas Tack is a good buy," they quoted young Hutton as telling them in November, 1935, the month in which the Government charges Hutton & Co. acquired 35,000 shares of Atlas common stock and "rigged" the market with matched orders.

Both testified that they never had recommended Atlas to their customers prior to their communication with Hutton.

From the fact that he "liked the stock," they said they "inferred" that Detroit automobile interests which had accounts with Hutton & Co were supporting the Atlas market and placing business orders with the corporation.

Another witness, Albert F. Reilly, Detroit manufacturers' agent, denied Government charges that his account in Atlas stock had been used by Hutton operatives to influence the market.

Judith Anderson says:

"Luckies never irritate my throat"

"A long successful run on Broadway is a 'run' on the actor's endurance, as well. Particularly it's a strain on our voices and throats. My present role in 'Hamlet' is a special strain because of the declamatory style of Shakespearian drama. Luckies were my choice when I began smoking ... and today they are still my favorite cigarette. I enjoy their fine tobacco and I find my throat is much better off with a light smoke. Luckies never irritate my throat."

Judith Anderson

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women—lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.

Miss Anderson verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on the throat.

Democrat Club Picks Officers At Session Here

Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard Named President by National Group.

Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard yesterday was elected president of the Woman's Democratic Club, succeeding Mrs. Edward B. Meigs.

Other officers chosen included Mrs. Garland S. Ferguson, jr., first vice president; Mrs. J. Brent Clarke, second vice president; Mrs. Albert A. Jones, recording secretary; Mrs. William E. Fort, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frank S. Bright, treasurer, and Mrs. Edward B. Costigan, Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler and Ellis Meredith, board of governors.

Mrs. Hubbard's election yesterday brought to the minds of fellow members the establishment of the Civilian Conservation Corps, for, during the Hoover Administration she read a paper before the club in which she advocated putting unemployed men to work in the Nation's forests.

This speech subsequently was read into the Record by the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh. The recommendation was turned over to the proper authorities for consideration.

It was not until President Roosevelt's CCC plan was established that Mrs. Hubbard saw her idea vindicated.

So many members of the Daughters of the American Revolution chapters in Virginia also take an active part in the District of Columbia D. A. R. that Mrs. Charles Carrol Haig State regent of the District of Columbia, has been invited to be one of the guests at the conference of the Virginia D. A. R., which will be held in Norfolk, March 16, 17 and 18. The Great Bridge and Old Dominion chapters, of Norfolk and the Fort Nelson chapter, Portsmouth, will be the hostess chapters.

Besides Mrs. Haig, a number of other members of the D. A. R. will attend the Virginia convention. Mrs. John Logan Marshall, State regent of South Carolina, will speak on Tamassee School, one of the approved schools supported by the D. A. R.

Miss Elsie M. Yells, of Allentown, Pa., president of the Quota Clubs International, and Miss Gladys W. Jones, of Washington, will be among those who will attend the fourth convention of the Quota Club of the tenth district, which includes the District of Columbia, at Richmond, March 20, at the Hotel Jefferson.

Delegates to the fourteenth meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club made a pilgrimage to Washington Cathedral yesterday to place a wreath on the tomb of Woodrow Wilson.

Mrs. Rose Yates Forrester was the chairman and speaker at the luncheon at the clubhouse.

The business meeting was held in the afternoon, Mrs. John B. Gordon, chairman of the nominating committee, made her report and Mrs. Edgar B. Kay was in charge of the elections.

The Society of Mayflower Descendants in the District of Columbia held its quarterly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh L. Nettleton Tuesday.

Mrs. Edith M. Gray, who was of the office staff of the United States delegation to the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace, gave an illustrated talk on her personal experiences on her trip down and back. She told of the charming hospitality shown them from the time they boarded the ship throughout their visit in South America.

The Schubert Singers sang a group of songs.

The Roosevelt Delphihan Chapter will meet at the Parrot Tea House Tuesday morning at 10:30. "Figures of the Italian Renaissance" will be a feature of the program.

Mrs. Verne Beales will be the leader. Topics will be presented on "Medieval Rome," by Mrs. William S. Hammers; "The Kingdom of Naples," by Mrs. William J. Graham; "Renaissance Standards," by Mrs. Lawson Moyer; "Beatrice d'Este," by Mrs. Hill; "Isabella d'Este," by Mrs. Finis Garrett; "Vittoria Colonna," by Mrs. J. Ward Mankin; "Lucrezia Borgia," by Miss Katherine Heslep; "Clarice Orsini," by Mrs. Cole, and "Savonarola," by Mrs. Edwin A. Halsey.

The resume will be given by the president, Mrs. William Earl Clark.

At the meeting of the applied arts division of the American Association of University Women yesterday, Mrs. George Ackerman talked on "Photography." Dr. Edith Allen was in charge of the meeting. "Enjoyment of Alaska," by Max Eastman, will be reviewed by Mrs. Helen T. Steinberger, of the public library, this morning at 11. Miss Julia McCord will be in charge of the meeting.

Miss Helen Cutler will talk on her recent visit to Tahiti at the French luncheon today at 1 a. m. Miss Elizabeth Carhart is in charge of luncheon arrangements.

The art appreciation section will meet this evening at 7:45. The rise of impressionism will be discussed. The duplicate contract bridge group, under the leadership of Mrs. Frank Smith, will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30.

The second semimonthly square dance will be held in the lounge of the club Saturday night.

The international relations study group will meet March 1. Mrs. George Hyman, Mrs. G. M. Mathes and Mrs. T. C. Thee will present studies on the problems of the United States.

The committee on the legal and economic status of women will sponsor a dinner March 3, at which Miss Dorothy Kenyon, of New York, will be the guest of honor and one of the speakers. Miss Bertha Nienberg, committee chairman, is in charge of the program and arrangements.

Mrs. Joseph Haworth will be club hostess for March.

The next meeting of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, will be held Friday evening at Moose Hall, 1414 I street northwest. The program has been arranged by the social service committee, of which Mrs. Frances Baldwin is chairman. Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau of the District of Columbia, will be guest speaker. She has been prominent in local social service work for many years, having served in the Women's Buruea of the Police Department since 1919, and as its chief since 1932. The correction of juvenile delinquency is one of her special interests, and she is at present assisting in a survey of Washington organizations that care for children, sponsored by the Washington Council of Social Agencies. The Women of the Moose are particularly interested in the problem of child care and training, as one of their chief objectives is the support of a national home and school near Chicago, Ill., for orphaned children of members of the fraternity, known as Mooseheart, where approximately 1,000 children are being educated by the Moose and its auxiliaries.

The Bank Women's Club will celebrate its tenth anniversary with a reception and banquet, to be held at the Admiral Club, 1640 Rhode Island avenue, tonight at 7 o'clock. The charter members will assist Mrs. Constance Fogle Jones, president of the club. A program of music and entertainment has been planned.

Tokyo Government Enters Cat Business

Tokyo, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Japanese government went into the cat raising business today to provide women with warm but inexpensive fur coats.

Under the direction of Dr. Seinosuke Uchida, fur expert in the department of agriculture, farmers will be taught how to raise cats as a sideline of potato, cabbage and rice growing.

The skins will be processed under government supervision for eventual manufacture of womens' fur coats.

Cat Club Election Stirs $50,000 Suit

Damages of $50,000 were sought in District Court yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Ira Chase Koehne, of 2803 Eighteenth street northwest, against other members of the Columbia Cat Fanciers Club who allegedly opposed the group headed by the Koehnes in a recent election.

The suit stated that the "no" members were allied against the "yes" members. The difference between the two was not explained, except that the plaintiffs charged the defendants tried to coerce the "yes" members into becoming "no" members.

Those named as defendants were Mary E. Hantzmon, of 312 Maryland avenue northeast; Mrs. Louise Metcalf, of 3212 Klingle road northwest; The Cat Fanciers Association, Herbert S. Ward, an attorney; Mary Fogarty, of the Sacred Heart Rectory, and Mrs. Casper W. Hall, 525 Oglethorpe street northwest.

Splitting Infinitives Habit of First Lady

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Split infinitives were one of her main worries in writing her autobiography, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today.

She was guest of honor at a tea presented by the magazine in which the first installment of her memoirs, which go only up to 1924, will appear next month.

"I have a terrible time splitting infinities," she confessed.

Baby's Custody Asked.

Father of 3 Guilty In D. C. Sex Crime

Convicted of criminally attacking a 14-year-old Langley Junior High School student, Edward J. McGee, 23, and the father of three children, today faced a possible sentence of 30 years in prison.

McGee, who contended he did not attack the girl, and secondly, that if he did he was too drunk to know what he was doing, was found guilty in 50 minutes. Justice James M. Proctor held that mere drunkenness was no excuse for the offense.

The girl had been to a Langley school play December 18. On her way home in the company of a 13-year-old escort, she was beaten, dragged into an alley and assaulted. The defendant could have been sent to the electric chair but for the recommendation of the jury which found him guilty did not recommend capital punishment.

Mills' Bill Asks For Coffee Shops In House Office

Members of the House long have looked somewhat enviously at the conveniences allowed Senators and denied them.

Yesterday, Representative Mills (Democrat), Louisiana, sought to alleviate one of the complaints by introducing a bill to set up restaurants or coffee shops in each of the House Office Buildings.

The Senate Office Building has a restaurant and tea room. Members of the House are required to eat in the Capitol or at a commercial restaurant.

Sen. Shipstead Returns From South America

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Gray-haired Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, today returned from a South American vacation, silent on national affairs but glad to get back home. The tall Farmer-Laborite, who left in December to recuperate from a gall bladder operation, said he wasn't in the best of health but that he felt considerably better. Before going on to Washington, he said he would spend a day or two here.

Here's what a famous newspaperman thinks about the new Buick—

(EDITORIAL NOTE: This informative story about the 1937 Series-60 Buick Century, top performer in America among the new cars, was written from personal experience by the Automobile Editor of the New York Evening Journal, and is reprinted here by permission as it appeared in that newspaper.)

By DON SHORT

STARTING out to write the story of an automobile that is completely new from front bumper to streamlined tail light is like launching a history of automotive engineering.

Every fender, valve or brake, every graceful contour is a story in itself, and behind each story is another tale of engineering achievement.

So it is with the new Buick for 1937. I find myself tempted to discourse in detail upon each impressive feature. All of them play important parts in the making of a modern motor car. All have important bearing on its performance, beauty and comfort. Space limitations, however, make it necessary to confine this report to a brief description of the car's performance and a few of its more important new features.

Test on Raceway

The model selected for the test trip was a two-door series 60 Century sedan. This is the "medium" car of the Buick line for 1937, the others being the 40 series, which is slightly smaller, and the 80 and 90 series, both of which are larger.

The Century series has a wheelbase of 126 inches and is powered by a 130-horsepower, valve-in-head Buick straight-eight engine.

Our proving ground was the famous Roosevelt Raceway, built on the old Roosevelt Field at Westbury, L. I. Here the world's finest racing drivers recently found the four-mile course a stiff test for even the specially built racing cars. The new Buick 60 was strictly "on the spot" on this tortuous road-racing course.

With my associate, Dave Preston, holding the stop watch, I "gave her the gun" on the all-too-brief three-quarter mile straightaway. Those 130 mechanical horses under the hood did the trick in no uncertain terms, reaching 40 miles an hour in eight seconds from a standing start, 60 in second gear in 16½ seconds and 80 in high gear in 32¾ seconds. Probably an expert could do better, but I found all the get-away, pickup and speed I could use, with something to spare.

In Pouring Rain

Incidentally, these tests were made in a pouring rain, with the track in such condition that certain portions of it could not be used at all. The surface is built for racing, not for touring, and the bumps are plentiful.

The next test was made on the curves. We tried one gingerly at 30 miles an hour. That was all right, so we tried 40, then 45 and 50. In each case the new Buick stabilizers held the car on an even keel and the turns were made easily. The car held the inside lane perfectly and could have taken the curves faster if desired.

Top speed on the straightaway was 86 miles an hour.*

Preston drove the car back to New York and found, as I had, that it was difficult to realize when he had reached the legal speed limit of 40 miles an hour on the Grand Central Parkway. The motor was smooth at all speeds and bumps in the road were imperceptible.

Zooms Over Hill

The following day we tried the Buick on the long hill that rises for over a mile from the old ship canal at Rocky Hill, N. J., to the Lincoln Highway. Starting in high gear from a standstill the motor picked up smoothly and we went over the top at better than fifty miles an hour.

So much for actual performance during the test trip. Between us, Dave Preston and I drove the car more than 400 miles and found that it answered every demand.

Checking over the specifications of the new Buick for 1937 I find that there are so many new things that it will be impossible to list them all.

Horsepower has been increased over last year. Appearance has been improved by making the car lower and blending all lines. Steering has been simplified and the choke has been made completely automatic and non-flooding at the same time.

Aerobat is New

An entirely new kind of carburetor is employed. Actually it is two carburetors built into one unit. Buick engineers have named it the "aerobat," because it follows the principles used in carburetors built for stunt airplanes. It supplies an even, steady flow of fuel to the motor, no matter what position the car is in.

The new automatic starter is connected with the accelerator pedal, but there is also a starter connection with the hand throttle, so that the car may be started when the car is on a hill and both feet are on the clutch and brake pedals.

Factors in Ride

Roominess is an outstanding feature of the new Sixty. There is more room inside, as well as out, and the luggage space has been increased. An interesting feature is a little tool well in the rear luggage compartment, set out of the way so that it does not interfere with removal of the spare tire.

Most safety questions are answered by the new "unisteel" body construction employed on both the Forty and Sixty series for Buicks for 1937. A stronger "I" beam crossmember has been added to the frame to increase rigidity.

The entire chassis has been sealed from the fan to the rear wheels, keeping out dust, dirt and water.

The Buick "gliding ride," emphasized in the 1936 models, has been still further improved in the new car. Knee-Action front wheels, torque-tube drive, balanced weight and new ride stabilizers, both front and rear, all contribute to the smoothness with which the car covers all roads regardless of surface.

New Programs AreAnnounced For Next Week

Stage and Screen Bills Are Such as to Forecast an Unusual List of Hits.

"Storm Over Patsy" will have its first American performance Monday night in the National Theater, under the auspices of the Theater Guild of New York. The comedy, adapted by James Bridie from the German of Bruno Frank, has just completed a run of 50 weeks in London. Three members of the London company will be seen in the cast that is to appear here—Sara Allgood, Roger Livesey and Ian MacLean. A fourth feature player is Claudia Morgan, just released from an important role in Maxwell Anderson's "The Masque of Kings" to assume her part in the new play. Others in the cast include Leo G. Carroll, Brenda Forbes, Louis Hector, Valerie Cossart, T. W. Austin, Francis Pierlot, John Hoysradt and Clement O'Loghlan. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

A. H. Woods' production of "The Night of January 16," the exciting melodrama by Ayn Rand which thrilled Broadway for eight months last season, will be the next attraction at the Belasco Theater, opening a week's engagement on Sunday night, with matinees on Thursday and Saturday. The play is said fairly to bristle with unexpected twists of plot, emotional high spots and frank melodrama. One of the most unusual features of the play is the selection of the jury from the audience. Each juror, as in a regular court of law, is paid a cash fee for his services. In the three central roles of the play, Helen Kingsley, Mitchell Harris and Grandon Rhodes will be seen, with Grey Loman, Alfred Kappelar, Inga Hill, Edward Lester, Debby Dare, Leo Kennedy, Maurice Morris and others in support.

Edward Arnold and Francine Larrimore, making her first appearance on a local screen, are the costars of "John Meade's Woman," foremost screen feature of the bill to be presented at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Miss Larrimore, one seems to remember, was last seen in Washington as star of "Brief Moment," at the Belasco. The supporting cast includes the names of such luminaries as Gail Patrick, George Bancroft, John Trent, Sidney Blackmer and others of note. On the stage the bill will be headlined by "Fats" Waller and his orchestra of swing artists. The specialists appearing with the band are Pope and Louis, Myra Johnston, Emmett Matthews and Al Washington.

"Crack-Up," a thrill-packed melodrama of flying aces, foreign spies and modern romance, opens tomorrow for a week's run at the Metropolitan Theater. Peter Lorre heads the cast in the role of a half-mad cripple who leads a band of spies. Brian Donlevy, Helen Wood, Ralph Morgan and Thomas Beck are included in the supporting cast. The title of the film is derived from the climax of the picture in which a giant transport plane, trying for a transatlantic record, cracks up in a hair-raising disaster. The bill will be completed by the usual subsidiary features and full 15-minute newsreel.

Jane Withers, one of the most precocious of the cinema's youthful players, will be seen on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in a lively camera drama known by the name of "The Holy Terror." The juvenile Miss Withers has demonstrated on many previous occasions before the camera that she can be precisely that. It therefore follows that the Columbia probably has a feature of unusual authenticity in "The Holy Terror." The bill will be completed by the customary short-reel subjects and news events.

Jacques Cartier, a young American who first made a reputation as a dancer, makes his bow in Washington as a one-man show in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel on Friday, March 5. His program will consist of a dance drama known by the name of "The Grand Monarch."

The present double bill at the Rialto Theater, consisting of Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in "The Amateur Gentleman," and the Marx Brothers, in "Duck Soup," will be continued into a second week. The subsidiary attractions also will be held over.

The new bill at the Little Theater, beginning Sunday, will be featured by a revival of "The Scarlet Pimpernel," in which the stellar role is played by Leslie Howard. It is a story of the French Revolution, and an excellent one.

"We're on the Jury," costarring Victor Moore and Helen Broderick, will be the foremost feature of the screen bill to be presented at the RKO-Keith Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Every branch of the theater is represented in the supporting cast, which includes Charles Middleton, Billy Gilbert and Roy James, formerly of vaudeville; Louise Latimer, Philip Huston, Vinton Haworth, Robert McWade and others from the dramatic stage, and Sarah Edwards, recruited from opera. Earle Foxe, former Capital stock favorite, and George Cooper, from the silent screen, also are members of the cast.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

An Abstruse and Profound Motion Picture Proves That Movie Public Has Assumed an Adult Stature

'Green Light,' a Play of Serious Import Makes New Box-Office Records at Both the Earle and Ambassador Theaters; There Is a Comic at the Gayety Who Deserves to Be Promoted; Mr. Cochran Stops by, Looking Particularly Fit; News Notes and Gossip of the Contemporary Theater.

IT is a matter of considerable gratification and one of the phenomena of the current cinema that "Green Light" has been going as well as it has at the Earle and Ambassador Theaters.

Our fear was expressed in Saturday morning's review of the picture that it would prove too abstruse, too philosophical and too profound for the common run of "movie" patrons. This seems to have been a fear that was totally without substantial foundation. There has been nothing in the history of this picture to indicate that it has soared over the heads of its audiences. This is a fine sign.

BELL.

If a photoplay as subtle in its suggestions, as powerful in the culmination of its climaxes and as memorable in its fidelity to the authentic facts of life can impress itself upon public consciousness as "Green Light" has done, then there is no fear for the mental capacity of the contemporary motion picture audience.

It has been the contention of this column for months—and maybe years—on end that the capacity of the movie-going public to assimilate the best things of literature and the drama was being tremendously underestimated.

The career of "Green Light" seems to bear out this contention. Here is a play that is not simple, not translucent, not immediately comprehensible to the flippant mind. Yet it has achieved one of the most profitable runs of recent months, not only at the Earle, but at the Ambassador, where it piled up grosses that have not been seen at the corner of Eighteenth and Columbia road for weeks on end.

All of this adds up, of course, to the final conclusion that motion picture audiences are growing up and have a fine appreciation of the better things that the cinema has to offer.

"Green Light" certainly is one of the best of them.

What is all this "red" business? Master J. Raymond Bell—no relation—chief of advertising and publicity for Loew's, Inc., in this city, has been bombarding the drama desks of late with the most baffling "teaser campaign" that has come along in years. He seems to think that we ought to know who and what this "red" is. Just to give you a rough idea—not too rough, I hope—there comes along first a miniature cedar chest, done in wood that is reasonably red; then there arrives a six-inch brass-edged ruler, a part of which is in redwood, and today there arrives another gadget in the form of a kid holster for a six-shooter with which we are petitioned to set in motion a movement for "whooping it up" for this whatever it is. Having instigated several provocative campaigns of the same sort in a previous incarnation, we still are curious to know what this "red" menace is all about. Maybe sometime it will come out.

• • • •

And who should just drop in but Stephen E. Cochran, founder of the National Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts and former manager of the National Theater, who reports that what promised to be a case of paralysis of the lower extremities turned out to be a false alarm, thank Heaven. Mr. Cochran is looking in "the pink," as we say around the better training stables, and has high hopes for the eventuation of his plans for a summer theater colony on the outskirts of Washington, come the warmer months of the year. It was good to see Steve again and to know that he is out of danger from any permanent result of a temporary nervous threat.

If musical comedy and revue productions were as numerous as they used to be and the so-called "legitimate" producers were as alert as once they were, a certain burlesque comedian we have in mind would be on his way "up there" to take his place beside Leon Errol, Lester Allen, Bobby Clark, George Bickel and Harry Watson and others who have ascended from the burlesque circuits to the peak of big-time fame. I have reference, of course, to Joe De Rita, starring this week at Jimmie Lake's Gayety Theater. De Rita is a comedian who packs such a punch that he scarcely could be overlooked by any scout for major material. He possesses not only a fine flair for comic effect in both lines and business, but an intelligence, an articulateness, so to speak, and a clear-cut enunciation that stamp him as one apart from the usual burlesque herd. He will be on top one of these days, or I am no judge of theatrical values.

Incidentally, this Jimmie Lake fellow, Chesterfield of the sports arenas and Beau Brummell of Ninth street, is no slouch on his own account. He has a happy faculty of finding stuff in your motor car that never had been lost, but which he brings down to you through the center aisles of his opera house to the first row and presents to you, nevertheless.

I was particularly grateful for the salvage he presented me with a few nights ago when I didn't know I had lost anything. One in a million, this James Jeremiah Lake. I salute him as a master showman and a perfect host.

Dancing Stars of New Warner Musical

Here we have a slightly informal photographic reproduction of what seems to have been going on during the making of "Ready, Willing and Able" at the Burbank studios of the Warner Brothers. The pictured costars, as you hardly need to be told, are Ruby Keeler and Lee Dixon, two of the dancingest demons that ever got in front of a camera. There is a strong supporting cast somewhere there in in the background.

Idaho Divorce Bill.

Boise, Idaho, Feb. 24 (AP).—The Idaho House approved, 34-24, today a Senate measure designed to bring part of Nevada's divorce business to Idaho. The bill would reduce from 90 days to six weeks the residence requirement before divorce proceedings can be instituted.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 24.—Settin' Around (20th Century-Fox): At this studio the three magical words are not "I love you," but "Zanuck wants you." As far as Hollywood is concerned, Darryl Zanuck, head man of this company, has proven himself as much a miracle man as the late Irving Thalberg. Prime point of his success, he has proven that star names are not vital to box-office records. The names help—gosh yes!—but good story ideas and good pictures pay big dividends, stars or no stars.

SIMON SIMONE.

Zanuck has turned out such productions as "The Country Doctor," "Lloyds of London," "Girl's Dormitory" and "One in a Million." Pictures that were almost devoid of star names. Yet they are earning tremendous profits. And proving that all things in Hollywood run in cycles, these pictures have created new stars in Simone Simon, Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche. It is this ability to build new personalities in good pictures that has lent magic to the three words, "Zanuck wants you."

I arrived on the "Wake Up and Live" set just after a dramatic incident had occurred. Jack Haley had been playing the part of a mike-frightened radio singer. He was supposed to be so scared as to faint in the middle of a song. Rehearsing the scene, Haley had difficulty with the fainting bit, and Director Sidney Lanfield became impatient. "Watch me," he finally ordered Haley. Stepping to the microphone, he began to sing. Suddenly he keeled over, and everybody simply stood still and watched him. Seconds passed, and then an assistant director abruptly sensed that all was not well. Hurrying to the director's side, he discovered that Lanfield had really lost consciousness. He remained in a coma and was carried off the set, victim of influenza.

I lunched with pool-eyed Simone Simon in the studio cafe. One look from that gal's orbs, and a man would tackle a navy of alligators bare-handed. Right now the changeable French actress is getting a real kick out of a new club, called "Double Doubles," formed in her honor. To belong, one's first and last names must match. Present members, for example, include Darsie L. Darsie, a golf writer; Gordon Gordon, a publicity expert, and two studio employes named George Georges and Arthur Arthur.

The list of members is swelling, and Simone is apparently taking a great personal interest in finding other doubly named persons. If you are eligible, you might write to her.

The action in "Slave Ship" takes place on a small sailing bark in the year 1840. I watched a fight scene in which Wallace Beery and Warner Baxter were having difficulty confining their skirmishes to a small area marked out as "in camera bounds." After spoiling several scenes by overstepping these bounds, Beery griped, "I can't do it here. There isn't enough room to swing a cat!" "Well," chided Baxter, "don't forget that this is a movie—not an acrobatic act."

Skeleton Mystery Studied by Expert

Hampton, Ark., Feb. 24 (AP).—Arkansas authorities—bewildered by a farmer's discovery of 20 apparently decapitated skeletons—called on a University of Arkansas expert today to aid in solving the mystery.

Dr. S. C. Dellinger, of the zoology faculty of the university at Fayetteville, was called to aid in the study of the skeletons.

Residents near the farm where J. E. Hall unearthed the bones of 19 adults and a child speculated that the bodies may have been those of victims of an 1891 race riot in this vicinity or that Hall's plow opened up an old Indian burying ground.

All-Star Cast Is Featured in 'Mrs. Cheyney'

Crawford, Powell, Montgomery Head Film Bill at Loew's Palace for Week.

Joan Crawford, William Powell and Robert Montgomery will be seen together for the first time in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the Frederic Lonsdale stage play, to be seen on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Joan Crawford is cast as a beautiful lady Raffles and is the Mrs. Cheyney of the story. Powell is cast as the light-fingered butler and Montgomery as a dashing, jaunty young fellow, whose part originally was played on the stage by Roland Young, if memory serves. Frank Morgan, Jessie Ralph, Benita Hume, Colleen Clare, Nigel Bruce and Ralph Forbes are the foremost members of the brilliant company of players assembled by M-G-M for this remake of a picture in which Norma Shearer once starred for the same company.

It should be a gay program that the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater is to unfurl for the week beginning tomorrow. The major screen item will be "Ready, Willing and Able," in which the stellar singing and dancing roles are taken by Ruby Keeler and Lee Dixon. It is, needless to say, a musical. In the cast supporting the dancing costars are such reliable comics as Louise Fazenda, Allen Jenkins, Wini Shaw, Carol Hughes and Teddy Hart. On the stage for the new week the entertainment will be headlined by Eddy Duchin, piano-playing conductor of one of the most popular orchestras before the public. With his Plaza Hotel Orchestra, Douchin will introduce the Galgary Brothers, Bliss Lewis and Ash, Gower and Jeanne, Jane Dover, Lou Sherwood and Charlie Trotter.

At the Gayety Theater next week Manager Jimmy Lake will present Sunya "Smiles" Slane, Vilma Jozcy, Billy "Wop" Moore and Bates and Hunt in "The Finesse of Burlesque," a new production of the Independent Burlesque Association. The principals will be supported by an able cast of dancers, singers, comedians and a peppy chorus.

These Three Continue Their Downtown Run a Week

JEAN ARTHUR, GARY COOPER AND JAMES ELLISON, as they appear in the roles of Calamity Jane, Wild Bill Hickok and William F. ("Buffalo Bill") Cody in Cecil B. DeMille's production of "The Plainsman," an epic of the Old West, which returned to the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater this week as chief feature of the bill. This glorified "Western" packs action of the most exciting and vivid sort and ends on a tragic note that lends it a little more than the usual dignity of a melodrama of the "wild and woolly." Goes a second week.

Paul Muni Has Nerve to Take Haunted House

Also Grows Impressive Beard for New Film of 'Emile Zola.'

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Feb. 24.—Swarthy Paul Muni will desert his San Fernando Valley ranch for a reputedly haunted shore house at Playa Del Rey, and it looks as if the ghosts, if any, are in for a tough time.

Muni denies he got his acting start as one of the gargoyles in "Hunchback of Notre Dame," but he has played almost every other grotesque role Hollywood has had to offer, and for this column's money he could haunt Boris Karloff.

Currently the actor is supporting an enormous brown beard for "Story of Emile Zola." He wore a lesser thatch in RKO's "Escadrille," and prior to that slanted an oriental eye in Metro's "Good Earth."

He'll have the beach home remodeled and ready for occupancy next fall, Muni said, but he doesn't know when he'll move in, since he plans a long vacation and a world cruise at about that time.

"I didn't know the house was haunted when I bought it," he said. "But it's all right with me. I'm not afraid of ghosts."

No statement on how the ghosts feel about it was available.

A New "Discovery."

Kimbol Grant, 22-year-old brunette from York, Pa., is to be launched in pictures by tap-dancing Ginger Rogers, her discoverer.

Rogers touted the gal to Director Mark Sandrich after spotting her picture in the radio section of a Los Angeles newspaper and hearing her program. Subsequent screen test turned out well, and Radio probably will offer her a contract.

Grant, who spent three years trying to crack Hollywood, is being coached by Mrs. Lela Rogers, the dancer's mother.

Panicky Metromen ordered armor for noontime boxers after Stanley Morner, Chicago singer, turned up with a tooth chipped in sparring.

Within the hour a dozen leather masks to protect classic profiles, and as many anti-cauliflower headguards were delivered to the studio gym and boxing stars ordered to wear them or else.

Lunch hour pat and duckers include Clark Gable, Buddy Ebsen, Spencer Tracy and George Murphy.

Mr. Gable Clicks.

An enterprising villager installed a motion picture theater in Kanab, Utah, and the result is burly Clark Gable will have to change his hunting base. Before the theater opened nobody knew who Gable was or cared. Now they've seen him do his screen stuff the entire population, white and Indian, is throwing a party for the guy.

Court Refuses Divorce Review To Mrs. Harris

Appellate Branch Rules Accepting Alimony Voids Appeal.

A wife who accepts benefits from a divorce decree is estopped from contesting the validity of the decree, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday in turning down the request of Mrs. Frances C. Harris for review of the action of the District Court in awarding her husband a divorce.

The Appellate Court pointed out that Mrs. Harris was divorced on grounds of infidelity and that her husband, David E. Harris, had been ordered to pay her $30 a month for a "reasonable period." Mrs. Harris accepted the maintenance payments and then contested the decision on the grounds she had been improperly found to be unfaithful to her husband.

In denying Mrs. Harris the right to a review of the opinion, the Court of Appeals sided with Jean M. Boardman, attorney for the husband, who claimed the wife could not appeal from a decision while accepting benefits under that same opinion. He said the wife could have obtained a separate ruling awarding her temporary maintenance so she would not have been left destitute.

The opinion, written by Chief Justice Martin, said "where a divorce is granted against the wife to whom an award of alimony is made, by accepting the alimony, she is precluded from taking and prosecuting an appeal from the decree of divorce."

Mrs. Cronmiller Funeral Is Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Susan Bansomer Cronmiller, who died Monday, were held yesterday from her home in Laurel, Md. Burial was in Loudon Park Cemetery, Baltimore. Officiating at the services was the Rev. John Neighbor, rector of St. Phillip's Episcopal Church, Laurel.

Mrs. Cronmiller, who at the time of her death was in her seventies, had been a resident of Laurel for more than 30 years.

She is survived by her husband, Le Page Cronmiller; four daughters, Mrs. H. L. Conner, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Ogle Marburry, of Laurel; Mrs. G. W. Steiger, of Cambridge, Mass., and Miss Josephine Cronmiller, of Laurel; one son, Capt. Le Page Cronmiller, jr., in the Marine Corps in Washington, and three grandchildren.

Revised Coal Bill Enactment Urged

By the Associated Press.

The House Ways and Means Committee urged enactmen of the revised Guffey-Vinson coal control bill yesterday "in view of threatening chaotic conditions" in the industry.

In a report made public yesterday, the majority of the House committee asserted that Chief Justice Hughes and three associate justices had expressed the opinion price-fixing provisions of the original act were constitutional.

Four Republican members of the committee, in a minority report made public yesterday, opposed he measure on the ground it would grant monopolistic power to the industry to fix its own minimum prices.

Pan-American University Aim Of Educator Near Realization

Realization of many years of hope seemed near yesterday for Dr. W. A. Kennedy, pioneer educator and founder of the first units for the proposed Pan-American University, located in Lima, Peru, and largely financed by North Americans.

Dr. Kennedy, former associate editor of The Washington Post, was in the city yesterday to complete organization of the Eastern foundation for the Instituto Panamericano he founded in Lima in 1935. He already has obtained agreement on the West Coast for providing endowments of $1,000,000 and $500,000. He said he had received promises in New York for the remaining $500,000 needed.

for in the United States will be used

He said the $2,000,000 arranged to erect a six-story university building and to employ a faculty of 40 professors, several from Columbia, Yale and Harvard, and the remainder for Latin-American republics, 20 of which are expected to participate in the plan. At present the faculty of the Instituto consists of six professors.

Work to Start Soon.

Work on the new building will start with his return to Lima this spring. He expects a total registration within two years of 2,000 students, drawn from every country on the Western Hemisphere. The hope of the institution, he said, is to cement the friendship of the American republics.

"Lima was chosen as the site because of its pleasant climate and its central location. Most of the contributing nations will be South American. We started with 10 students and a small classroom, and the quality of the teaching was so excellent we had 200 students the first year. I financed the institute myself from my life savings and have contributed it to the university."

Dr. Kennedy stated he could not reveal the names of the auto industrialists who are his guarantors in the Midwest, but disclosed Isidore Dockweiler, general counsel of the Southern Pacific; Walter Story, retired Army officer; C. Storrier-Stearns, retired banker; John G. Mott, wealthy lawyer, and Harry Chandler, multimillionaire Los Angeles publisher, as the directors of the Western Foundation.

Unusual Undertaking.

Dr. Kennedy's career has been marked by many unusual undertakings. He is the author of five published works, the latest being "The New King of Mayaland." He spent considerable time in Yucatan studying Maya ruins and has examined archeological ruins all over the world.

"In Java I came across something which may lead to the key to the undecipherable Maya hieroglyphs. Certain carvings on temple walls were the same, the squatting buddhas and a peculiar crocodile with mouth agape and a human head in the jaws. These lead me to believe there was some connection with the early American Indians and the Javanese. Further exploration led me to the key. I've already deciphered dates and names and believe I'm going to open up the whole secret of Maya civilization before Columbus."

Navy Head Rules Cadet Cases Closed

The dismissal of Midshipman James Lee Johnson, jr., colored, along with 134 white cadets dropped from Annapolis for failures in health or studies, is final and irrevocable, Secretary of the Navy Swanson stated yesterday. He said the cases of all 135 had been reinvestigated and he was satisfied there had been no railroading of the colored cadet.

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, colored, of Illinois, who appointed Johnson, refused to be consoled by the announcement, however.

"There has been no real investigation," he said, adding that neither he nor Johnson had been questioned. He admitted, however, that Johnson's dismissal probably would not be changed.

Secretary Swanson said he had asked Rear Admiral David R. Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, to have the Academic Board review its original decisions affecting the 135 cadets. "It is final action, so far as I am concerned," he said, adding that the board's decision had been sent to President Roosevelt.

Selassie Adviser Funeral Today

Funeral services for Everett A. Colson, financial adviser to Emperor Haile Selassie, will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at Hysong's undertaking establishment. The body then will be taken to Ironton, Ohio, for burial.

Colson died late Tuesday night in George Washington University Hospital.

Colson went to Ethiopia in 1930. Previously he had served as financial adviser to the Philippine government and he Chinese government.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Anna Johnson Colson; a son, Edward Colson, a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and his stepmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Gillstrapp, of California.

Oklahomans Will Seek Absentee Voters' Law

Meeting in the Hill Building branch of the RFC, District Oklahomans tonight will sign a petition to their State legislature asking absentee voting. Along with the petition which will be sent to Oklahoma in early March, will go the absentee bill now being drawn up by a committee sitting in the Senate Office Building.

Present at the meeting will be Elmer B. Wallace, of the Government Printing Office, chairman of the absentee bill committee; D. C. McCurtain, of the Indian affairs branch of the Interior Department; Guy Patten, attorney in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Mrs. Emanuel Samuels, manager of the Hill Building branch of the RFC. All are Oklahomans resident in the District.

Robbery Attempt Suspects Are Held

Charged with the attempted robbery of the Arcade Laundry, 735 Lamont street northwest, February 16, a white man and three colored men were held for the action of the grand jury yesterday.

Pleading not guilty when arraigned before Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey, the men were identified as Clifford L. Gibbons, 1400 Fifth street northwest, white; Robert C. Chambers, no fixed address; Nathaniel Cobbs, 3200 block Sherman avenue northwest, and Anthony Kirby, 700 block Harvard street northwest.

According to Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett, who testified against the men, the job had been "fingered" three weeks before the attempted robbery. Barrett accused Chambers as the man who entered the laundry office and who was routed by Miss Eleanor Campbell, 28-year-old cashier. Chambers allegedly fired at Miss Campbell, only to be struck over the head with a broom wielded by the woman.

2 Killers Hinted In Torso Deaths

Cleveland, Feb. 24 (AP).—Detectives reached tonight the same impasse in their investigation of Cleveland's eighth mysterious torso slaying as in each of the previous beheadings.

An all-day search of Lake Erie's rocky, East Side shore line produced no clews, no additional parts of the woman's body, the trunk of which washed ashore yesterday at almost the same spot where the first torso was found September 5, 1934.

Acting Safety Director Robert W. Chamberlin said tonight he believed at least two killers were responsible for the butchery in the last two and a half years.

Study of Civil Service Bills Set Tomorrow

Chairman Bulow of the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday called an executive meeting for tomorrow morning.

All pending bills will be considered, Senator Bulow said, among them the McCarran pay-rise measure. The committee will decide whether to schedule public hearings on the bills.

Rossiter Is Slated To Hold Navy Post

Rear Admiral Percival S. Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy, and chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, will be reappointed to that position when his present term expires March 16. The Navy Department stated his reappointment does not indicate abandonment of the present policy not to reappoint bureau chiefs, but is a result of Admiral Rossiter's familiarity with the Naval Medical Center and the new naval hospital soon to be built.

A graduate of the University of Maryland, where he received his medical degree, he is the sixth surgeon general to come from the State of Maryland. After service with the Army in the Spanish American War, he was appointed assistant surgeon in the Navy in 1903. His previous service includes duty in Honolulu, at the Naval Academy, Brazil, San Francisco and on the staff of the commander, Naval Transport Service in the North Atlantic Convoy Service during the World War.

He was appointed to his present post in 1933. He will continue at his present post until November, 1938, when he reaches retirement age.

Mrs. Respighi Takes Plaudits at Premiere

Milan, Italy, Feb. 24 (AP).—With tears in her eyes, the widow of Ottorino Respighi, celebrated opera composer who was known in New York almost as well as in Italy, took the bows to a first-night audience tonight at the premiere of her husband's posthumous opera "Lucretia."

Signora Elsa Olivieri Respighi, who finished the opera for her husband, and Gino Marinuzzi, conductor of the royal opera-house in Rome, who conducted, were overwhelmed by the reception of a distinguished audience.

Lilies Overrun Farm.

Cleveland, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Years ago many beds of calla lilies were developed at the city farm for funerals of city politicians. The city board of control was told today the death rate of politicians has dropped to such extent that the farm is being overrun with lilies. The board arranged with a florist to sell the surplus political flowers.

Electors Called Just 'Dummies'

By the Associated Press.

Simon Michelet, president of the National Get-Out-the-Vote Club, renewed yesterday his 10-year-old war on the Nation's Presidential electors.

"The electors," he snapped, "are so many honorary dummies."

Contending their names clutter up the ballots, the G. O. T. V. C. chief called for a constitutional amendment providing for direct election of the President. Eleven States, he said, left the electors' names off the 1936 ballots. Nearly all carried the names of candidates for President and Vice President.

Birth of Prince Saves Erring Italian Pupils

Rome, Feb. 24 (AP).—Errant school boys and girls throughout Italy today had the infant Prince of Naples to thank for escape from the teacher's birch rod.

To celebrate the recent birth of their heir to the Italian throne, the ministry of education decreed that boys and girls of all national schools be released from punishment for "all derelictions."

J. T. Stephenson Funeral Is Held

Funeral serveices were held yesterday at the Deal undertaking establishment for Jessie T. Stephenson, 87, father of Dr. E. T. Stephenson, physician, of 208 Maryland avenue northeast.

Stephenson died at the Home of Incurables Tuesday. He had been ill since he fractured his hip about four years ago in a fall at his son's summer home at North Beach Park, Md.

Besides Dr. Stephenson, he leaves three other sons, Emmett and Barto Stephenson, both of Dallas, and Andrew Stephenson, of San Antonio, Tex. He also leaves a sister in Mississippi, several grandchildren and several great grandchildren.

Roosevelt Asked to Church Opening

President Franklin D. Roosevelt has been invited to attend the formal opening of Trinity Episcopal Church in Takoma Park on March 7, it was announced yesterday by Carl A. Hoglund, chairman of the building committee.

The church, built at a cost of $50,000, is being completed ahead of schedule due to the mild winter. Ground for the structure was broken in October.

Two formal services will mark the opening of the church, one at 11 a. m., to which President Roosevelt is invited and the other at 8 p. m., when Canon Anson Phelps Stokes and Bishop James E. Freeman will attend.

Meeting at Howard U. To Memorialize Pushkin

A meeting memorializing Alexander Pushkin, Russian poet, has been called by the Howard Teachers Union, the Stylus Literary Club and the Moorland Room of Howard University, for tomorrow afternoon at 3:15 o'clock in the auditorium of Frederick Douglas Hall. The Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Troyanovsky, and the Embassy Secretary, Contantine Umansky, have accepted invitations to make the principal addresses.

Sterling A. Brown, professor of English, will pay a special tribute to the poet. Readings from Pushkin's poems will be given by a representative of the Stylus Club, with incidental music. Eugene Holmes, professor of philosophy, will preside.

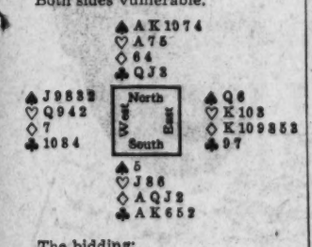
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

A Saving Squeeze.

Whenever a declarer can count 11 top tricks he should think seriously about a squeeze play for the twelfth. (This is, of course, assuming that the opponents have not two set-up tricks that they can take at their own volition.) It follows then that the squeeze play is the salvation of many an overbid contract.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

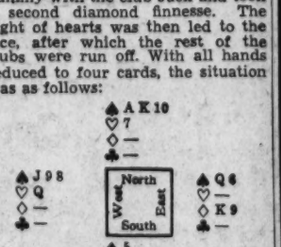


The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 N T	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 N T	Pass
5 N T	Pass	6 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

North intended his takeout of three notrump to four clubs as a mild slam try. Whether or not such an effort was justified on his holding is a moot point. South jumped at the chance to go to a slam, but why he choose notrump instead of the safer appearing club suit is a mystery.

On the bidding West's safest opening lead would have been a club, but he chose the fourth-best heart. East won the King, and shifted to the ten of diamonds (a heart return would have done no good). Declarer took the diamond finesse, then entered dummy with the club Jack and took a second diamond finnesse. The eight of hearts was then led to the Ace, after which the rest of the clubs were run off. With all hands reduced to four cards, the situation was as follows:



The lead of the Ace of diamonds put West out of the running. In order to guard dummy's spade suit he had to let go the heart Queen. Declarer then cashed the Jack of hearts before leading his spade to dummy for the final two tricks.

Many Capital Girls to Attend Yale Junior Prom, Gala Event of the Collegiate Social Season

800 Invited Guests to Dance at Tomorrow's Affair; University's Whiffenpoofs, Rudy Vallee's Orchestra to Entertain.

By Dudley Harmon.

Washington will be well represented in New Haven tomorrow at the Yale junior prom, which is almost as old as Yale University. It's the biggest event of the collegiate social season and young ladies well known in Capital society are among the 800 guests invited.

Miss Elizabeth Sibley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harper Sibley, will be escorted by Mr. Walter B. Squire, of New Haven. Miss Louise Alexander will be the guest of Mr. Robert T. Reeder, also of Washington, and Miss Betty Radeker, of Logan Robertson, of Asheville, N. C.

Miss Jean Godwin and Miss Christine Gawne will attend the festivities with Mr. Eugene Van Loan, jr., of Athens, Ga., and Mr. Paul M. Wick, of Youngstown, Ohio. Mr. Samuel R. Watkins, of Washington, will have as his guest Miss Barbara Kent, and others from here who will attend include Miss Nancy Motter with Mr. John S. Stringer, of St. Paul, Minn.; Miss Clara Bayne Brasel with Mr. Cornelius Dwyer, of Hackensack, N. J.; Miss Alice King Leake with Mr. John Dirks, of New York; Miss Dorothy Warrington, of Chevy Chase, who will be the guest of Mr. J. J. Weinberger, of Sayre, Pa., and Miss Sunny Conlin, whose escort will be Melvin P. Osborne, of Omaha, Nebr.

Different Procedure Followed.

In the bygone days the "promenade" lived up strictly to its name and the students and their guests walked sedately around the room under the watchful eye of a corps of chaperones. Now it's different.

Yale's celebrated alumnus, Rudy Vallee, will be there in person with his Connecticut Yankees to provide music for the affair. Dignified Woolsey Hall, scene of many an impressive scholastic ceremony, will be for this evening converted into a huge ballroom decorated with smilax and evergreens. Overhead a blue-tipped shell will remind the guests of Yale's athletic prowess.

Another well-known pair of graduates, the Howard twins, will do some of their piano numbers. They are as alike as peas, and have not been out of college more than four or five years.

Whiffenpoofs to Entertain.

Other entertainment will include a program by the Yale Whiffenpoofs and stars from the Vallee orchestra. The prom will be led by the chairman, Mr. George H. Weed, of Savannah, with his guest, Miss Hester Reed, of New York.

There won't be much chance to rest from the dance over Saturday. Guests will be busy attending a presentation of "The Weavers" by the Yale Dramatic Association, assisted by the dramatic department of Sarah Lawrence College, and the Yale-Harvard hockey game which takes place in the evening. Then there'll be a round of tea dances, dinners, formal dances and even breakfasts in the small hours of the morning.

Many Farewell Parties Planned For Retiring Cuban Ambassador

Numerous farewell parties are scheduled in honor of the retiring Ambassador of Cuba Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson.

The Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun will entertain at a luncheon in his honor today at the embassy and the Chilean Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, is giving a men's luncheon for him Saturday. Tomorrow evening the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles will give a dinner in honor of the Ambassador.

Patterson was host at a tea and reception in the embassy yesterday afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock. The guests were members of the Cuban colony in Washington, who gathered to celebrate the forty-second anniversary of the beginning of the revolution which brought about Cuban independence.

Dr. Patterson expects to leave Washington about the first of March to return to Havana for a brief visit before continuing on to his new post in Mexico. He will be accompanied by his son, the Third Secretary of the embassy. Senor Dr. Enrique Patterson, and his family who also are going to Mexico for station. His daughter, Miss Olga Patterson, will remain in Washington for a month longer as the guest of Senorita Rebecca Trucco, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile.

The Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, and Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley were the ranking guests at the dinner which the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne gave in the legation last evening.

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, who has been in Mexico for the past several weeks, will return to Washington tomorrow.

Rep. Wigglesworth and Wife Are Hosts at Cocktail Party

Representative and Mrs. Richard B. Wigglesworth entertained at a small and informal cocktail party yesterday afternoon for Mrs. Wigglesworth's brother, Mr. Alexander Booth, of Louisville, Ky. He is in Washington until Sunday and is visiting them at their home on Thirtieth street.

The house, owned by Mrs. Robert Lister Macneil, was occupied formerly by the United States Ambassador to Rome and Mrs. William Phillips. The guests gathered in the long drawing room, which has walls and draperies of a dull gold color and book shelves reaching the ceiling. A bright fire burned on the hearth.

Mrs. Wigglesworth wore a black velvet tea gown with a slight train and a narrow sash of crimson and yellow satin. Among the guests were Col. and Mrs. Thornthwaite, of Australia, who are visitig in the Capital en route to the Pacific Coast. Also present was Mrs. John Hollister, wife of the former Representative from Ohio, who is staying with Representative and Mrs. Wigglesworth.

Among other guests were the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Heywood, Frau Scholz, of the German Embassy; Mrs. Higgins Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, of Alexandria, and several former classmates of Mr. Booth's at Harvard Law School, among them, Mr. Gerhardt van Arkel.

Mrs. Edward C. Kintner, wife of Capt. Kintner, U. S. N., leaves tomorrow for Philadelphia to visit Mrs. Edwin O. Troth and from there will go to New York, where she will be the guest of Mrs. George Waring at the Plaza.

Sir Arthur and Lady Willert arrived in Washington last evening and were overnight guests at the White House. They will remain in the Capital for a brief stay.

Miss Audrey Campbell and Miss Gertrude Webb have left for New York and are staying at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel there until they sail shortly for Bermuda to spend several weeks.

Miss Mabel Boardman is visiting Commander and Mrs. Paulus P. Powell at their home in Newport. They will entertain at a dinner in her honor this evening and in the afternoon she will speak at a joint meeting of the Navy Relief Society and Newport Chapter of the Red Cross.

Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer Entertains Friends At Luncheon Here

Mme. Gustav Orlicz-Dreszer, widow of the inspector general of the Polish army, entertained a small company of friends at the Shoreham yesterday afternoon. Three of the guests only recently have come from Warsaw as has Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer, who is here visiting her mother and daughters until April.

Those who were formerly in Poland were Mme. Babes, wife of the new First Secretary of the Rumanian Legation, who arrived in the Capital just two weeks ago; Mrs. Claire Huddle, wife of the former American consul general in Warsaw, who now is inspector of the United States consulates in that area, and Mrs. Clayton Lane, wife of the former commercial attache of the American Embassy there.

Other guests were Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter, Mme. Poradzewska, Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, Mrs. Dorothy Watson and Mrs. Fenton Bradford.

Dr. and Mrs. Cajigas Hosts For Daughter and Segovias

It was a two-in-one party that Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, who are famous for their jolly informal affairs, gave last evening in their Sixteenth street home. They were hosts in honor of the celebrated guitarist and Senora Segovia. The buffet supper was also in celebration of the fifteenth birthday anniversary of their young daughter, Senorita Anita Cajigas.

Mrs. Cajigas wore a crepe gown of dark plum, the short wide sleeves of which were studded with large, flat beads of the same dark shade. Anita had on a frock of violet crepe made on simple lines. On her dark hair was a juliet cap of rhinestones. As each guest arrived she made the rounds, never once faltering in her introductions.

Senora Segovia in Black.

Senora Segovia, petite, a blue-eyed person who wears her dark hair braided about her head, was wearing a gown of black satin, the full skirt fashioned of tiers lined with scarlet satin.

Piping hot and spicy empenadas, those popular Latin-American delicacies that have proved such a hit in Washington, were served with the delicious cocktail punch.

Following supper there was a program of music. Anita was the first, playing a piano selection. She was followed by Mme. Elena de Sayn, violinist, and Miss Dorothy Paul, pianist, who gave a series of well known compositions from seven nationalities. Mrs. Thomas Burke, talented young musician and artist, was persuaded to desert the ranks of the audience last evening and provide her share of the evening's entertainment. She was wearing an unusual printed frock of shades of orange, yellow, cream, beige and black.

Among the Guests.

Among the guests were Mme. Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, in black satin with a bodice of pewter lame, who was accompanied by her daughter, Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, costumed in a demure frock of coronation blue net with rhinestone straps; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the latter attired in black satin designed on smartly simple lines with a cluster of dark red and green flowers at the V neck; Mme. Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic, wearing a redingote effect gown of black and white embroidered starched chiffon over vivid green satin; the Dominican Minister to London and Senora Enrique Urena, the latter in black crepe; and Mme. Espinet who wore a frock of black crepe combined with a soft Paisley print.

Also the former President of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, she wearing a brief navy blue taffeta jacket with her white taffeta gown embroidered with dark blue; the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd, she wearing a gown of black ribbed crepe fashioned with a bodice of white beadec crepe which had a sash of scarlet; the former Minister of Venezuela and Mme. Arcaya, the latter in blue and white printed chiffon; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Dr. and Mrs. GeGorge Trible, Senator Arthur Capper, Dr. and Mrs. Jose Guillermo Lewis, Mrs. Austin Jeffries and Miss Providence Geigel.

The MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Mrs. William Laird Dunlop is back and simply brimming over with news and interesting stories of her trip with Marjorie Walsh out through the Canal to California, and the visits on the Gold Coast. In Panama, Mrs. D. luckily purchased several of those bright striped knitting bags that stretch and stretch, and can be stuffed full of things—because she certainly did a lot of buying and with her visits in Mexico and the Canal Zone shops, to say nothing of San Francisco's Chinatown, she returned with many reminders of her travels.

Marjorie had originally planned to get across to Hawaii, but boats weren't sailing at the proper times and it seemed for a while as though she would not get to the island paradise.

So they waited and trusted something would happen. However, after a month's absence from her family here, Mrs. D. felt the urge to return home and did so, not before Suzanna Walsh and a family friend from Cincinnati had joined Marjorie in San Francisco. However. The girls and their companion finally got a ship and sailed from the Golden Gate at 11 o'clock Sunday night. By today they should be nearing their destination, passing old Diamond Head and gliding into Honolulu Harbor, with its Aloha Tower.

Dick Baer will have the leading role in "The Tempest" which the boys of Princeton and the Finch School girls will join forces and present sometime during May, about Houseparty Week. One of the young misses likely to have a very prominent part, if not the feminine lead, is Jane Rich, who is following in the footsteps of her famous mother, Irene Rich.

The next time Alice Forrey Griffith has the bright inspiration to take home a fancy party hat to her young daughter, she will most likely keep it safely tucked out of sight until at a comfortable and proper time the next day. Not long ago she went home from a gay party with a huge colorful hat, just the thing to delight the heart of Alice, jr., and so that she would be sure to find it, placed it upon the foot of the little tot's bed. Small Alice awoke at an unusually early hour, saw her new treasure and with a squeal of joy bounced from beneath the warm fleecy blankets, grabbed the hat and dashed around to show the entire household

Vera Story in russet tweeds, her fair curls tossed by the wind, was fairly rushing along Q street being pulled along by an energetic Scottie tugging at the end of a leash. Way behind her came Mrs. Henry Roosevelt (her prospective mother-in-law, you know), and Eleanor.

Dr. Oscar Albertini and Senor Carlos Blanco, of the Cuban Embassy, chose the Shoreham ballroom for their "shop talk" the other evening when they had dinner together. They have discovered the proper way to discuss the affairs of state. After talking seriously they took time out and joined some friends at a nearby table for some light banter, later returning to their table and business.

Cliffords Entertain.

Capt. and Mrs. A. B. Clifford entertained at dinner last evening at the Little Tea House, their guests being Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Mitchell, of San Diego; Capt. and Mrs. Henry de F. Mel, Miss Betty B. Mitchell, of San Diego, and Mr. Albert Rouse.

Bryn Mawr President To Be Honored at Tea

Miss Chouteau Dyer, Actress Classmate of Miss Olivia Stokes, One of Hostesses, Among Guests to Attend Affair.

Among the Bryn Mawr alumnae who will attend the tea being given by Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes and Miss Olivia Stokes tomorrow afternoon for President Marion Edwards Park, of the college, will be Miss Chouteau Dyer, who is appearing in the current production of "Pride and Prejudice" here. Miss Dyer was graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1931 in the class with Miss Stokes, Mrs. John Farr Simmons, the former Miss Caroline Thompson, and Mrs. Jameson Parker, of Baltimore, the former Miss Sydney B. Sullivan, whom she frequently visited in Washington during their school days.

She was here a year ago, when the play opened in the Capital before it reached Broadway. Last May she took a leave of absence from the cast long enough to return to Bryn Mawr and appear in the May Day fete there.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chouteau Dyer, of St. Louis, where she made her debut during the Christmas holidays in 1929. She returned to college afterward and, when she had completed her work at Bryn Mawr, went abroad to study at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London. She visited her parents in St. Louis last Christmas, while "Pride and Prejudice," in which she has the role of Charlotte, was playing there.

The tea at which Mrs. Stokes and her daughter are entertaining tomorrow is one of the functions being given in connection with the meeting of the Bryn Mawr Alumnae Council which convenes here today. Miss Stokes will have as her house guest Miss Virginia Atmore, of Wayne, Pa.

Assisting at the tea table will be Mrs. Carroll Miller, Mrs. Simmons, Miss Elizabeth Morison, Miss Sara Jenkins Smith, Miss Frances Carter, and Mrs. Michael Straus.

Mrs. Norman Murray Smith, wife of Rear Admiray Smith, who is entertaining the council members at luncheon at her home tomorrow, will be assisted by Miss Elizabeth Eastman, Mrs. Alger Hiss, president of the Washington Alumnae; Mrs. Donald Blaisdell, Mrs. Michael Straus, and Mrs. Edward O. Hurlburt, of Alexandria.

Mrs. William Howard Taft will have as a guest, in addition to her daughter, Dean Helen Taft Manning, during the council meeting Miss Mary Gardner, of Bryn Mawr. Mrs. Charles Myers, of St. Davids, Pa., will be a guest of Mrs. Alexander Zabriskie, in Alexandria as will Mrs. Thomas W. Streeter, of New Jersey; Mrs. Howell Moorehead will have with her Miss Marjorie Thompson, of Haverford, Pa. Miss Cecelia Oppenheimer will have as her guest Mrs. Edward Luken, of Mount Airy, Pa., and Miss Frances Carter will have Miss Jane Matteson and Miss Lucy Kimberley, both from Bryn Mawr.

Mrs. Maurice Moore, of Sewanee, Tenn., will be the guest of Miss Julia Gardner at the Arts Club; Mrs. George Milmine, of Lakeville, Conn., will be entertained by Mrs. Charlotte Jamieson and Miss Dorothy Straus, prominent New York attorney, by Mrs. Eliot O'Hara.

Miss Morison and Miss Smith, who have as their guest Miss Mary Tausig, of St. Louis, will entertain at an informal cocktail party for her on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Ernest Greens, of New Canaan, Conn., has arrived in Washington and is at the Shoreham for a few days before going to Clearwater, Fla.

Dean H. G. Doyle To Address Club

'Spanish America Looks at Yaquilanda' to Be Subject.

The Congressional Club at its regular Friday tea this week is having as guest speaker Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of George Washington University. His subject will be "Spanish America Looks at Yanquilanda."

At the tea table will be Mmes. Jesse P. Wolcott, Gardner R. Withrow, Anthony J. Diamond and Samuel W. King, and Misses Margaret D. and Mary P. Clements.

On the hospitality committee are Mmes. Bertrand H. Snell, Allard H. Gasque, Roy O. Woodruff and Robert P. Hill.

Lecture on Spain To Be Given Here

Patronesses have been announced for the lecture to be given in St. John's Parish Hall on Sixteenth street Saturday at 4.45 p. m., by Mr. Clarence A. Phillips, of the Carnegie Endowment. His talk will be illustrated by motion pictures and colored slides taken on his visit to Spain and Portugal last summer. Proceeds of the lecture will be for the benefit of St. Monica's League.

The patronesses include Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. James E. Freeman, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. William Holland Wilmer, Mrs. A. R. Shands, Mrs. Howard S. Wilkinson, Mrs. Albert H. Lucas and Mrs Oliver J. Hart.

Rev. Parsons to Speak.

The Rev. Wilfred Parsons, S. J., of Georgetown University, former editor of America, Catholic weekly, will talk on the Catholic press at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at Notre Dame Hall, under the auspices of the Sodality Union literary group.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Divorced Man of 25, With Child to Support, Can't Decide Which of Three Women to Marry, If Any.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 25 years old with two years' high school education and a dependable job paying $125 a month. I have traveled widely and am well informed on general topics. I have two lady friends who are much interested in me. One has looks and a lovely personality, but she is insanely jealous of me, has very little education and is always sick. The other also has a lovely personality, good social contacts and pretty good health, but she is intellectually my superior. The first is a clerk and the second is a teacher. Everyone of us has been married, but we are separated from our respective former mates, and I have a son to support, which takes one-fourth of my salary, so you see remarriage is impossible for me at present.

* * * *

I want to marry again some day but since I have a child by my first marriage to support, I sometimes wonder if I could possibly support another family. I'm not the kind of man who would want a woman to support me, but I can't see how it would help me to marry a girl like the one first mentioned. On the other hand, could I be happy with a wife who was my intellectual superior, even though I am not considered a dumb man? I enjoy good literature and out-door sports and most of my friends, with the exception of a few, are college graduates, and I never feel out of place with them.

* * * *

One other thing has been a puzzle to me for eight years. Perhaps you can help clear it up. Ten years ago I met a young lady, then about 14 (as I was at the time) and we were sweethearts for nearly 2 years. Then a friend of mine won her away from me and after eight years they were married. The marriage lasted only a few months. During all those years I occupied a sort of big-brother position in her life, and now and again we would confess our love for each other. This happened both before and after both of us were married and we have never been able to figure out the best thing to do.

Do you think we could take up where we left off ten years ago and find happiness together? This question has come up between us several times, but not knowing the best thing to do, we have always lapsed back into the brotherly-love relationship. Now we think something must be settled and she has given me a week in which to decide. Her former husband, by the way, sometimes drops in to see me and asks advice about their affairs, but I have none to give where she is concerned. Please answer as soon as possible. Thank you. Yours truly,

B. F.

What to Believe.

DEAR B. F.: Since the girl first mentioned lacks educational equipment and good health and is insanely jealous besides, I believe you would be wise in checking her off your list of matrimonial prospects. The fact that the second named woman is your intellectual superior would not necessarily disqualify her for being a congenial and really helpful wife. But the fact that you are on the defensive against her mental superiority might make a difference. If you were really proud of and grateful for the fact that she is your intellectual superior in the field of book learning, and yet both realized that you have talents in other fields equally to be respected and admired, you might get along beautifully together, and she might be instrumental in helping you achieve greater success than you dream of at present.

* * * *

Of the three women mentioned, however, it appears you are more nearly in love with your childhood sweetheart than with the others. Long acquaintanceship and tested compatibility of temperament go a long way toward making a happy marriage, for this obviates many of those disagreeable discoveries of big differences over little things which often follow in the wake of hastily arranged unions. The fact that you and she have fallen into the habit of confessing your love for each other at intervals and of seeing each other more or less continuously, would suggest that there is some fundamental, indestructible bond between you.

* * * *

There is some truth in the old saying tha "two can live as cheaply as one," if the party of the second part is an intelligent, energetic, strong-winded and sound-limbed woman with good judgment and an economical bent of mind. A divorced man living bachelor fashion on $125 a month, one-fourth of which must be set aside for maintenance of a child, probably spends far more for less return than would a woman similarly situated. I suggest you to talk the matter over in detail with the long-time girl friend, and get her candid opinion on the advisability of marrying. Make it plain that you have little to offer except devotion and companionship; that you realize she would be taking a chance and making some sacrifice in accepting what you have to offer, but that if she is willing to take that chance and make that sacrifice, you are prepared to meet her more than half-way.

* * * *

If you agree, after frank and serious discussion of the situation, that marriage is out of the question, then you will simply have to resign yourself to the prospect of enforced bachelordom until you have increased your earning powers. And in that event, try to stop appraising every girl you meet as a potential wife. Accept your women acquaintances as friends and get what consolation you can out of cheerful, casual companionship. M. H.

Children Are Taught to Like Different Foods, Not Dally Over Meals at Nursery School

Luncheon at the National Child Research Center is fun for both children and teachers. Here, Miss Doris Erwin is guiding Henry Brown and Mary Alice Stoutenburgh in proper eating. At this school the menus are worked out to furnish the necessary food requirements as well as to have appetite appeal.

Research Center Menus Both Healthful and Appetizing.

By Rebekah Blake.

ARE YOU ONE of those parents who says "I simply can't make Junior stop playing with his food," or "Mary won't learn to eat her spinach?" If so, a visit to the National Child Reserach Center at lunch time would provide you with some suggestions.

There you would see several small tablets placed around the room with four or five children and a teacher sitting at each table. At one end of the room is a serving table at which a teacher is seated. One child from each table is making trips back and forth to the serving table to get the plates for his companions. After the plates have been served, he pours the milk from a pitcher for his playmates and the teacher.

At one table a pouty-faced boy pushes away his plate. "I don't like liver!" he exclaims.

Learns to Like It.

The teacher smiles. "No, but you are learning to like it," she tells him. "You will learn to like all the food here, though it is different from that at home." Then, as he continues to sulk, she adds, "Put some of it in your mouth and get the taste of it." He obeys. When he has eaten the liver she praises him.

One of the mottos of the school is "A clean plate," and to this end the disliked food is always served first, as there is seldom any trouble getting a child to eat dessert.

At the Child Center, feeding is put on a scientific basis. Not only are the child's reactions to food studied scientifically, but menus are worked out to appeal to children's taste and furnish the necessary food requirements. Miss Elsa Moody, nutritionist, has worked with the Bureau of Home Economics in preparing these menus. Mrs. Adelia B. Heiney, director of the center, has worked with her staff of teachers, studying the best methods of child feeding and training.

Allow for "Slow Eaters."

A child is studied while he is at the table, according to Mrs. Heiney. "If he is naturally a slow eater," she says, "he is considered and not punished. But if he plays with his food, he is sent in for his nap as soon as he has finished eating and is not allowed to play with the others between his meal and his sleep."

An instructor checks the child's food habits while he is at the table, and knows just how long it should take him to eat each individual dish. The parents are told about his eating so they may know what to expect from him at home. The problems of the day are discussed with the parents each afternoon when they come for the youngsters.

At 10:30 o'clock each child has a glass of tomato juice. This is about 2½ ounces for the extra vitamins and minerals that he needs. Starting at 11:45 o'clock, luncheon is served, with the youngest group having its meal first and the kindergarten group last. Each group is allowed 15 minutes for luncheon. After their nap, the children each get a 7½ ounce glass of milk and a Graham cracker.

Protein, Vegetables.

The main part of the meal is served first. This consists of a protein, such as meat, fish, an egg or a meat substitute, and one or two vegetables. One of the vegetables is always a colored food. When the child has eaten his main course, he is given half slice of buttered whole wheat toast or a similar amount of bread, as a sandwich with chopped raw vegetable or fruit mixed with butter as a filling and 1½ glasses of milk, or about 10½ ounces. After the child has eaten this, he is given dessert, usually fruit.

"Nursery schools as a whole," says Miss Moody, "have concluded that serving luncheon in courses speeds up the entire meal and helps the child complete each part of the meal more satisfactorily." She believes that any child of 18 months can have most adult foods, as most food problems of children are in the family set-up and may be smoothed out by proper treatment.

The nursery school lunch is usually the heaviest meal; it is planned to furnish about one-half the child's daily requirements of energy and building material and slightly more than one-half of his vitamin and mineral requirements. The menu always is planned with emphasis on iron food. A week's menu roughly contains the following:

Protein: Liver once a week (rich in iron); eggs as a main dish at least once a week; fish once a week (rich in iron); meat (ground beef or lamb), once or twice a week; a meat substitute, as lima beans, eggs or a combination dish containing a small amount of meat, once a week.

Carbohydrate: Whole wheat toast (buttered) three times a week (furnishes minerals and vitamins, as well as an agent for hard chewing and strengthening the teeth and gums); whole wheat sandwiches twice a week with a filling of chopped raw fruits or vegetables mixed with butter; potatoes twice a week, usually. Desserts may be a simple cornstarch pudding flavored with a small amount of cocoa, or some fruit, or a fruit dessert containing whole wheat bread, as in apple brown betty or a fruit tapioca.

Fruits and vegetables: A green vegetable is served three times a week and a colord vegetable every day; a fruit dessert is served nearly every day; prunes and apricots, which are rich in iron, are each served in some form once a week.

The folowing general rules are followed in preparation of the children's food:

Only fat used is butter.

Vegetables are cooked as short a time as possible in a very small amount of water to retain flavor and mineral content.

Meat is ground or chopped fine.

All vegetables are chopped in small pieces for easier handling for children.

Meat is broiled, baked or stewed—never fried.

Onions, except as seasoning, are too strongly flavored to be popular with children. Cooked cabbage is not often served, as it has a tendency to produce flatulence.

Only brown sugar is used in the recipes.

When questions about the origin of food are asked by the older children, they are allowed to cook. If they wonder how they get bread, they are allowed to make biscuits, and if they think that carrots grow in the thin slivers that are served in meals, they prepare them. They start with raw carrots and clean, cut and cook them for their own food.

Put in a mixing bowl ¼ cup sugar, 4 tablespoons shortening, 1 teaspoon salt and ½ cup scalded milk. When lukewarm, add 1 yeast cake softened in 3 tablespoons warm water, 2 egg yolks, ¼ teaspoon vanilla, ¼ teaspoon lemon extract, ¼ teaspoon mace and 1 cup flour. Beat well, add 1 cup flour, stir with a knife until well mixed, add sufficient flour to knead and knead until smooth and elastic keeping the dough as soft as possible. Put in refrigerator for 30 to 40 minutes and roll out in a piece ¼-inch thick. Wash 6 ounces (¾ cup) butter, cut in halves; cut one part in many small pieces and place in the center of the strip of dough. Fold one end of dough over to cover the butter, place remaining butter cut in small bits on top and cover with the other end of dough, pressing edges together firmly. Turn quarter-way around, pat with rolling pin and roll as thin as possible, lifting it frequently to keep it from sticking. Fold each way to the center, pat firmly, fold to make four layers, turn quarter-way around and pat, lift, roll and fold three times, chilling between rollings. Roll thin, cut in strips ¾ to ½ inch wide. Shape like figure eights, or knots, or coils. Let rise halfway and bake in a 500 Fahrenheit oven for 10 minutes; reduce heat to 350 F. and finish baking. Brush with confectioners' frosting and put conserve or jam in the hollow parts of the pastry.

Regal Peacock Design Adds Beauty to Linen Handiwork

PATTERN 5769.

By Alice Brooks.

NOTHING freshens up a house so effectively as new linens. Add a choice decoration to your home by selecting this regal peacock as your next bit of handiwork. The cutwork is very simple—the bars are used to form an effective part of the design. Use the motifs on scarfs, teacloth, chair sets or pillow top—do them in a thread matching the linen or in their natural coloring. In pattern 5769 you will find a transfer pattern of two motifs 6¾ x 10¼ inches, two and two reverse motifs 3 x 3¼ inches; illustrations of all stitches used; color suggestions; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

How Can a Girl Win Love?

SOME GIRLS surround themselves with admirers almost without trying. These lucky girls can pick and choose the one ann only man.

It isn't a matter of clothes—or cosmetics—or a permanent wave—anything that money can buy. They have the "success habit."

It may not be fair — but it's true—men flock around the girl whom others find attractive. The more suitors she already has, the more desirable she seems to the next man. But the lonely girl doesn't rate a second glance.

The solution for the lonely girl, then, is to quit being lonesome. How? She'll begin by collecting a few men and girls like herself and giving a party. Or joining a class or club.

She'll make each man she meets feel he's a great fellow, show respect for his opinions, interest in his problems. Naturally he'll want to talk with her. And the man across the room will think, "There's a real girl." So she adds another admirer.

If one man shows interest in her, she'll not drop other friends. If an affair cools, she'll keep the man as a friend. Men friends are valuable as background, proof of a woman's fascination.

As her admirers grow in number, her confidence and skill in attracting men will grow, too. She'll make herself so irresistible that when the right man comes along, she'll win him with ease.

Our 40-page booklet, Success in Love and Marriage, tells secrets of winning and holding love. How to handle the baffling problems that confront every woman.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Success in Love and Marriage, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Short Dance Dresses Are Displayed in Paris

Paris (AP).—New Paris style showings feature striking, short dance dresses of organdie and embroidered tulle.

Some of the dresses have full skirts while others have thick, rainbow-colored ruchings at the neck and hem.

Heavy embroideries of multi-colored flowers load many Patou day models of crepes and wools and evening ensembles in white linen and pink broadcloth.

Cock feathers make revers for a black organdie cocktail suit while ostrich feathers make round pockets for a purple crepe evening dress.

There is a marked use of silk braids to make large diamond plaids.

Children's Bureau Advises Mothers

Keep cheerful during pregnancy, is the advise given expectant mothers in a folder on maternal care issued today by the Children's Bureau.

Pointing out that much depends on the mother's mental attitude, the folder says:

"The period of pregnancy should be a happy time. It is old-fashioned to think that you cannot go out and enjoy yourself at this time. If you can get plenty of rest and sunshine, these will help to keep you cheerful. Try to have good times that do not overtire you."

Prepared by physicians on the bureau's staff, with the approval of an advisory committee of nationally-known obstetricians, the folder gives advice on planning the diet, care of the teeth, exercise and rest, fresh air and sunshine, clothing, preparations for the baby's birth at home or in a hospital, and necessary supplies for both mother and baby.

Advice to the expectant mother, as outlined in this folder, begins and ends with two important rules. They are:

"As soon as you think you are pregnant, go to a doctor. Do not delay. If you cannot afford to go to a private doctor, go to a practical clinic or a health center.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Feb. 24.

ONE of New York's most remarkable women has just passed away—died in the heat and heart of one of the great hullabaloos for which she became famous—and who will fill her place the town does not know. I speak of the late Lila Agnew Stewart, who made a life work of staging those enormous balls and pageants which provide New Yorkers a chance to a cavort and which help fill the tills of many worthwhile charities.

ALICE HUGHES.

Lila cashed in her checks on the very eve of the President's Ball, which she had helped arrange—died of pneumonia, straining at the leash because she could not see the big effort through. She had supervised scores of these gargantuan affairs, with all the threads in her own hands—the programs, the supper, the debs to perform, the favors to present, the stunts and tableaux to be put on. And when I think of the millions of squabbles over places and preferences which she had to referee during her frantic life as a ball-producer, I wonder that she lived as long as she did. For these things are enormously complex to arrange, with hundreds of dithering and ambitious women to please and placate—and Lila Stewart did it peerlessly. May she now be enjoying more peace than she has known for many years—and that was precious little!

* * * *

One of the colorful girls of the town is Lady Suzanne Wilkins, wife of the famed Arctic explorer, Sir Hubert—a tall and handsome girl who rattles about New York while her spouse visits far places, and who only sees her knighted husband a few months a year.

* * * *

Only recently Lady Wilkins took up the modern trend and began singing in the Mon Paris Restaurant, one of those ritzy little spots in the upper East Side. A few days later Sir Hubert turned up from London—and darned if the newspapers, with a little nudging, didn't resurrect the dear old story about Suzanne accompanying the explorer on his proposed submarine trip under the Arctic ice floes, now set for 1938. This dear old yarn has been popping up for a couple of years, and now it explodes again, though not loudly. But the trip, says Sir Hubert, will cost $135,000—and Mama is warbling in a night club—and they've been married nearly eight years—and what New York newspapers won't print is hardly to be found in the history of human experience. Good luck, Suzanne dear!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—At last more enlightenment comes to the Columbia University, our sprawling institution which seems to reach from the Battery to the Bronx. For the second time in history pretty coeds will appear in the annual varsity show with the men. Last year the lads tried it, and they made a profit for the first time in years—all of which goes to show that nothing helps a musical show like a platoon of peachy girls . . .

* * * *

Memories of the late Isadora Duncan, that astounding women of yesterday, who freed the dance from its whalebone, are awakened as I see her old blind brother, Augustin Duncan, giving a fine performance as John of Gaunt in the current smash production of "Richard II." The public raves which have greeted Maurice Evans have even beaten those accorded John Gielgud when he turned loose his "Hamlet" last fall . . .

* * * *

One of my very favorite names of all, in the local picture—Vera Felicity Story, which ripples like the dear old brook. She's the girl who is to marry Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, jr., on March 2. Her papa was the late Julian Story, artist . . .

* * * *

I have loved listening to young Deanna Durbin's fresh soprano on Eddie Cantor's radio hour. The child doesn't try any fancy tricks with that young voice, which is sound sense. But lately I have worried a little, because I hear from Hollywood that her favorite book is "Winnie the Pooh." Oh well, the kid can sing! . . .

* * * *

Palm Beach is adesert, and the streets of New York are drab and dull, for Mrs. Harrison "Best Dressed" Williams has set off for a long visit on the magical Isle of Capri, made famous by the song (remember?). Now's the chance for some of the country's girls to sneak in with nifty wardrobes and fox the missing Mona.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Drugs Harmful to Vision.

It always is possible to reduce weight by diet alone, even without exercise or massage, certainly without salt baths, most emphatically without drugs, and since one may get into trouble with the drugs, why try? Why not just stick to the diet?

The only two drugs which are capable of reducing weight are both capable of doing a great deal of harm. Both are likely to affect the eye, and if you are reducing for cosmetic purposes, it is easy to figure out that you won't look any better with your eyes in bad condition.

One of the drugs often used for reducing, thyroid extract, acts by increasing the work and activating the thyroid gland. And as in many cases of goiter, with increased activity of the thyroid the eyes protrude, so in sensitive people the use of thyroid extract will produce the same thing. When the eyes become prominent the exposure causes congestion of the surface of the eyeball, and this may progress to conjunctivitis and ulceration. Corneal ulcers, when they heal, leave opacities. This does not seem to be a very long step in the direction of becoming comely.

A particular example is that of a woman 34 years old whose weight had increased from 118 to 173 pounds. She began using thyroid extract in 1929 and continued until 1935, when she weighed 120 pounds. She then became very nervous, with a marked tremor of the hands, and a rapid heart. The eyes became prominent—all these symptoms indicate a somulation of the thyroid gland—and in a few months her physician advised a surgical removal of the gland. After this was done, there was some improvement except in the condition of the eyes, which rapidly became more prominent and congested. This increased so much that by the end of 1936 she could not close her eyes; the lids would not cover the eyeball even when forcefully closed. This required two or three tedious plastic operations with invalidism in the hospital, which still continues.

Dinitrophenol has been used as a dye for many years. It is also used in the manufacturing of explosives. During the World War it was noticed that workers in munition plants where dinitrophenol was used were losing weight rapidly. On this basis it was tried deliberately as a weight reducer. It did the work, but it proved also to do a great deal of harm. It has a tendency, even when used in small doeses, to produce opacities in the lens of the eye, which may continue on to cataracts. The younger the individual, the more likelihood is there for this effect.

A case in point is that of a woman of 45 who began in March to use dinitrophenol and continued until September, losing 50 pounds of weight. But she quickly gained it back again and in the following June started dinitrophenol again. Then she began to notice spots before her eyes and the vision began to fall. Examination showed a number of beginning cataracts in the lenses of both eyes.

This seems a high price to pay for 50 pounds of flesh, especially when the reduction is not permanent.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet." "Indigestion and Constipation." "Reducing and Gaining." "Infant Feeding." "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes." "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Stiffened Petticoats Are the New Vogue

Paris, Feb. (AP).—Over-stiffened petticoats—stirring memories of old lavender and the minuet—are offered by Lucien Lelong for a new vogue in evening dresses.

The very full, sweeping evening skirts are shown in simple organdies, in laces, prints, metal brocades and rainbow-striped chiffons.

The picturesque fashions were exhibited in Lelong's spring and summer collection in which color found brilliant expression, particularly in his creations for evening wear.

Dr. Townsend Is Found Guilty By D. C. Jury

Conviction of Contempt to Aid His Cause, Says Pension Leader.

mony by Representative John H. Tolan, of California, a Townsend supporter and a member of the House investigating committee, were balked by prosecution objections.

Wanted to Testify.

Tolan was allowed to say only that Dr. Townsend had told him he wanted to testify before the committee. He was not allowed to give his impression of Dr. Townsend's attitude before the committee or to give any details of the minority committee report which he filed.

Hanson said his motion for a new trial will be based chiefly on the contention that "any man charged with committing a wilful offense is entitled to present his reasons for justification and the court erred in denying us that right."

Hanson in his argument to the jury pointed out that no questions were pending which Dr. Townsend had refused to answer when the House cited him for contempt.

"Abuse of Arbitrary Power."

Townsend's walkout, Hanson argued, should be accepted as "the protest of an American citizen against the abuse of an arbitrary power."

Justice Gordon at one point during the trial asked:

"Why didn't the committee ask questions that were pertinent to the inquiry and get a refusal to answer them?"

Before the jury returned its verdict Townsend told reporters "They'll have to send me to jail or acquit me. I won't accept probation." Later it was pointed out that Justice Gordon could impose a fine on the venerable physician and leave him the alternative of paying or going to jail.

Consults His Aides.

While awaiting the jury's verdict Townsend consulted with officers of his organization in the courtroom. The courtroom was filled with elderly spectators, all of whom were obviously in sympathy with Dr. Townsend. One woman sent a note to the press table, which said:

"Gentlemen: Do not forget it is your duty to give the inarticulate millions of citizens who regard Dr. Townsend as a persecuted savior the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

As Townsend left for his hotel, a group surged around him and a woman shouted, "We are sticking by you, doctor."

Speaker's at last night's "mass meeting" were Representatives Jerry J. O'Connell, of Montana, D. W. Johnson, of Minnesota, Joe Hendricks, of Florida, and Harry R. Sheppard, of California. Johnson declared Townsend is being persecuted by "hounds of hell." O'Connell denounced the prosecution of the elderly physician. All four promised to support the Townsend Plan in Congress.

Parley Arranged On Reorganization

Preliminary plans for the proposed investigation by a civic committee on District government reorganization will be launched tomorrow when Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen meets with five local business leaders to map an agenda.

Commissioner Hazen said this was the first step toward a "complete check-up on the efficiency of all District departments." The meeting will be followed by further conferences with civic and business heads next month, he said.

Meeting with the Commissioner will be Edgar Morris, president of the Board of Trade; Robert Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; Thomas Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, and Lloyd Wilson, president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.

These men, it is expected, will take an active part in the reorganization inquiry.

Found Guilty of Contempt

Dust Bowl Section To Ask U.S. Funds For Erosion Fight

Oklahoma City, Feb. 24 (AP).—Agriculturists marshaled here for a war against crop-killing wind erosion were told today the "dust bowl" is spreading swiftly across the Southwest, creeping eastward to Oklahoma at the rate of 30 miles a year.

Conferees were prepared to ask the Federal Government for aid because "the dust problem is too big for any one State to handle."

Julian Tarrant, planning board erosion expert, said "7,000,000 acres of Western Oklahoma land now is damaged seriously by wind erosion," while in 1935 about 2,000,000 acres were "completely ruined by the dust."

Hitler Observes Nazi Anniversary

Munich, Feb. 24 (AP).—In the same beer hall where, 17 years ago, he defiantly proclaimed the program of the newly founded Nazi party, Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler tonight addressed an anniversary gathering of his "old fighters."

Saracastically, Der Fuehrer recalled how futile and fantastic his "strike off the Versailles shackles" program seemed then to most persons.

The only persons who believed in him then, he said, were "completely fanatical souls," for his prophecies then seemed sheer lunacy.

"But was the size of these prophecies justified?" he asked—and received as an answer a roaring ovation from his "old fighters."

Small Deposits In Closed Bank May Be Paid

Mount Vernon Trustees Propose to Organize Mortgage Firm.

positors have already received 40 per cent of their money.

The stock to be issued under the proposal is 3 per cent preferred, cumulative as to dividends after December 31, 1939, which preferred stock will be callable at any time at par and accumulated dividends.

All common stock in the new corporation will be issued to the International Association of Machinists in exchange for which the association is to advance the $150,000.

To Borrow $350,000.

The new corporation expects to borrow $350,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with which to supply additional pay-off funds and to acquire liens and to finance building activities. "The RFC has agreed to co-operate," Davison said yesterday.

Letters to the 2,000 voting depositors, asking them to mail in their certificates and approval of the exchange of certificates for stock, were mailed yesterday.

At the present time and since its closure, the assets of the bank have been in the hands of three trustees, named above, known as the Mount Vernon Liquidating Trust. The liquidating trust has paid back previous loans granted by the RFC in the amount of $896,000. It has liquidated all the ready assets to do so, and much time would be needed to liquidate the rest, trustees explained. Rather than spend years clearing up the affairs of the bank through liquidation, they said, they preferred to utilize the remaining assets as the foundation of a mortgage company.

Wealthy Recipient Of Relief Is Taxed

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals disclosed yesterday that the Government had slapped an income tax assessment of $129,960 against Joseph Rose, who was found living on home relief in Brooklyn, N. Y., while he possessed a fortune in diamonds, secreted in safe deposit boxes.

The Government's action followed sensational disclosures which resulted when the 64-year-old former diamond merchant accused his friend, Louis Goerlick, of taking $250,000 in gems.

Police investigating Rose's charges discovered in startling sequence that:

1. Rose had drawn $384 in home relief funds in Brooklyn during 1936.
2. That he had more than $250,000 in diamonds hoarded in several safety deposit boxes in New York and New Jersey.

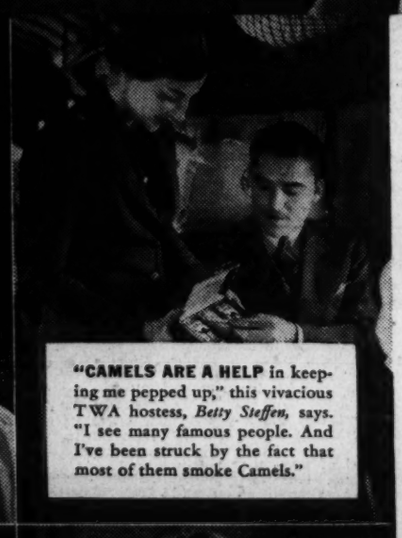
"Why I Choose CAMELS"

"THE SMART new touch in entertaining is to have Camels on the table," says Miss Dorothy Malone, food editor.

"MARK ME DOWN as another who appreciates how mild Camels are," says all-events bowling champion, Johnny Murphy.

"I WANT A CIGARETTE that doesn't jangle my nerves," says master welder Dan Rafferty. "And Camels don't."

THE CHAMPION GIRL bronco-buster and attractive rodeo star, Rose Davis, says: "Camels always appeal to my taste, but I think the Camels I smoke with my meals and after are the most enjoyable."

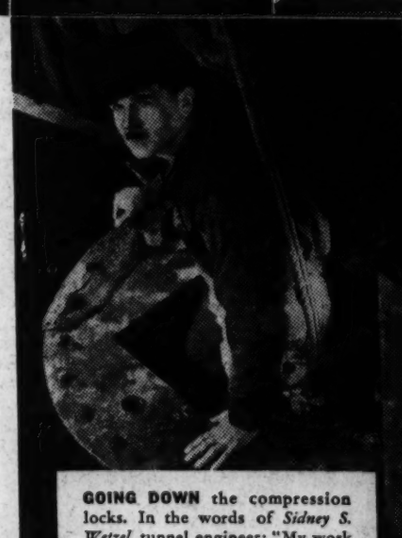


"CAMELS ARE A HELP in keeping me pepped up," this vivacious TWA hostess, Betty Steffen, says. "I see many famous people. And I've been struck by the fact that most of them smoke Camels."

JIMMIE FOXX
slugging first baseman of the Boston Red Sox says:

"I STICK by Camels and Camels stick by me. Camels set me right. I smoke Camels for their refreshing 'lift,' and for the aid they give my digestion. My appetite leans to plenty of good solid chow. Camels help me feel my food agrees with me."

Enjoy Camel's costlier tobaccos the whole day through. At mealtimes Camels are an aid to digestion—speeding up the flow of digestive fluids—increasing alkalinity—bringing a sense of well-being. And when you're tired, get a "lift" in energy with a Camel. Steady smokers prefer Camels. They are so mild!



GOING DOWN the compression locks. In the words of Sidney S. Wetzel, tunnel engineer: "My work involves constant danger. That's why I always smoke Camels. Camels do not frazzle my nerves—ever."

THE LIGHTNING SWORD PLAY of Bela de Tuscan, fencing instructor, is faster than the eye. He says: "Believe me, I need every ounce of energy when fencing. So I welcome the 'lift' that I get with a Camel."

NATIONAL OUTBOARD MOTORBOAT CHAMPION, Fred Jacoby, Jr., faces punishing strain in every race. "My condition is just as important as the engine. That's why Camel is my cigarette," says Fred.

"I'M A SECRETARY," says Joselyn Libby, "and I often eat in a hurry. I smoke Camels. When I enjoy Camels with my food and after I feel on top of the world. 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel.'"

CHIEF ENGINEER G. J. Buckingham says: "I wouldn't want to be on the high seas without my Camels. It's a strain keeping tons of high powered machinery under control. Camels help ease the tension."

'Made in Japan.'

A Railroad Retirement Board girl writes in to tell about the minister's wife's silver tea party. "All decorations were a la Washington's Birthday, and the minister's wife set out some tiny pies, each holding a small American flag. One of the guests turned her flag over and saw stamped on it the words, 'Made in Japan.'" Which undoubtedly shattered the patriotic illusion of the party but withal caused no tempest in the teapots.

Charley Gapen, who has the friendship of as many newspapermen as anyone in Washington, has left his post as chief of Agriculture's press service to become the head information man for the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering . . . His change of position has not been officially announced by the department . . . Gapen, genial, capable, entered Government service September 19, 1921, on a temporary one-month appointment . . . In October, 1921, the appointment was extended, and on December 12, 1921, Gapen was appointed for a probationary period . . . He became acting chief of the press service on July 1, 1925, and chief three months later . . .

Born in Wisconsin, Gapen has farmed with his hands and did some free lance writing after graduation from the University of Wisconsin.

So That's What It Is.

Thumbing through E. Claude Babcock's horizon-blue booklet "Limitations on Civil Service Usefulness," we came upon a clear and ringing definition of governmental red tape. Says Babcock, minus of any maybes on the subject:

"If there is red tape in public employment, and there is, that red tape is simply the set of regulations imposed on the employes to cover the delinquencies of the inefficient ones who have not the mentality to think and carry on their jobs without the red tape. The efficient public servant doesn't need red tape, and if he has to submit to it, it is usually because the administrative personnel was incorrectly chosen and is not doing efficient work.

"Every employe knows of dozens of hampering and unnecessary orders, and when they are examined, it is usually found that they are the emanations of superiors who have not been 'through the mill' and who issue such orders without knowledge of the facts."

The act: The firm had shipped tomato juice in large cans labeled "contents 3 quarts, 3 fluid ounces"—but actually the cans contained 3 quarts . . . Another firm shipped tomato catsup made from partly decayed material . . . Other firms did similar things.

The result: Thirty criminal actions were brought last month under the Federal food and drug act . . . The cases, involving many violations uncovered by the Administration's inspectors, resulted in a wide range of penalties, according to a monthly report.

• • • •

Scanning the report, one can almost hear the old-time medicine man bark his cure-alls; can almost hear the old-time medicine man's show-opening bugle and the medicine man's entertainers throb their banjos. These things strike the senses as the inspectors relate seizing certain tablets ballyhooed as cures for stomach ulcers, toothache, cholera morbus, general debility and sour stomach.

The Findings Are:

Fifty Bureau of Labor statisticians, on their elbows for two years to probe the mystery surrounding employment resulting from the PWA program, have reported to Commissioner Isador Lubin, of Labor Statistics, who in turn reports to Administrator Ickes:

"The enormity of the economic effect of the Public Works Administration program of certain industries is evidenced by the fact that during the calendar year of 1934 approximately 25 per cent of all brick, approximately 75 per cent of all cement, approximately 45 per cent of all structural steel and approximately 50 per cent of all steel rails produced was for use on public works construction projects."

L. A. Moyer, chief examiner, Civil Service Commission, will discuss "Personal Problems" at the Educational Forum tomorrow evening in District N. F. F. E. headquarters, 710 Fourteenth street northwest . . . The forum is sponsored by the District Federation, N. F. F. E. . . . A general discussion will follow the address . . . Dr. J. Franklin Meyer, of Bureau of Standards, will preside.

WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1937

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

There's nobody I feel sorrier for than these so-called sophisticated people that've been all over the world and seen everything and done everything. There's nothin' left for 'em to get a kick out of. That's the reason why the people in a small town are so much happier because they can get a kick out of the simple things in life.

I'll never forget the time a travelin' salesman come down home and he had two hours to kill before train time and he went up to the station agent and he says, "You got a show in town?" The agent says, "No." The salesman says, "Have you got a poolroom or a library?" The agent says, "No."

Then the salesman says, "Well, what in the world do you do here to amuse yourself?" The agent says, "Well, here lately everybody in town has been going down to Henry Faber's grocery store—he's got a new bacon slicer."

City's WPA Food Center Will Continue

Layoff of 34 Workers at Dispensary Called Temporary.

Retrenchment Held Due to Delay in $15,000 Allotment.

Distribution of surplus food and clothing to the city's needy will not be discontinued as rumored since Tuesday when 34 of the 42 workers at the WPA dispensary at 615 D street southwest were laid off.

John L. Keddy, assistant director of the Budget Bureau, who is given official credit for turning down the proposed $830,000 supplementary relief appropriation for the District's indigent, was quoted as believing that the responsibility of caring for the thousands affected rests with the churches.

Those were developments in Washington's relief problem yesterday.

Layoff Explained.

The reaon for the layoff at the Southwest relief station was explained by Otto J. Cass, deputy relief administrator for the District. He said thet emporary retrenchment was due to delay of a $15,000 allotment which is awaiting approval at Federal WPA headquarters.

Cass said that the skeletonized staff is filling all needs of the 400 to 500 persons who visit the station daily, and that all of the furloughed 34 will resume work when the necessary fund comes through and will be given a chance to make up the work they lost.

Keddy declined to discuss his quoted "attitude" yesterday, but he did say that his opinions in regard to churches and church people and their duty in caring for the poor had been voiced in confidence—"a confidence that has been violated," he said.

Resentment Expressed.

A group of social workers who pleaded the cause of the city's hungry families before Keddy expressed resentment over the Budget Bureau's refusal to allow the supplemental appropriation. They plan to ask the House appropriations subcommittee for the District to grant them a hearing and will plead for $1,000,000 more than the $1,450,000 recommended by the bureau for the 1938 fiscal year.

Keddy's attitude when he saw the welfare workers, it was understood, was that the District churches should organize in the fashion of the Mormon church in the West and care for the more than 3,000 families.

Meanwhile, the relief situation grows more acute each day, relief officials say. Direct relief is provided for unemployables by the Public Assistance Division; the WPA is supposed to furnish relief work for all employables. In recent months, however, hundreds of persons who fall into the latter category have not been able to get either relief or WPA jobs. Thousands of cases reportedly are being turned away each month by the Division of Public Assistance, which has the authority to help only unemployable, and the private agencies, which lack sufficient funds.

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, president of the Council of Social Agencies, said yesterday he did not know what would happen to the thousands of needy families who cannot be cared for by welfare organizations now that the appropriation has been denied. "The situation is more desperate today than it has been at any time during the depression," he said.

Private Drives Seen.

This opinion was borne out by William H. Savin, of the Family Service Association, who feels that private drives for relief funds will now have to be made in order to keep thousands of Washington residents from starving this year.

The Federation of Churches has been discussing the need for a private drive for some time. The problem of a drive in and out of churches was discussed at length yesterday afternoon by a joint committee of the Federation and the Family Service Association.

McLean, Jr., Recovering, To Take Colorado Trip

Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Washington social leader, said yesterday that her 18-year-old son, Edward B. McLean, jr., will spend several months at Colorado Springs this year while convalescing from an illness. Mrs. McLean said she had leased a residence there for her son.

The McLean youth is recovering from an attack of pleurisy at a Baltimore hospital.

Soft-Hearted Gunwoman Held; Police Seek Male Companion

Mary Lucille Sheckles, 29-year-old gunwoman, who was overhauled by kind words and a soft drink during a holdup attempt, was confined to the Women's Bureau last night after appearing in a police line-up.

Meanwhile, detectives were endeavoring to learn the identity of a man believed to have been waiting in an automobile outside of the grocery store at 1921 Eighteenth street northwest, prepared to aid the woman's escape.

Third Precinct detectives captured, Mrs. Sheckles, alias Mary Cole, after her nerve "cracked" during the robbery attempt. She had entered the grocery store and asked for a bottle of whisky from Andrew Schwartz, 15. Andrew called his mother, Mrs. Rose Schwartz.

When Mrs. Schwartz appeared to make the sale, Mrs. Sheckles whipped a .32-caliber automatic from her pocketbook and demanded the contents of the cash register.

"Take it and God bless you," Mrs. Schwartz said, handing over $25.

Other customers noticed the proceedings from the outside and summoned police. In the meantime, the bandit began to cry and asked for a bottle of soft drink. She was found, thoroughly subdued, when police arrived.

She had not given police any reason for the act last night. Records disclosed she has been arrested six times previously, four for intoxication and twice for disorderly conduct.

Diplomats Are Luncheon Guests at Washington Rotary Club's International Day

D. C. Hospital Change Urged In House Body

Proposal Would Put Institutions Under Department of Health.

A change in the departmental administration of Washington's municipal hospitals has been proposed to the House sub-committee on District appropriations, it was learned yesterday.

The proposal, which is understood to be under serious consideration by the sub-committee, is to place the hospitals under jurisdiction of the health department instead of the public welfare department.

The hospitals are Gallinger, the Children's Tuberculosis Sanitarium, and the Adult Tuberculosis Hospital.

Under Health Departments.

Chairman Collins has made an inquiry which disclosed that in most of the larger cities of the country the municipal hospitals are under the health department rather than the public welfare department.

The change would require merely a shift of the appropriations.

The sub-committee yesterday considered estimates of the highway department and the public library.

Collins telegraphed J. L. Jacobs, director of the fiscal relations study, and asked him to appear "at his convenience" before the sub-committee. He had received no reply early last night.

Invite Tax Expert.

George Lord, Detroit tax expert, who made a similar study for the Mapes committee, also will be invited to appear before the sub-committee.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the special tax sub-committee of the House District Committee, has made arrangements to bring Jacobs before his group as well.

It is likely, however, that Jacobs will not be received before next week.

Co-operatives Win Praise of Speaker

The role of the co-operative movement as an economic stabilizer, in modifying prices and in breaking down large trusts and cartels was described last night by Jacob Baker, member of the President's Commission of Inquiry on Co-operative Enterprises in Europe, before an audience of 600 people in the Interior Building auditorium.

Introduced by Marquis Childs, Baker described his reactions to European co-operatives he visited as a member of the President's commission. He mentioned the strong affinity between labor and the co-operative movement, and pointed out the support given the movement by democratic governments. He called the movement of great value to the permanency of democracy, and stressed the democracy of its organization.

praising local co-operatives, Baker stated that co-operative enterprise is "a distinct economic form," differing basically from State or private capital economics. He added that the European co-operative movement was doing what the Sherman and other anti-trust laws are attempting in America. He commented at some length upon various European enterprises and described particular co-operatives in Southern France and in southwestern Ireland.

World of Peace Is Rotarian Goal, Diplomatic Group Told by President Manier at Luncheon

Many Envoys Guests of Washington Club at Meeting.

With all international question sidetracked for the occasion, members of the Washington Diplomatic Corps were guests of the Rotary Club yesterday at its weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel.

From mighty Great Britain to the tiny Dominican Republic, the ambassador, minister or lesser attache of every country accredited to the United States Government sat down at the long table in the big ballroom to break bread and hear Will R. Manier, jr., president of Rotary International, on "International Understanding and Good Will."

Ambassador Alexander Antonovich Troyanovsky and Ambassador Hans Luther sat but a couple of yards apart and frequently exchanged pleasantries. Sir Roland Lindsay joined in lustily on the chourus of "My Wild Irish Rose." Placing a two-hour moratorium on affairs of state, his scores of fellow diplomats attempted valiantly to follow Song Leader Harry P. Somerville through the lyrics of "Yip I Yee," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and "Sweet Adeline."

International Broadcast.

Speaking over a coast to coast hook-up and by short wave to many of the lands represented, Mr. Manier, a Nashville lawyer, sketched the growth of Rotary since it was founded in Chicago 32 years ago by a tailor, a lawyer, a coal dealer and a gold mine stock broker.

In 1910 there were 16 clubs, all in the United States. Today, he pointed out, there are 4,142 units scattered throughout 82 countries.

Growing rapidly, the movement has made for better understanding between nationals and amicably settled many disputes of an international nature, said President Manier. He told, for example, how 36 nationalities are represented at each weekly meeting of the Rotary Club of Singapore.

Stressing the organization's aim to preserve world peace through mutual understanding and good will, the speaker described the Rotarian policy in neighboring European countries of holding trimonthly meetings to iron out controversies insofar as possible.

Problems Are Similar.

People and problems are much the same everywhere, according to Manier, Rotarians of Rome having much in common with Rotarians of London or Louisville.

The Rev. Dr. Charles T. Warner, president of the Washington Rotary Club, presided. The club's international service committee, James Sharp, chairman, had charge of the meeting. The music was by a trio from the National Symphony.

Following is the guest list:

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay; the Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther; the Ambassador of Chile, Manuel Trucco; the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Alexander Antonovich Troyanovsky; the Ambassador of the Turkish Republic, Munir Ertegun; the Chinese Ambassador, Alfred Sze; the Royal Italian Ambassador, Signor Fulvio de Suvich; the Ambassador of Spain, Dr. Fernando de los Rios; the Minister of Switzerland, Marc Peter; the Minister of Austria, Edgar L. Court Plan Debate Set Sunday Night

Arrangements have been completed for a debate between two members of Congress on President Roosevelt's judiciary reorganization proposals, officials of the Town Hall of Washington announced yesterday.

The debate will take place at the session at the Shoreham Sunday night between Senator Black, Alabama Democrat, and Representative Brewster, Maine Republican.

Dr. Howard W. Haggard, of Yale University, who was to have been the principal speaker at Sunday's session, will be heard April 11 instead. Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, director, said. There will be no panel for the debate between Black, strong supporter of the court bill, and Brewster, who opposes it.

RA Cuts Farmers' Debts.

The Resettlement Administration reported yesterday a $41,000,000 reduction in debts of 49,344 farmers had been accomplished in 17 months through its voluntary debt adjustment committees.

Farm Home Left By Edith Maxwell To Attend Hearing

Edith Maxwell left her farm home near Richmond yesterday for Wise, Va., where Monday her attorney, Charles Henry Smith, will ask that her conviction for second-degree murder be set aside and a new trial granted.

The 22-year-old school teacher, who is under sentence of 20 years in the penitentiary, was accompanied on her trip by her brother Earl.

Attorney Smith, who is now busy with another case in Alexandria, plans to leave for Wise early Sunday. In arguing for a new trial, he will contend before Judge Ezra Carter that there were errors in admitting evidence at the last trial, errors in selecting a jury, an error in failing to grant a change of venue and that the verdict wasn't justified by the evidence. Miss Maxwell now is free on $15,000 bond.

Tuberculosis Fund Increase Sought

After hearing an address by Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the Tuberculosis Association, members of the North Capitol Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution asking Congress to provide the funds necessary for obtaining more doctors, nurses and consultant physicians at the Children's Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md.

If the money were available, Mrs. Grant pointed out, the institution would be able to make its full-bed capacity available for the tuberculous persons known to be in need of hospitalization.

Mrs. Grant illustrated her lecture with pictures of some of the patients. The association met at McKinley High School.

Much of Andres Segovia's Skill With Guitar Attributed to Special Quality of Finger Nails

Floating in the clouds, but aware that jazz does exist, Andres Segovia, guitarist, plays Bach.

Interviewed by proxy through his wife, who said he had been exhausted by interviews and what not earlier in the afternoon, Segovia was in his bath. Another interview in the same day, she said, might dull his artistic edge.

Segovia, born in Andalusia, Spain, who has played before many of the former crowned heads of Europe, acquired the determination to become a concert guitarist when he was 8.

"Un vago!" his playmates called him, with a significant touch of forefinger to forehead, but he persisted in transcribing Bach, Beethoven, Tedesco and other classical composers for the guitar.

He practiced much, developed his fingers and nails (to a certain indefinable quality of Segovia's nails, his wife ascribes his genius), and soon came his first concert.

A success, it was followed by appearances in Barcelona, Madrid, Seville and finally, in January, 1928, New York. There, at the Town Hall, he played to capacity houses. After that success he made 33 appearances over the Nation.

Today, though there are only three or four of the species extant, Segovia is the outstanding concert guitarist in the world.

Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, at whose home Segovia is staying while in Washington, said a Society for the Advancement of Segovia has been formed recently here. Her husband is the president, and Mme. Castillo, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, is vice president.

Mrs. Cajigas explained that Segovia, genius though he is, is but little known to the public. It is the duty of the society to place Segovia before the public's eyes, she added.

The ritual of the society is simple. It meets once a month on the date of a Segovia concert and wherever it may be, they tune in the radio and listen.

Segovia, though an incomparably sweet man, has, said his wife, a terrible temper. When he was much younger Segovia used to wear dashing sideburns and, thrown about his shoulders, a black swirling cape. With the look of a genius about him, anyway, he soon became in Seville, an object of scorn. One boy was particularly offensive.

For many days, as Segovia passed the boy on the sreet, he contained himself. Finally the bonds of his anger broke loose and he punched the boy's nose. "Yes," said Mme. Segovia, "he is a strong, healthy man."

Enrique Madriguera, the orchestra leader, is Mme. Segovia's brother. She has, however, never heard him play.

House Gets Bill To Boost Rate On Small Loans

2 Per Cent Monthly Charge Allowed in Measure Just Introduced.

A small-loans bill proposing an interest rate of 2 per cent monthly instead of the 1 per cent, now allowed under the inoperative law of 1913, was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Allen (Republican), of Illinois.

The measure is similar to a measure introduced in the Seventy-fourth Congress by Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, except that the interest rate is doubled.

Last session a three-sided controversy waged over the two small-loans bills submitted by the District Commissioners, and as a result no legislation was enacted. One faction insists the 1 per cent interest rate should be retained, another that it be doubled, while the third insists that the 3½ per cent rate charged in Maryland and Virginia should be legalized.

The doubling of the present legal interest for small loans has as its purpose the elimination of the present "bootleg" loan business. No firms operate under the present law because it has been found that 1 per cent is not enough to insure a going business with a reasonable profit.

The Allen bill restricts all charges by the lenders to the 2 per cent interest. A loan on which additional charges are made, the bill states, shall be void and uncollectible.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, introduced a bill to raise the minimum property loss for grand larceny from $50 to $75 and to increase the penalty. A similar bill was offered last year and has the approval of the District Commissioners.

Imprisonment would be mandatory under the new provision relating to grand larceny, the penalty ranging from 1 to 15 years.

Power Consumers Urged to Organize

Organization of the power consuming public into a Nation-wide drive "to keep the natural resources of this country out of the hands of private monopolists" is the aim of a conference on "The Social Control of Power," sponsored by the League for Industrial Democracy, to open tomorrow here.

The conference will open with a dinner at the National Press Club when Norman Thomas, the Socialist leader; Representative W. O. McFarlane, of Texas; McAlister Coleman, writer and lecturer, and Paul Ward, Washington correspondent for The Nation, will discuss "Power and Politics." Representative Thomas R. Amlie, of Wisconsin, will talk on "The Ultimate Objectives of Power Control" at the dinner.

The conference proper will begin Saturday morning when Dr. Harry W. Laidler, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, will speak on "Who Rules the Power Industry." Prof. James Benbright, of Columbia University, will discuss "The Valuation Tangle," and Phillip Broughton, electric personnel expert, will speak on the status of "Engineers and Technical Workers Under Private and Public Ownership."

String Quartet to Play Third of Concert Series

The Washington String Quartet will play the third in a series of four concerts at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the Sulgrave Club, 1801 Massachusetts avenue. The program will consist of Mozart's quartet in C major (K 465), Hugo Wolf's "Italienische Serenade," and Brahms' quartet in A minor, Op. 51 No. 2.

Tax Assessor Warns D. C. Delinquents

Action to Be Started Against 2,600 in District.

Local Returns Checked Against Federal Reports.

Failure to make personal tax returns on tangible and intangible property—payable last July—may result in legal action against 2,600 District residents unless they file delinquent payments by next week, officials of the tax asserror's office warned yesterday.

In a sweeping drive to force payments from local tax evaders, agents from the assessor's office have been conducting a six-month investigation, checking local tax returns against payments made to the Federal Government, authorities announced.

It was found, according to tax-office records, that approximately 2,600 persons had failed to file returns on personal properties which they reported to the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Federal income tax reports.

Authorized by Congress.

The current investigation—with 6,000 cases still to be scrutinized—was authorized under an act of Congress in April, 1935. This act required taxpayers to file duplicate, or "green sheets," with their Federal returns. It is against these "green sheets" that local agents are checking District returns.

Thus far, names from A through N—in alphabetical order—have been investigated, officials reported. A total of 50,000 cases has been handled.

According to Deputy Tax Assessor Charles A. Russell, results to date have shown that approximately 16,000 persons who filed income tax returns did not have sufficient tangible or intangible personal property on which to levy a tax; about 2,600 persons have failed to answer letters requesting personal tax returns and approximately 28,000 returns were found to be in perfect order.

Allen Issues Warning.

District Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen issued yesterday's warning of legal action. He said mandamus proceedings would be filed against all delinquent taxpayers unless immediate steps are taken to make past-due payments.

Penalty for failure to file a personal property tax return amounts to 20 per cent of the total assessment, plus a 1 per cent per month for delinquent payment. In addition, persons against whom court action is taken must pay all court costs.

Thus far, Tax Assessor Allen said, the delinquent tax drive has netted the District $116,130. Tangible personal property assessed since the investigation began amounts to $342,000, Allen said, and intangible $22,200,000.

Symphony Leaves Monday to Tour Southern Cities

Dr. Hans Kindler and his 80 members of the National Symphony Orchestra will leave here Monday morning for a concert tour of the South after presenting an all-French program here Sunday.

In the subsequent week Dr. Kindler and his musicians will fill engagements in Richmond and Roanoke, Va.; Chattanooga and Knoxville, Tenn.; Asheville, N. C.; Lynchburg, Sweet Briar and Harrisonburg, Va.

A second tour of the South in which ten additional cities will be visited, is planned for April.

Mid-Winter Concert Set By Agriculture Chorus

Under the direction of Robert Frederick Freund, the Department of Agriculture Chorus will give its mid-winter concert at 8:30 this evening in the South Building auditorium. The following program is announced:

"Dear Land of Home" (Sibelius), "Country Gardens" (Grainger), "In the Luxembourg Gardens" (Manning-Baldwin), "Come to the Fair" (Martin), "One Fleeting Hour" (Lee), "A Pastoral" (Turner-Maley), "As Torrents in Spring" (Elgar-Grey), "Morning" (Speaks-Baldwin), "Cousin Jedediah" (Thompson), "Will You Remember" (Romberg- Riegger). Victor Neal is the accompanist.

Baer Fails to Get License After Free-for-all With Ring Heads

Brown Again Calls Fighter 'A Bum'

Hearing Ends as Baer Stalks From Room at That Point.

Commissioner Also Is Libelous About His Last Two Fights.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Max Baer cracked under questioning of the New York State Athletic Commission today and precipitated an old-fashioned verbal free-for-all which revived the feud between him and Commissioner Bill Brown.

But before the blow-off Baer scored what amounted to a victory. The former champion's brittle hands were pronounced fit by doctors. Then the storm broke while Chairman John J. Phelan vainly tried to get Baer to say definitely he wanted a 1937 boxing license and Max would go no further than to say that "I'm not begging for it."

When it was all over Baer had not obtained a license and it appeared Madison Square Garden was left holding the bag with its proposed Baer-Bob Pastor fight on March 19. Boxing Promoter Jimmy Johnston openly charge the commission with "playing favorites" with the Twentieth (Mike Jacobs) Century Sporting Club and promised Phelan "you'll hear more of this."

After the meeting Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman, said he would accept an offer of two fights in London, the first on May 6 against the winner of the Ben Foord-Tommy Farr fight next month.

A sartorial symphony in gray, Baer was in good spirits as the proceedings began. He looked pleased when Chairman Phelan said, "Take a seat, won't you Mr. Baer?"

Max turned around and gave a knowing wink to a couple of newspaper friends. The room was filled with them—scribes and photographers.

But he soon was scowling when Phelan bluntly told him:

"Your last two bouts here were unsatisfactory." Phelan was referring to his fights with Jim Braddock and Joe Louis.

Max didn't like that, but said nothing.

Phelan said that before the commission would consider granting Max a license his hands would have to be examined. He called the roll of five doctors and all answered present. They disappeared with the big, broad-shouldered Californian and after a few minutes returned with their favorable verdict.

Then Phelan came right out and said he thought "Baer ought to be given a license." Commissioner D. Walker Wear appeared to be in

Tony Shucco Decisions Marek in 10 Rounds

Boston, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Former New England Heavyweight Champion Tony Shucca, 181½, of Boston, tonight outboxed Max Marek, 184¾, of Chicago, former Notre Dame fullback, to gain a ten-round split decision before 3,000 fans.

A decision in Marek's favor would have given the one-time conqueror of Joe Louis a shot at Al McCoy's New England heavyweight crown.

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation this column is being written by other members of the sports department.)

By Bill McCormick.

The odds were six, two and even that your correspondent couldn't get through Povich's vacatino without disagreeing with someone in this column.

The odds were right, but my disagreement this time is with an individual, not an organized industry. I'll not have another mob on my neck. One at a time, boys, and the line forms on the right!

McCORMICK.

I disagree with Walter Dewey Haight, The Post's turf writer who is so close to the horses that he can even write like one (see back files for Bred to Run).

Haight claims that all little boys who wanted to grow up to be firemen and engineers now that they're grown up want to become horse-race handicappers.

That's not so, I think. The little boys now want to become fight managers—and many of them are doing it. That, in my opinion, is what is wrong with the fight business.

Let a fellow see one fight and he immediately becomes a dogmatic, know-it-all authority on the business of poking profiles.

By watching just one fight he becomes a better promoter than the man who spent years in the racket, a better matchmaker than a man who learned his business from the ground up and a better manager than a fellow who turned out a flock of champions.

Promoting and matchmaking are closed to him, unless he is some goof with more money than he can squander on slow horses and buys his way in.

Managing is within the reach of any crackpot—and there's the rub. Our potential ring tycoon goes out and grabs himself some kid, pours false knowledge in his ear, then sends the hapless, helpless lad into the ring to be knocked slap-happy in no time.

Once in a long while, a would-be manager gets hold of a prospect so good that he becomes a fine fighter in spite of his managerial handicap. When that happens, the fighter's career is almost always ruined by his pilot's ignorance of the treacherous channels through which every champion must be steered.

We find the fine fighter battling his head off for $500 purses when he should be drawing down $5,000 for easier assignments. We find the prospect being hurled at the very boxers he should avoid on his way to the top. We find him having all the fighting spirit whaled out of him in useless, foolish matches that never should have been made.

It is all pitiful, bitterly cruel, if we may be permitted to jerk a few tears. To me, it is so rotten, so putrid that every time I see a slug-nutty youngster, his face dented out of shape, his voice sunk to an animal's growl, his mind clouded and the connection between it and his muscles worn to a breaking point, I want to go out and put my foot in the face of some screwloose novice manager who is ruining another fine youth.

Just what virus affects these potential managers, science hasn't yet discovered. It is known, however, that the virus affects all in the same manner. Just how it makes smart doctors, who spent years learning their profession; merchants who served long apprenticeships in their particular field; actors, bricklayers, musicians, even male dressmakers think they can master one of the most intricate games in the world overnight is beyond even the keenest minds.

Men like Pete Reilly, Chris Dundee, Joe Jacobs, Billy McCarney, Jack Hurley and their type have been in the beak busting profession for many years. Even they frankly admit they have not begun to master all its details. Yet your thick-headed novice manager knows it all, and can't be told a single thing about the racket.

There is a solution, and a very simple one. A fighter, before being licensed, must pass a severe physical examination. He must also convince the boxing commission that he can at least hold up his hands.

Referees are hand-picked, then grilled intensely on rules, regulations and proper ring conduct before being allowed to officiate at even a boys' club affair.

Your "manager" simply walks into the commission offices, announces he is a manager and is promptly licensed upon payment of the necessary small fee.

In the interest of protecting eager, earnest youth, to help rid the fight byways of those pitiful round-heeled goofies, to protect boxing itself, why can't boxing commissions make a would-be manager prove he is qualified before letting him send some youngster out to be converted into a shambling, punch-drunk bum?

Make a man prove he knows the game before giving him official leave to ruin some kid, maybe a lot of kids. Make him show he has at least been around the game long enough to have a faint idea of its trickiness. Make him demonstrate how he would bandage hands, how he would stop a cut, what he would do if his fighter were in serious trouble. If he can qualify, give him a license. If he can't, keep him away from the game.

When this is done, reformers will have one less leg to stand on when begins the inevitable swing toward outlawing the sport, which is all right, except for the people in it.

Card Boxers Face Miami Tonight

Guinan to Face Fighter Who Beat Gevinson in Olympic Trials.

Joe Church, one of the few ringmen to whip Lou Gevinson, Washington's candidate for the world featherweight championship, will appear here tonight with the Miami University boxing team which meets Catholic University at 8:30 o'clock at Brookland.

An unsuccessful candidate for the United States Olympic team, Church outpointed Gevinson in the semifinals of the trials conducted at Cleveland. It was a good, close fight, but Church won without question. Tonight he'll enter the ring a distinct favorite over "Tex" Guinan, but if the Cardinal representative is right, Master Church will have another real battle on his hands.

This is Catholic's final match of the season, one of the best in the history of the school, but if Miami lives up to expectations the Cardinals' finish will be a dismal one. The Floridians defeated Tennessee, 8-0, in their initial match of the season, and last week dealt Syracuse a 7-1 shellacking.

Catholic defeated North Carolina State, Western Maryland and Pittsburgh, lost to Army and drew with Duke and Maryland, co-favorites in the Southern Conference tournament opening tomorrow at College Park.

Other boys who figure to win for Miami are Scotty McLachlan, who defeated Leon Shub, of Columbus, last year; Stan Raski, lightheavyweight, and Lou Chesna, heavyweight. Catholic will rely on the same line-up that tied Maryland last week. The line-ups:

Miami U.	Weight.	Catholic U.
Lovett	115	Bernstein
Church	125	Guinan
McLachlan	135	Martinez
Hockette	145	Mix
Dolan	155	Bunas
Middleton	165	Greco
Raski	175	Dunne
Chesna	Heavyweight	Katalinas

Miss Dettweiler Beaten, 2 Up

Kathryn Hemphill, Patty Berg Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 24.—Kathryn Hemphill and Patty Berg, favorites in the South Atlantic women's golf tournament, defeated their first round opponents by lopsided scores today.

Miss Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., girl who gave par a walloping to win medal position, crushed Mrs. W. R. Stafford, of New York, 8 and 6, in the first round of match play. Tomorrow she meets another South Carolinian, Jane Cothran, of Greenville.

Miss Cothran advanced at the expense of Mrs. Leon Solomon, of Memphis, Tenn., 7 and 6.

Miss Berg, red-haired Minneapolis miss, won easily from Mrs. Gladys G. Blaisdell, of Waterville, Me., 8 and 7. Tomorrow Patty matches strokes with Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, who ousted Leane Van Landingham, of Charlotte, N. C., 5 and 3.

There was one unexpected result in the first round. Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., joined the defeated group after a spirited tussle with Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J. The score was 3 and 2.

Another favored player, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., came close to elimination, but she sank a 40-foot putt on the eighteenth to take the match 1 up.

Goldie Bateson, of Milwaukee, eliminated Lillian K. Zech, of Chicago, 3 and 2.

Tomorrow Miss Miley meets Betty Botterill, of Salt Lake City, who made a spectacular showing by easing over a 2-up victory on Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C. Miss Bateson will play Mrs. Hockenjos.

Miss Hemphill scorched the course again in today's round, going out in 37. She continued playing after winning the match, but picked up after two strokes on the par 5 eighteenth. She had carded a 34 before picking up. Had she equaled par the South Carolina girl would have set a new course record of 72.

Schmeling Sails, Seeks Court Aid

Cherbourg, France, Feb. 24. (U.P.).—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, sailed for the United States aboard the Berengaria tonight asserting that if "Jimmy Braddock ever wants to fight again he better meet me as contracted."

Max said that he or the American courts would whip Braddock before summer.

"Braddock cannot run out on my contract," Schmeling, who will fulfill a series of 28 exhibition bouts starting in Baltimore March 10, declared. "Either he fights me next or he will never fight again."

Fight Results

New York—Nathan Mann, New Haven, 182½, gained a split decision over Gunnar Barlund, Finland, 193¾ (Hippodrome).

Boston—Tony Shucio, 181½, Boston, gained a divided decision over Max Marek, 184¾, Chicago.

Great Finish Wins, 41-35, For Terps

Maryland, Trailing by 18-6 at Half, Beats N. C. State Five.

Fighting to get a place in the Southern Conference Tourney, the University of Maryland staged one of the greatest comebacks ever seen on a basketball court to defeat the powerful North Carolina State quint at College Park last night, 41 to 35.

Trailing 6 to 18 at intermission, and apparently hopelessly beaten by a smooth-working Wolfpack, the Terps came back on the floor at the start of the second half and gave an exhibition that would have conquered most any quint.

The Terps rang up 9 points before the Carolinians could again basket the ball and continued on with an amazing brand of play to the finish. They kept gaining on the Wolf pack until the count was tied at 25-all, and 29 to 27, and then, after losing the lead, put on a sensational final spurt to go to the front at 34 to 33 and to gain an 8-point margain before they let up.

Berry Makes Long Shot.

A long shot by Berry with less than a minute to go cut the edge to 6 points.

Waverly Wheeler, Al Waters, Ben Allen, George Knepley, and Milton Mullitz played all of the time in Maryand's sensational second-half drive.

Coach Burton Shipley, of the Terps, said it was the greatest comeback he ever had seen in his 21 years of coaching.

Wheeler, with 16 points, all made in the second half, was the Terps' greatest point getter. He shot all of his six fouls.

Berry, the Wolf pack's big center, set the pace for the night with 19 points.

Gehrig to Get $31,000 Only

Take That 'or Nothing' Is Ruppert Ultimatum.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the world champion New York Yankees, asserting that "somebody has to take a stand on this salary business, and I'm taking it," said today his star first baseman, Lou Gehrig, would be paid $31,000 for next season's work—"or nothing."

"I don't believe any ball player is worth more than that today," said the Yankee magnate, attending a brewers' convention here. "Connie Mack once said that $25,000 was too big a salary, and I'm going him $6,000 better."

Rupert said that Gehrig, reported to be demanding a $50,000 contract, and Joe DiMaggio and other Yankee holdouts "have my ultimatum—take the contracts offered them or leave them."

"We gave DiMaggio a good raise over last season," said the colonel, warming to his subject. "He ought to be satisfied. Besides, how do I know what he'll do as a second-year man?"

Asked whether he thought the Yankees would be starting the season without Gehrig, DiMaggio and the others, Ruppert laughed and replied: "Well, your guess is as good as mine, but I imagine everybody will be around sooner or later."

Ghezzi's Sub-par 67 Leads $3,000 Open

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 24.—Victor Ghezzi, lean, swarthy professional from Deal, N. J., took par apart here today to post a 67, five under regulation figures, and lead a field of 92 amateur and professional golfers through the first round of the $3,000 St. Petersburg open championship.

Ghezzi led by two strokes going into the second round. Tied at 69, under par, were Ralph Guldahl, St. Louis; Orville White, Chicago, and Ed Oliver, 20-year-old former caddy of Wilmington, Del., a newcomer to big-time golf competition.

Even par at the turn with a 36, Ghezzi birdied the eleventh and twlefth holes and came home with a 3-2-4 on the last three holes. He dropped a 10-foot putt on the seventeenth green for his deuce and almost canned a 15-footer on the home hole for an eagle three.

Par took a sound drubbing as 15 professionals bettered 72. In the group were Dick Shoemaker, Titusville, Pa.; Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Winchester, Mass.; Harry Cooper, Chicago; Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill., and Lawson Little, San Francisco.

Gene Sarazen, the famous internationalist from Brookfield Center, Conn., was in the 72 bracket with Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa.; Horton Smith, Chicago, and several others.

Morton McCarthy, Norfolk, Va., was the only amateur to better 80 and his card of 74 led the Simon pures by seven strokes. Tied at 81 were Tony Lazzeri of the New York Yankees; Paul Waner, National League batting champion of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and Ralph Stevens, Evansville, Ind.

The second 18 holes will be played tomorrow and the low 60 professionals and 10 low amateurs will enter the final 36 holes Friday. First prize is $700.

Olson Tackles Katan Tonight, In Arena Wrestling Feature

Taking a leaf from the movie industry, which has been featuring twin bills for many a month, patrons of the wrestling industry will be treated to a double feature bill at Turner's Arena tonight.

Cliff Olson, shorn of any title claims, will grapple with John Katan, the willing journeyman, and Laverne Baxter will snarl at Jack Hader in the two finish matches carded on top.

The Olson-Katan contest is just another wrestling bout, which probably will be greatly enlivened by some very splendid bouncing on the part of Clifford, who thumps across the ring like a rubber ball when tossed to the mat.

The rough house between Baxter and Hader should be something else again. Not since the days when George Zaharias and Gino Garibaldi were very profitably settling their feud here have two such consumate masters of villainy been unleashed in the same ring.

Baxter is the gentleman who has so enraged the customers in the past that he has had a chair draped around his head, peanuts tossed at him and if he had saved all the cigar butts hurled in his direction he wouldn't have to pick up another one for many a day.

Bader, while not recognized as such a master of professional villainy, is too rough for almost any but the very sturdiest of the current crop. His collection of chair bruises, peanuts, and second-hand stogies is slightly smaller than Baxter's.

In the 30-minute time limit supporting bouts, Russ Ryan, another recruit to the mat from Fordham University, will make his debut against tried and true Hank Barber.

The other supporting tussles will find Mike Mazurki making passes at Ben Finkelstein and Matros Kirilenko hugging Floyd Marshall.

Sports Chief Will Enter Business

Duties to Be Absorbed by Other Members of School Staff.

Held Post Six Years; Athletics Expanded Under Guidance.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 24.—James G. Driver, graduate manager of athletics at the University of Virginia, announced his resignation today, effective March 1, in order to enter business.

His administrative work in the athletic department, which he served as director of athletics from 1929 to 1925, and as graduate manager for the past two years, will be obsorbed by other members of the staff.

Driver was director of athletics and student activities at the University of South Carolina for five years before coming to Virginia, and previously coached football at his alma mater, William and Mary.

He is credited with contributing in a large measure to the expansion of athletic facilities and the intercollegiate sports programs at both Virginia and South Carolina. During his regime at Virginia, playing fields, tennis courts and other physical equipment was constructed for minor sports, in addition to expanded facilities for major sports.

On Two Committees.

His efficient administration of boxing at the university won him membership on the Southern Conference and national intercollegiate boxing committees.

As a student at William and Mary, he developed into one of the school's greatest all-round athletes, and captained football, baseball, basketball and track teams his senior year. He continued as a competitor on sports teams at the University of Virginia, where he was enrolled for one year.

Capt. Norton Pritchett, who succeeded Driver in 1935 as head of Virginia's department of intercollegiate athletics, praised his co-worker's service at the university.

Much Constructive Work.

"During the eight years of his service at the University of Virginia, Driver did much constructive work in developing our athletic program, in building tennis courts and playing fields, and promoting interest in intramural and minor sports," Pritchett said.

"His servicese as a member of the American Olympic committee on boxing, and as chairman of the Southern Conference committee in charge of this sport, made it possible for him to bring the National Collegiate Boxing Tournament to Charlottesville last year.

"He has created and maintained cordial relations with institutions whose teams have appeared on our schedules, and he holds the good will and respect of all representatives of these institutions.

"He also has greatly improved the physical equipment at Virginia for intercollegiate athletics, and he leaves facilities now unsurpassed in this section.

"I know but few men engaged in athletic work whose sportsmanship and personal loyalty is comparable to that shown by him during our association at Virginia."

'Price $50,000; I Mean It'–Dean

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP).—Dizzy Dean, picturesque St. Louis Cardinals Pitcher, said tonight he had returned his contract for 1937 unsigned and "absolutely" is a holdout.

"It went right back," he said. "It offered the same conditions as last year. My price is $50,000 and I mean it."

He said he would make no moves to break the deadlock between himself and Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager of the team.

They've got to come to me. I'm sitting tight right here in my own home. I'm not going to Daytona Beach when the Cardinals open camp Monday. Nothing short of an offer for $50,000 will budge me."

There might be some trouble straightening the situation out, he said.

Higher Cloud Lasts to Win Hialeah Feature Race by Neck

Kurtsinger's Ride Factor In Race

Bow and Arrow Second, Count Arthur Third; Winner Choice.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 24.—Although only four horses went postward for the grade "A" handicap that topped today's card, a thrilling contest developed in the 1-mile test. Mrs. Emil Denemark's Higher Cloud, the only starter not named for the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup of March 6, just lasted to win by a neck, giving his stable and Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger a double. E. R. Bradley's Bow and Arrow and Mrs. Jo. D. Hertz's Count Arthur were running over the winner at the wire, the former gaining the place by a half length. Leon Carter's black gift was a distanced last.

Higher Cloud, chalking up his second score in a row, was a $4.80 for $2 favorite. He covered the 8 furlongs in 1:36 3-5, racing through a thin rain that dropped out of heavy skies just before the running of the feature event.

Count Arthur, making his second start of the winter, gave the impression that this outing will just leave him on sharpest edge and that he will improve still more over today's effort. Jimmy Stout, who guided the Reigh Count horse to victory in the Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park last October, flicked the 5-year-old Chicago-owned horse with the whip during the run from midway of the bend to halfway through the stretch, but he did not punish the veteran unnecessarily and the Count closed with fine courage.

Higher Cloud, fast away from the mile chute, drew into a comfortable lead and remained two lengths clear entering the last furlong. Then his pursuers rapidly closed in. Bow and Arrow, winner of the Sheridan Handicap at Washington Park last August, was taken to the inside of the winner, while the stretch running Count Arthur loomed on the outside. Higher Cloud was getting "very late" in the closing strides, but Kurtsinger held him together long enough to win.

The grade "B" Handicap resulted in an old-fashioned upset when Paradisical, representing I. J. Collins, suddenly awoke at odds of $51 for $2. The In Memoriam mare ran the 8 furlongs in 1:36 3-5, the same time made in the grade "A" feature. She nosed out Chancing in a photo finish. Brown feathers was third, a length and a half back. Chancing stole a wide lead and just failed to last when Paradisical kept with the leaders from the start, challenged in the final drive. Dneiper, last out of the chute, was a game fourth after being locked in a pocket on the rail through the last furlong.

The first of the three graded handicaps, for Class C horses, went to the $6.30 for $2 choice, Great Haste, which recorded his third straight success. Brandon Prince was second, a length back and three lenghts clear of Col. Greene. Breaking in front from the inside position, Great Haste speedily opened up on his opposition. Jimmy Stout had the gelding under pressure at the end, finishing in 1:36 4-5 for the mile distance. Boston Pal, one of the fancied starters, was weakly handled by Earl Porter.

Fifteen maiden 2-year-olds were on display in the 3-furlong curtain raiser. The well-played Wheatley Stable colt, Scarce, proved an easy victor, scoring by two lengths over Stormy Sea. Notoriety was a half-length farther back. The latter and Ed Sullivan, "field" horses, ruled favorite, Hilton Dabson had Scarce away on his toes. The son of Distraction drew into a daylight advtange over Stormy Sea and held that fellow safe to the wire. Notoriety was third throughout the running. Scarce returned $8.80, and finished in 34 2-5 seconds. The field was at the post 11 minutes, with Bob Lee the most fractious of the nervous youngsters.

Goldspray, flaunting the successful Denemark silks, graduated from the maiden ranks in the "Helpful" Purse for nonwinning 3-year-old fillies. Proximity followed the Transmute Miss across the line, a length and a half away and slightly more in advance of My Goodness. Outrun in the early stages, Goldspray suddenly spurted to the front after turning for home. Charlie Kurtsinger had the mount well in hand at the end. The confidently played Proximity was well up all the way, but was not good enough. Goldspray paid $10.30.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREAT HASTE, $6.30, $3.90, $3.00; BRANDON PRINCE, $3.80, $3.30; COL. GREENE, $5.60.
GREAT HASTE beat the gate, opened wide lead and held on gamely. BRANDON PRINCE finished fast. COL. GREENE saved ground all the way. CROWNING GLORY ran good race. BOSTON PAL was very badly ridden. CHANCER tired.

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, FAST.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,500. Grade A Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:06. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's b. g. (4), by High Cloud—Miss Tony. Trained by B. S. Michell. Value to winner, $1,100; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:36 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHER CLOUD, $4.80, $2.50; BOW AND ARROW, $3.30. (No show mutuels.)
HIGHER CLOUD was sent to the front in the first furlong, was rated along to the middle of the turn, where he drew out, but tired suddenly. BOW AND ARROW moved up gamely turning out of backstretch, then was taken to the inside and almost got up to win. COUNT ARTHUR came with a rush at end and should be hard to beat in a longer distance. BLACK GIFT had speed for half a mile, then tired.

WEATHER, SHOWERY. TRACK, FAST.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,200. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:34. Winner, I. J. Collins' b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PARADISICAL, $51.00, $17.10, $8.40; CHANCING, $5.40, $4.80; BROWN FEATHERS, $5.30.
PARADISICAL, showing remarkable and sudden improvement, was kept close to early pace, closed gamely in final furlong and got up to win in final stride. CHANCING, also showing improvement, displayed keen speed and made a game effort. BROWN FEATHERS well up all the way. DNIEPER was probably pounded in the rail, but was ridden with poor judgment. He was steered into a pocket in the final furlong and never had a chance to run. BLIND PIG was unable to get to the front and stopped badly. BULWARK had no excuse. SANDY BOOT ran a listless race.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and three furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:03. Off at 5:03½. Winner, Miss F. Malone's br. g. (4), by Tryster—June Rose. Trained by M. Shapoff. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:18 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME TO GO, $9.30, $4.50, $3.20; LONE HAND, $4.60, $3.40; STRATEGIST II, $3.30.
TIME TO GO, well ridden, began to move up turning out of backstretch, ran into lead in final quarter mile and drew out winning nicely in hand. LONE HAND was sharply cut off just after the start, but recovered and finished gamely. STRATEGIST II crossed the field at start, showed speed and held on well. MY PETER stopped badly.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place easily. Went to post at 5:32. Off at 5:33½. Winner, M. A. Smith's b. f. Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

When Walter E. O'Hara predicted that the New England Futurity would take its place with the other important juvenile events, there was some raising of eyebrows. The number of nominations for the 1939 futurity are almost three times those named for the 1936 race. In that year there were 331 named with the total reaching 863 for the race that is now two years off. Run late in the fall, the New England event asks the juveniles to run at a greater distance than the earlier futurities, the distance being 1 mile and 70 yards. Reaping Reward won it last year, defeating the great Pompoon. Both horses are now outstanding candidates for the Kentucky Derby. Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger is not only Hialeah's leading rider, but is a fair sort of fishing champion as well. On a week-end fishing trip, Charlie brought to gaff the third largest "Wahoo" caught around Miami this year. It weighed 35½ pounds, more than one-third the weight of the jockey. Brevity has joined the long list of horses that have suffered leg injuries over this track. The course, despite occasional rains, is hard as a brick road. Clocker Mike is still unaccounted for. BILL.

First race—Chic Maud, despite her failure in the Nursery Stakes, seems headed for a set of brackets in this field. Anderson will do the riding and the outside post position on the straightaway course should help. Singing Slave and Gert B. should be prominent contenders.

Second race—Ipso Facto has the speed necessary to take care of this group of sprinters. Needs only the right ride. Ravenna is a fast closer and under the light-weight assignment must be considered. Royal Flight to show.

Third race—Bad Dreams has failed me before, but I am going back for more. This one gets a nice shift in the weights from the figure horses and is a possible surprise. Early Settler and Anglo Saxon are fit and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Fourth race—Phlox showed much last out and may be ready to score in a field of this caliber. Kurtsinger is scheduled to take charge of the saddle work. Four Eleven is as good as those recent races and looms as the one to beat. Star Loom and Bain Marie get in with feather weight and may be prominent.

Fifth race—Silent Shot will like the turf course and the distance. This fellow has gone back some, but could take care of these. Blackbirder and Genie Palatine for the place and show.

Sixth race—Hermie Roy is a much-improved plater and seems capable of carrying top weight to a victory. Wise Will's last was all that was asked. Over Yonder is about due for a good effort.

Seventh Race—Round Table seems best at this marathon route. Prince Dean and Last Romance for the minor awards.

Best bet—Chic Maud.

Strong Field of 60 Teams Entered in Post Basket-Ball Tourney

A.A.U. to Map Schedules Tonight

Weighing-in Tomorrow for 100, 115 and 130 Pound Classes.

A fast field of some 60 teams had registered in the Post's annual A. A. U. basketball championships late last night including the George Washington Freshmen, holders of the unlimited championship. Among other strong teams entered were the Georgetown University 145-pound team in the 145-pound class.

Officials of the A. A. U. will meet at 7 p. m. tonight at the Boys Club of Washington to make out the schedule for the six classes. It is expected that the tourney may be run off within two weeks. The Heurich gymnasium is the scene of the event.

Virtually all of the powerful teams in the city were entered in the unlimited class, including the other finalist—Rinaldi Tailors. The line-up of that team, almost intact, is entered this year under the colors of Commissioner George E. Allen's District WPA five.

In addition to the Georgetown 145-pound combination, Western High has entered its junior inter-high championship five. In the 130-pound class the defending champions, Northeast Boys Club, is ready to retain its title with the Boys Club of Washington defending its 115-pound crown.

Weighing in Tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the weighing-in hours for 100-pound, 115-pound and 130-pound class teams were announced by John Jankowski, who is in charge of this phase of the tournament. Teams in these classes must be weighed in between 6:30 and 9 p. m. tomorrow night at the Northeast Boys Club. Managers of all teams are requested to be present.

Billy Blake, of the District boxing commission, will be in charge of the weigh-in. All players must present their A. A. U. registration cards on appearance. The weigh-in for the 145-pound class will be held at the Heurich Gymnasium at the time the teams make their first appearance in the tourney.

Among the many fast teams seeking the unlimited championship, the Jewish Community Center claims the right for the following space in The Post's series of descriptions of the various clubs entered. The J. C. C. is obviously one of the "teams to beat" in nthe classic.

With six former college players in the line-up, the Center shooters bristle with strength. Captain of the outfit is Milt Genderson, former Georgetown Freshman star and a fast-traveler in local high school circles in past years. Abe Rosenfield, former Catholic U. basketball captain; Leon Esenstad, former Georgetown basketer, and Bunny Levinson, former Baltimore University high-point scorer, are three of the other standouts ready for action.

Big George Goss, 6-foot 4-inch former Dartmouth College center, holds down the pivot post, with Phil Fox, well known Wilson Teachers star for three years, another major factor in the team's scoring punch.

Others in the line-up include Jesse Heilman, former inter-high star; Milton Jacobson, a former All-High selection; Doc Zola, brother of Ben Zola, of Georgetown, and former well known amateur ace, and Melvin Greenberg, young Eastern High flash who was reportedly ruled off the Eastern team this year through ineligibility.

Two other members of the squad the management may use include Sidney (Flash) Gordon and Harry Silverman, former Roosevelt High captain.

St. John's Downs Wilson, 17 to 9

St. John's defeated the Woodrow Wilson basketball team, 17 to 9, at the Woodrow Wilson gymnasium yesterday.

The game was marked by excellent guarding, which not only held the score down on both sides, but resulted in the Wilsonites being held scoreless until the third period. After two minutes of that period, Earl Hurdle sank a foul shot to give the losers their first score—and almost their last.

Local Schools Receive Blanks for Cage Play

Application blanks to the South Atlantic interscholastic basketball tournament, to be held by Washington and Lee University, March 10, 11 and 12, were received here yesterday by local high schools.

Western High and Gonzaga reported receipt of the blanks. Coach Mike Kelley, of Eastern, said he had not looked in his mailbox. Eastern, was virtually certain to be invited, however. St. John's and Roosevelt were others thought in line for application banks, but officials could not be reached last night.

The mere receipt of blanks, though indicating the school might be invited, is not a formal invitation.

Farrar-Nedomatsky Match Would Feature Conference

Duke and Maryland U. Stars Expected to Reach Finals.

Tournament Will Open Tomorrow With 22 Bouts Scheduled.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

If "Dynamite Danny" Farrar, of Duke, and Ivan Nedomatsky, of Maryland, reach the finals of the Southern Conference boxing tournament opening tomorrow afternoon at College Park, the two days of fisticuffing will be a complete success, for this bout packs as much human interest and box office appeal as any collegiate match possibly can.

Imagine a cement mixer smashing into a thrashing machine and you have a fair idea of what to expect, for here are two of the conference's most dangerous ringmen. They are welterweights, the cream of their class, and a couple of more blood-thirsty young assassins never stepped into the ring.

Nedomatsky, the defending champion, is gunning for a record held jointly by three former fighters—three conference championships. It is a rare feat, particularly in view of the fact that the boys often can not fight in the same class more than one year, or two at most. Archie Hahn, Virginia bantamweight, was an exception, for he won the 115-pound crown three consecutive times.

Bobby Goldstein, a Washington boy and brother of the local matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn, won two lightweight championships and one welterweight title fighting under the University of Virginia standard. Ad Warren, now coach of Duke's mittmen, captured the light-heavyweight laurels in his sophomore year, and added two heavyweight belts to his collection before graduating.

Nedomatsky comes up to tomorrow's tourney with two crowns stored away in his trophy trunk, but with only an even chance for winning the third and indelibly inscribing his name among the conference's fistic greats.

In his sophomore year slick-haired Ivan knocked out Marion Brooks, of Virginia, to win the lightweight honors, and last year he put the chill on Guy Shepherd, of Virginia Tech, in the first round, to rule the welterweight division.

Farrar, making his tournament debut last year, was eliminated by Shepherd in the first round of their semifinal bout, when he suffered a cut eye which automatically barred him from further competition under conference rules.

Two weeks later he returned to the scene of his defeat, Charlottesville, Va., and won the National Collegiate A. A. championship and with it the right to try for a berth on the United States Olympic team. The trials were held at Chicago and Danny, a southpaw, did all right for himself until ill fortunate again overtook him. He suffered a broken hand in the semifinals, precluding all possibility of his fighting the deciding bout, and that dispelled what hopes he entertained of making the team as either champion or alternate.

Ends Bout Quickly.

This winter Farrar has been obliged to fight more than one round only once in dual competition, and in that bout he took an easy decision over Russ Sorrell, of North Carolina State. In three other bouts he knocked out Ackerman, of South Carolina; Fred Mix, of Catholic University, and Ed Lively, of West Virginia, in the first round.

Nedomatsky, too, is undefeated, although not fighting as impressively as two years ago when his very name struck terror in the hearts of all opponents. His record, however, is very impressive, showing knockouts over Bender, of Western Maryland in the third round; Dunham, of North Carolina, in the second; Martin, of V. M. I., in the first; Brooks, of Virginia, in the first, and Mix, of Catholic University, in the third. The only fight to go three rounds resulted in a decision for him over Dzuryak, of Rutgers.

All things considered it looks like a lively session for all hands if these two meet.

St. Thomas Five Downs Cards, 35 to 32

By Jack Paulus.

They could have started the Catholic U.-St. Thomas basketball game last night at the second half—and no one in Catholic U.'s cavernous gymnasium would have minded a bit, for that was the only real part of the game.

St. Thomas, a clever passing crew from Scranton, Pa., defeated the Cardinals, 35-32, in a contest that would have left everyone in a happier frame of mind had the officials been less conscientious in the opening session. "Steps" were called where spectators were at a loss to find that "steps" had occurred. The entire proceedings were slowed down by the heavy mantle of officialdom that was unwillingly thrust upon them.

Hermie Schmarr, the Cardinals' ace basketeer, sparkled even through the obvious handicap of a recent illness. The lad's eye missed just a trifle and his hand was not too quick, but class tells, even on a basketball floor. And Schmarr has class.

The Cardinals' attack failed to click in the early stanza, the boys missing shot after shot while they let the invaders outpass them completely. To the credit of the St. Thomas lads it can be said that they were taught the fundaments of getting the ball the shortest distance between two players with the utmost speed and dispatch. This display baffled Catholic U. for the opening minutes. The lead changed spasmodically during the period, with the referee's whistle breaking into the proceedings with monotonous consistency to the obvious loudly voiced disgust of the fans. The horn ended the half with St. Thomas holding a 1-point margin, 17-16.

The second half was something to see, however. The officials let up on the boys. The fact that several of the lads were planted among the spectators may have been disconcerting to the basketball fundamentalists, but it was great stuff to those of us who like even our cage game wild and woolly.

The Cardinals gained a 7-point advantage with less than five minutes of the game left to play. St. Thomas rallied and maintained a steady drive until the score hung at 32-32. A foul made it 33. A long, whirling, looping field goal made it 35.

Morgan Cagers Beat Howard

In the greatest thriller of the season, the Morgan College dribblers from Baltimore, defeated the Bison quintet, 41-38, after an uphill fight in the Howard gym, last night.

The Bisons led, 19-13, at the half, the margin separating the teams being closed shortly after they returned to the court, and remaining nip-and-tuck throughout.

"Bootnose" Williams, at guard, was outstanding, but his stellar work was more than rivaled by that of "Biff" Moseley, of the Oriole squad.

The teams were tied at 32-all, again at 34, at 36, and finally, at 38, with less than a minute to play. It was in this brief period that Morgan forged to the front, Moseley leading the way.

Cowley, Walker to Play Baltimore Handballers

Joe Cowley and Channing Walker, runners-up for the national Y. M. C. A. handball championship last year, will play Channing Walker and L. Blum of the Baltimore Y. M. H. A., in a doubles match at the Central Y at 8 o'clock next Saturday night.

In the singles, scheduled to start at 9 o'clock, Jack Schwartz and Stanley Hitts will have it out.

Todd's 68 Tops Field.

Houston, Tex. Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Harry Todd, Dallas amateur golfer, slashed three strokes off par by carding a 68 at the Houston Country Club today to lead a field of 170 players in the qualifying round of the twenty-third annual Invitation Tournament.

Ring Drawings Dubious Aid To Terps

Fickle Dame Fortune gave the University of Maryland's leather-pushers a Mona Lisa smile last night when pairings for the annual Southern Conference championship opening tomorrow at College Park were drawn. The Old Liners aren't certain whether they received a good break from the old lady or were given a healthy left jab.

In the 115-pound division Ed Shegogue, of Maryland, escaped meeting South Carolina's potent Frank Jenkins, only to be thrust into the same bracket with Bobby Koger, of Duke. But, if Shegogue gets by Koger he'll be in the finals, for they are the only men in their brackets.

Maryland got all the best of it in the featherweight class as Tom Birmingham was placed in a semi-final bout with Gilbert Colina, of South Carolina, and is virtually a lock bet to enter the finals. Birmingham is co-favorite with Joe Murnick, of North Carolina to win the championship.

Nedomatsky was seeded along with Danny Farrar, of Duke, and they were, of course, placed in opposite brackets. But in the next class up Mike Lombardo drew both Pete Lampesis, of the Citadel, and Wilton Mann, of Duke, and although one will be eliminated in the preliminary fighting, either will be a tough nut for the Terp veteran.

Lancelot Jacques, Maryland's middleweight, got the best of it by being placed in the same bracket with Rex Williams, of South Carolina, and Bill Cason, of Clemson.

Coaching Row 'Closed,' Says Pitt Head

President Has Heard No Complaints; Athletes Back Up Coach.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 24.—Chancellor John G. Bowman of the University of Pittsburgh said tonight the reported Sutherland-Harrison breach in the university's department of athletics "is closed" until "more facts come directly to the athletic council."

He made the statement as campus and athletic circles seethed with rumors that Dr. John Bain Sutherland, the silent Scot who has led Pitt's football teams to 94 victories in 13 years, with but 13 losses, would resign as coach because of differences with W. Don Harrison, director of athletics.

Bowman, in his statement, said that Harrison "has always shown high appreciation for the work of Dr. Sutherland," and that Sutherland "has entered at no time any complaint to the athletic council or to the university administration concerning a lack of co-operation or of good will on the part of Mr. Harrison."

"Therefore," he continued, "until more facts come directly to the athletic council, the matter, so far as the university is concerned, is closed."

Pitt lettermen adopted a resolution today addressed to the athletic council and recommended:

"Not only that it not accept Dr. Sutherland's resignation, if tendered, but that it take immediate steps to remove any obstacle which may stand in his way."

Gonzaga Five Vanquishes G.U. Prep

Gonzaga High went through the motions of disposing of Georgetown Prep in another Catholic Prep School League game yesterday on the Gonzaga court, winning, 40 to 16, as Coach Orrel Mitchell gave his entire squad a workout.

St. John's, confident of duplicating its victory after having lost to Gonzaga, 24-21, in an extra-period first encounter between the schools, takes a slightly less impressive record into battle. Although having placed one of the toughest schedules ever assumed by a local school, the Johnnies are still at their peak, but have dropped eight games in comparison with Gonzaga's two.

Gonzaga has played but 16 games, however, while the Johnnies have been bucking a rapid succession of approximately 23 or 24 games. The Saturday conflict is expected to pack the C. U. gym for the third straight time. Gonzaga Alumni will meet St. John's Alumni in the first game at 7:30 p. m.

Both Gonzaga and St. John's have beaten Eastern's interhigh champions, but the Johnnies have lost twice to the Light Blue, while Gonzaga has yet to lose to the Kelley crew. A game between the coming interhigh champions and the winners of Saturday's game is being contemplated in many quarters.

Mann Checks Barlund's Rise

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Nathan Mann, slugging New Haven heavyweight, put an abrupt check to the ambitious rise of Finland's Gunnar Barlund tonight in a fistic upset at the Hoppodrome.

Mann, on the short end in an unusually heavy spurt of wagering, was hard-pressed to gain a split decision after having Barlund on the verge of a knockout in the early stages of their 10-round match.

Two of the three officials voted for Mann while the other declared it was a draw.

Barlund finished strong but handicapped himself by delivering a number of low punches, which cost him at least one round which otherwise might have been tallied in his favor.

Barlund weighed 193¾ and Mann 182½.

Abrams, a Welter Champ, Turns Pro

George Abrams, District A. A. U. and Golden Glove welterweight champion, yesterday abandoned his amateur status and will enter the professional ring under the big time management of Pete Reilly, well-known pilot of pugs.

Abrams' affairs were turned over to Reilly by Sid Fishel, who discovered the local fighter and steered him to the local amateur titles while he was campaigning under the banners of the Washington Boys Club.

After winning the District titles, Abrams went to South Bend, Ind., where he won eight amateur bouts and lost one. Reilly, who has managed such fighters as Jack Delaney, Freddie Millar and many others, generally is credited with being the smartest manager in the business.

S. Conference Track Meet Draws District Stars; Frosh Are Entered.

Both Maryland and Georgetown will be well represented in the Southern Conference indoor track championships Saturday night at Chapel Hill, although the Hoyas are competing in non-championship events.

Coach Jim Mulligan of Georgetown, will send the following men to the mark in the 70-yard dash: Vincent Healy, George Bogan, Jim McPoland and Capt. Joe McCluskey. Doug Hanks and Irwin Warder have been entered in the 880-yard run, and a relay team comprised of Healy, Leroy Green, Bogan and McPoland will run the mile.

Freshmen entered are Vincent Braun, three-quarter-mile run, and a mile relay team of Braun, Reeves, Motzenbacker and Walker.

Maryland's varsity entries are Joe Ryan and Moir Fulks, 60-yard dash; Hermie Evans, 70-yard high and low hurdles; Joe Peaslee, half-mile; Coleman Headley, mile; Ed Miller, Francis Morris and Gordon Kluge, high jump; Bill Edwards, shot-put; John Beers, Kluge and Morris, broad jump; Frank Cronin, pole vault, and a mile relay team comprised of Alvin Miller, Archer, Kehoe and Cronister.

Investigation Upset, 22-20, By Rinaldi

The Rinaldi Tailors upset the formidable Bureau of Investigation basketball team in what proved to be the feature of a triple-header staged at the Heurich Gymnasium last night. The final score was 22 to 20, and the issue was decided only in the last few seconds of play.

Paul Sullivan made the decisive shot, a spectacular one from the center of the court.

In other games, D. and H. defeated the Jewish Community Center, 30 to 18, and the District WPA downed the Federal WPA, 56 to 38.

Hopkins Shades American, 48-47

The Johns Hopkins basketball tean downed American University, 48 to 47, in a game that almost ended in a riot here last night. The trouble was caused by a last-second shot, which was ruled illegal.

The score was tied at 46-all with but a minute to play. Cross tossed in a basket to up the Hopkins score to 48. Edwards brought the Eagles within one point of a tie by sinking a foul shot.

With the stage set for a storybook finish, Emerson Bartlett, of American, whizzed the ball into the basket just as the whistle sounded for what might have been a victory for the Eagles.

Dr. William B. Holton, of American University, was the honest timekeeper. He was called upon to decide whether the ball had left Bartlett's hands before the whistle sounded. He ruled that it had not, giving the game to the invaders by a single point. His decision quieted the turmoil that had broken out over whether the gun had gone off in time to save the game for Johns Hopkins.

On the Air Today

"Radio Daily," which has joined the ranks of news-and-chatter journals for the edification of radio toilers, provides a weekly popularity ranking of topical songs. The ranking, in fact, is an accurate log of songs played between the hours of 5 p. m., and 1 a. m., at WEAF, WJZ and WABC—key stations of the Red, Blue and Columbia networks respectively.

For the week ended February 13, the leader was "This Year's Kisses" with a rating of 36 (36 times played) with "There's Something in the Air" second with 30.

In order followed:

"The Night Is Young and You're So Beautiful."
"With Plenty of Money and You."
"On a Little Bambo Bridge."
"Good Night My Love."
"Love and Learn."
"May I Have the Next Romance With You."
"Gee, But You're Swell."
"When My Dream Boat Comes Home."
"You're Laughing at Me."
"I Can't Lose That Longing for You."
"I've Got My Love to Keep Me Warm."
"Trust in Me."

Others practically as popular are "Boo-Hoo," "Serenade in the Night," "When the Poppies Bloom Again," "I'm in a Dancing Mood," "If My Heart Could Only Talk," "The Mood That I'm In" and "Rainbow on the River."

Also in the list of those played 15 or more times is "Slumming on Park Avenue"—and with which addition something of a record for Irving Berlin's song-writing talents is made. The leader—"This Year's Kisses"—and "You're Laughing at Me," "I've Got My Love" and the slumming ditty are from "On the Avenue."

Wheat Prices Recover With Flour Demand

Market Turns Upward After 8-Cent Drop in 10 Days.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—The wheat market staged a comeback today with an advance that rubbed out more than a cent of the 8-cent loss chalked up in the last ten days. It was the first substantial upturn in the market since Friday. Many traders termed the price rise of a technical reaction as a result of the recent decline, but buying was encouraged by reports of better flour demand in the Southwest.

Wheat closed ¾ to 1⅜ cents above yesterday's finish. May, 1.31¾@1.31⅞; July, 1.14⅞@1.15; September, 1.12, and corn was ⅝ to 1 cent up, May, 1.06½@1.06⅝; July, 1.01⅞@1.02; September, 95⅜@95½; oats gained ½ to ⅞; May, 47⅛@47¼; rye, ⅝ to ⅞; May, 1.07½ and provisions were 12 cents higher to 15 lower.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Leading foreign currencies generally were lower yesterday in terms of the dollar.

Sterling ruled at $4.98½, off ⅛ of a cent; French francs, 4.65¼ cents, off .00¼ of a cent, and Swiss francs, 22.81 cents, off .00½ of a cent. Holland guilders were slightly higher.

In London the dollar showed an opposite drift, declining ⅛ of a cent to close at 4.89⅛ to the pound, or even with the overnight New York rate. The dollar closed in Paris at the equivalent of 4.653 cents to the franc.

Export Trade In Chemicals Up to Normal

But Volume Still Remains 25 Per Cent Below 1929 Level.

Full recovery in the Nation's export trade in chemicals has been achieved, according to a report made public here yesterday by the American Chemical Society. Taking the 1923-25 volume as a fair average, the normal level has been surpassed, it is said.

"Even remembering that normally this trade would have shown a regular annual increase in the decade since 1923-25 had there been no depression, it is not unreasonable now to speak of a full recovery in our chemical exports as an accomplished fact," says the report, prepared by Otto Wilson, Washington statistician.

"The outgoing trade, however, still remains about one-fourth below the high level of 1929, and our chemical imports are less than 60 per cent of their value in that abnormal year."

United States chemical specialties are pushing ahead in foreign markets and have become almost the largest class of chemical products to be sold abroad, it is pointed out.

"The sale of these popular American products, intended chiefly for use in the house or on the farm, had, by the end of last year, almost equaled in value those of our industrial chemicals, the leading group in the chemical trade," the report continues.

"The foreign trade gains of 1936 were not very evenly divided among the various great groups of chemical commodities. All classes shared in the increase in export values except industrial chemicals, which are slightly under the 1935 total. But coal-tar products barely exceeded the previous year's mark, and the foreign demand for paints, soaps and explosives—for industrial rather than military use—was not greatly in excess of that in 1935."

Stock Prices Recover After Early Weakness on New Labor Threats; Bonds Lower.

New York, Feb. 24.—Stocks were weak in the morning, steady at midday and moderately firm in the late trading, but closing prices were no better than irregularly higher on a turnover of a little over 2,000,000 shares. May wheat rose 1⅝ cents to 131⅞ cents a bushel.

Banks holding Government bonds did not seem to be much alarmed over the Comptroller of the Currency's hint that it might be difficult for them to find any Government bonds, once the Treasury begins to accumulate its own obligations for the various Government funds, including social security. Prices again declined in gilt edged sectors. The tone improved a bit in speculative quarters, along with that in stocks.

During most of the day the tendency in industrial stocks was to recede or stand, but later a mild recovery took place in Steel, General Electric, General Motors, Chrysler, International Nickel, Anaconda, Smelters and Standard Oil. Higher prices for Pennsylvania crude foreshadowed a stiffer market for Midcontinent, but no early attempt to lift prices there is anticipated.

Opening prices were sickly for many stocks. Labor threats chopped over a point from Chrysler at the opening. Other leaders fell from 1 to 2 points. Coppers found a steadier market by midday, and a bit of the smoke of the holiday battle blew away, revealing a strong temporary position for the metals.

Trucks Advance.

Bethlehem throughout was stronger than its group. The stock advanced 2 points. Republic found the going rather heavy. Steel recovered its early loss of 2 points. Rails were irregular, indicating optimism over the wage outlook, possibly because they have so often heard the same cries. Motor truck shares were popular. Yellow was pushed ahead rapidly. White hardened.

Some of the public utilities were firm and others weakened. Telephone sank a bit, although some reassurance was given over the press for an early reduction in rates. Consolidated Edison could not be lifted by a good earnings report for 1936. Coppers were rather hard to move. Firm prices were the rule for tobaccos, foods, amusements and rubbers. Mild recovery took place in Crown Cork. Commercial Credit and a few other stocks that were unpopular in the past few days.

Stocks to stand out on the higher side were Cash Register, Boeing, Celanese, Omnibus, Purity Bakers and Warren Foundry. Heavy losers were Brake Shoe, Hercules Powder, Homestake, Penn Dixie, Pressed Steel second preferred, United Carbon and Twin City preferred.

Labor Demands.

Less concern was shown in the financial district over the foreign investment problem, and more attention was given to the problems facing the American investor. The hardest one was the drive of labor for more money. Motor stocks, and particularly Chrysler, were given a preliminary barrage which it was supposed was a prelude to a general attack by the C. I. O. Steels also were in an uncertain sector, and the increasing number of sit-down strikers in all sorts of trades reported daily from all parts of the country scarcely contributed to the bullish spirit.

Meanwhile the poor old railroads again were given a jolt by the demand for a 20 per cent wage rise, mostly for the nonoperating employes. The increase would involve about $300,000,000 yearly, and for all the progress made from the bottom by the railroads since 1932, few are earning anything beyond a bare coverage of charges. About a third of the mileage is in bankruptcy, and any material increase in operating costs at this time would quickly send nearly all the remaining solvent roads into the hands of the courts.

Doubtless labor would be just as well pleased, for a bankrupt road takes the money that otherwise would go to creditors and spends it on physical improvements, but the end to all that is Government ownership, for private capital cannot be permanently starved or confiscated. Only the taxpayer can stand something of that sort. The railroads lay their hopes for relief on the Interstate Commerce Commission's suggestion that costs cannot be allowed to increase further at this time. They hope the blow won't strike them, because they have trust in the country's humane instincts—and incidentally in its preponderance of common sense over the natural wish for the highest possible wages.

Money Rates.

Among the foreign exchanges demand for dollars was equal to that for sterling and better than for francs, or at least the stabilization funds kept the quotations level. Guilders were firmer. No good evidence of a flow in either direction for foreign funds was supplied by the exchange markets. Money rates were unchanged.

Mr. Eccles' view that commercial paper might go to 1½ per cent and other money to 2 per cent, have interested the bankers considerably, but they are slow to increase money rates arbitrarily. There is division in the ranks of the bankers, some being opposed to early action of any kind, while others feel that credit is worth more than current rates. If Mr. Eccles' figures were reached the banks would derive exactly 100 per cent more income from their loans than they are now getting. No banker believes that the suggested levels will be reached immediately, because of the pressure of local and out-of-town money seeking employment, but the general opinion is that there will be a material hardening of the money market before May 1, when the recent increase in reserve requirements becomes fully effective.

Crude Oil Output Makes New Record

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Output of crude oil has moved up to a new record peak for the third successive week, the American Petroleum Institute reported today.

Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 9,900 barrels in the week ended February 20, totaling 3,295,950 barrels. Daily average production east of California increased 17,600 barrels to 2,709,250 barrels.

Highest Award In Advertising For Erickson

Annual Honors in Field Announced at Dinner in New York.

New York, Feb. 24.—Recipients of the 1936 annual advertising awards, sponsored by Advertizing and Selling Magazine, were announced tonight at the annual awards dinner at the Waldorf Astoria.

For "distinguished services to advertising" a posthumus gold medal was awarded to A. W. Erickson, who was chairman of the board of the McCann-Erickson advertising agency at the time of his death, November 2, 1936. This is the first time that a posthumus award has been made. Silver medals, also for "distinguished service to advertising" went to Katharine Fisher, director of Good Housekeeping Institute and A. C. Nielsen, president of a Chicago market research organization.

In addition to the individual medal honors other awards were given to advertisers and agencies for the outstanding campaigns as follows:

Torture Killing Jurymen Hear Lawyers Weep

'Don't Crucify Him,' Pleads Defense; Judge Says Chair Unjustified.

By the Associated Press.

Somerset, Pa., Feb. 24.—Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti wept today as he pleaded with the jury to send a young State trooper to prison for beating to death 64-year-old Frank C. Monaghan in a "third degree."

Chief Defense Attorney John Duggan, jr., wept, too, as he pleaded with the same two women and ten men:

"Don't you be the one to crucify him."

Gives Charge Today.

The justice told the jury:

"No evidence of first degree murder has been presented and I instruct you that you cannot return such a verdict."

Judge Maxey said he would deliver his formal charge tomorrow.

Magiotti had opened the 15-day-old trial by demanding the electric chair—"if the evidence warrants"—for Gunderman as the first of seven Uniontown peace officers indicted for murder.

Today he declared:

* * * * If he did not intend to kill Monaghan then it is second-degree murder."

The Attorney General told the jury that Monaghan, a Uniontown hotel proprietor, who died during the questioning about the cutting of Detective John C. Wall, "had a right to be permitted to live to tell his story."

Duggan "Tried" Monaghan.

Margiotti continued:

"This is not the trial of Monaghan against Gunderman. We are trying this defendant for what we contend was an unlawful killing. Mr. Duggan spent an hour and a half trying Monaghan for cutting Wall."

Wall was slashed on the face and neck the night of last September 11, while sitting in the front seat of Monoghan's car on the Connellsville road. He lived to testify at this trial that Monaghan cut him.

A grand jury investigating Monahan's death in the detectives' Bertillon room returned murder indictments against Gunderman, District Attorney James A. Reilly, Assistant District Attorney Harry W. Byrne, State Trooper Anthony Sanute, Detective Wilbert Minerd, Night Chief of Police Charles Malik, and Jack Hann, a former detective.

Indictments charging "concealing true facts" were returned against Coroner S. A. Baltz, Dr. Cataldo, Dr. H. E. Ralston and Stephen and Andrew Haky, undertakers.

Alternative Verdicts.

The jury can return one of these four possible verdicts against Gunderman:

Second degree murder—10 to 20 years.

Voluntary manslaughter—6 to 12 years.

Involuntary manslaughter—3 to 6 years.

Acquittal.

Margiotti denied that the defense had proved its contention that Monoghan was a "vicious character" and explained he had thought he was being held up the night Wall and District Attorney Reilly stopped his automobile and was cut.

Duggan agreed in his closing address with the State's assertion Gundeman had injured Monaghan, but he declared it had been done in self-defense.

Bottle Offered To Mrs. Trader, Court Is Told

Counsel, Requesting Visitor Ban, Accuses Two State Policemen.

By the Associated Press.

Snow Hill, Md., Feb. 24.—Associate Judge James M. Crocket withheld decision tonight on the petition of Mrs. Jeannette B. Trader to prohibit all but her counsel from conferring with her on details of the fatal shooting of her husband, Clarence J. Trader.

The petition was filed by her attorneys, Godfrey Child and John L. Sanford, jr. Mrs. Trader is in the Worcester County jail here, awaiting trial on an indictment charging first-degree murder. The trial is scheduled next month.

The petition asserted she was visited against her wishes by investigators during her confinement to the jail. It specifically asked Judge Crocket for a court order to prohibit the State's attorney, members of the State police and the sheriff from questioning her.

The request alleged Officer John J. Cassidy, of the State police, offered to bring her some liquor in her cell and Sergt. Marlin Brubaker, also of the State police, made "several threatening and abusive remarks" to her.

Mrs. Trader was indicted for murder following the death of her husband, operator of the Stockton Electric Co., of a bullet wound on the night of January 14. She claimed shortly after the shooting that Trader killed himself.

The petition stated that on or about February 10, Cassidy, "fully cognizant" of the fact that her attorneys were out of the State, entered the jail and, "acting like a member of the fifteenth century star chamber," told the prisoner:

"We have the goods on you, we are going to hang you and you had better admit your guilt and it will go easier with you."

After Mrs. Trader protested her innocense of the charge, the petition quoted Cassidy as replying: "You think it over and tonight I will return and bring you some liquor." It added she refused the offer and warned the officer it would "cost him his job" if he brought liquor into the jail.

Lumbermen's Mutual Resources Increase

Chicago, Feb. 24.—The Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty Co., of Chicago, reports gains in all departments of its business for the twenty-fourth consecutive year in its annual statement for 1936 released today by James S. Kemper, president.

Earnings increased to a new high record of $5,248,372.05 from $4,003,437.67 for the previous year, a gain of $1,244,934.38. Assets increased to $26,630,204.39 on December 31, 1936, a gain of $4,018,905 over the 1935 total of $22,611,299.39.

Commercial Loans Rise $13,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reports another drop in holdings of Government Securities by weekly reporting member banks in 101 leading cities. During the week ended February 17, total holdings fell $20,000,000, to $10,317,000,000, or $394,000,000 over the same week a year ago. Since January 1, these holdings have declined $162,000,000.

The board reported another rise in the bank's loans to commerce, agriculture and industry, these climbing $13,000,000, to $4,130,000,000. The total was $849,000,000 over the same week last year, but $160,000,000 under January 1. Government deposits fell off $51,000,000, to $383,000,000, this drop being reflected in a $52,000,000 increase in demand deposits to $15,604,000,000.

Jewish Group Invites Christians to Services

The regular service of Washington Hebrew Congregation on Eighth street tomorrow night will be turned over to the brotherhood of the congregation for the annual layman service.

In co-operation with the conference for the promotion of good will between Jews and Christians, the brotherhood will conduct a special service for those interested in the elimination of intolerance and racial prejudice. Special guests of the brotherhood on this occasion will be the Knights of Columbus, the Bible class of Calvary Baptist Church, the Men's Club of Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church and the brotherhood of service of the Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church.

Husband Killer Faints as She Relates Beating

Towson Mother Declares She Was Struck With Baby in Arms.

By the Associated Press.

Towson, Md., Feb. 24.—Mrs. Mary Meryl Almony, one-time school teacher, on trial for the shotgun slaying of her husband, collapsed for the third time in 24 hours today and, in the midst of her testimony of events prior to the shooting, was led screaming from the Towson courtroom.

She went on the witness stand shortly after noon, apparently recovered from her second collapse, and described in an unfaltering voice how her husband, Hollis Almony, beat her a few hours before she killed him on June 22.

While reciting the circumstances of a beating she said her husband administered two months earlier, a few days before her youngest child was born, the 40-year-old mother broke down. Her cries of "It's too horrible to tell, it's too horrible to tell!" echoed through the courtroom as attendants led her from the witness stand.

Immediately prior to the shooting, Mrs. Almony testified, her husband had been drinking steadily, had been abusive, and "cursed and swore at me continually."

About sunset of the day before Almony was shot, she said, he "drew his fist and hit me in the breast."

"I was sitting on a rocking chair and the blow was so hard it tipped the chair back against the wall. I had the baby in my arms and our two girls were there and he did it right in front of them and my brother and * * * two colored men.

"I got up from the chair and he kept on cursing me * * * and he said 'I didn't get you last night, but I'll get you tonight,' and he hit me on the end of my nose and made it bleed, and I think he hit me on the ear, too, at that time."

She said that later he repeated his threats and beat her again.

"I ran over to the corner and picked up the shotgun * * * I broke it open and a shell flew out. I put another one in. I shot him in the head. I went out of the room and met Marguerite (one of her daughters) and went to call the police."

Her dramatic story was told before a crowded courtroom.

Nice's Removal As Police Head Hinted in Md.

Assembly Studies Creation of New Setup After Garey's Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 24.—The advisability of getting off to a new start by repealing the law creating the Maryland State Police Department and passing a measure to found a new police setup was discussed here tonight as an aftermath of charges made by Maj. Enoch B. Garey, deposed police superintendent.

From reliable sources in both Senate and House, it was learned that a group of members believed this action would remedy conditions which caused the Senate to order a committee investigation of the department. The Legislature, by repealing the State police law, enacted at the 1935 session, would automatically wipe the slate.

New Personnel Seen.

Passage of a new bill organizing a force under a new setup would allow the appointment of new personnel. It also was pointed out in some quarters that it would be possible to create a new setup which would not be controlled by the Governor.

Developments in the police situation today were:

Gov. Harry W. Nice branded as "utterly and absolutely false" a statement by Maj. Garey that the Governor had ordered him to cross the ice to Tangier Island a year ago with a relief expedition. Sergt. Wilbert V. Hunter, a member of the expedition, died on the ice.

The Governor declared that charges that he played politics with the police department were "ridiculous." He said that Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president of St. John's College and personal friend of Garey, had named all but one of the commission that investigated the expedition.

The Senate investigating committee summoned ten witnesses, including Delegate Charles S. Houck (Democrat), Frederick, former State commander of the American Legion, to appear at a hearing to be held at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

To Question Nice.

Senator John D. C. Duncan (Democrat), Baltimore County, chairman of the Senate committee, announced that the group probably would question Gov. Nice at the Governor's office some time next week. The Governor has signified his willingness to be interrogated in the presence of newspapermen.

It was reported reliably that pressure was being exerted to end the police investigation. Sources reporting the pressure would not specify as to where it originated.

Delegate Houck, in his capacity as State commander of the Legion, went to Crisfield and Tangier Island with a Legion relief group when Maj. Garey was in the section. He said the Legionnaires were not called before the committee which investigated Hunter's death and the Garey relief expedition.

D. C. Man Is Sued After Auto Crash

Frederick, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—William B. Boyer, of Petersville, asked $1,500 damages from Donald Starnes of Washington in a suit on file in Circuit Court here today. The action resulted from an automobile accident on South Mountain Sunday.

Mrs. Kathleen Nivens, also of Washington, a passenger in Starnes' machine, was killed in the collision, involving a truck owned by Boyer and the Starnes' car. The accident occurred on a sharp curve.

Defense of Home Is Plea in Killing

Special Dispatch to The Post

Danville, Va., Feb. 24.—L. C. Spragam, 23-year-old colored man, will claim defense of his home in countering a charge of shooting and killing Alley W. Lewis, 34, a white farmer, during the early hours of Sunday morning in Pittsylvania County.

Spragam, who is in jail here, admits that he shot from his bed through the door of his cabin when an intruder began fumbling with the lock. He says, however, he intended only to frighten the unbidden visitor away. The bullet found the center of Lewis' forehead and he died within a short while.

Sunday Arrest Illegal, Motorist Is Released

Media, Pa., Feb. 24 (AP).—Pennsylvania's blue laws brought about the release of James Orlick, of Wilmington, Del., who protested a fine and costs for passing a traffic light last Sunday.

Judge John M. Broomall discharged Orlick after a search of Pennsylvania statutes failed to show any change or modification of a law of 1705 forbidding arrests on Sunday unless for treason, felony or breach of the peace.

Peery Returns to Office, Pale From Long Illness

Richmond, Va., Feb. 24 (AP).—Gov. Peery, visibly weakened by his long illness, returned to his desk in the executive offices for a brief while today.

"I believe I've fully recovered," the executive said, "but I'll have to admit I've felt better than now."

A digestive ailment confined Gov. Peery to the mansion for more than a month.

Education Cost In Washington Alarms Group

Trade Board Committee Hits Extra-Curricular Work in Schools.

Why the cost of schooling a child in Washington is higher than in other cities of similar size was a question foremost in the minds of a delegation from the school committee of the Board of Trade which made a surprise survey of several Washington schools yesterday.

While the committee has formulated no report, many of the delegation expressed off-the-record opinions "there is too much money spent on extra-curricular activities such as dancing, swimming, music and whatnot. Those are activities parents should pay for if they want their youngsters to enjoy them, not the taxpayers."

Ostensibly the group was out to survey overcrowding in the schools, following reports from school authorities as to need for more buildings. In some of the schools they found classes of up to 50 students, and in one, a colored school, the Grover Cleveland School at Eighth and T streets, they found children unable to get into classes except on approximately a half-time basis.

But in many of the larger schools for white children, such as Roosevelt Senior High, the committee found typical "serious" deprivations consisted of using a music room for mathematics and a gymnasium for study hall. The gymnasium, however, was a small supplementary gym and was equipped fully with blackboards, desks, curtains, etc., and was indistinguishable from other classrooms in appearance.

"Many of the men in the committee were trying to place a value on the extra-curricular activities of the schools and tried to determine whether these things, such as dancing, require a new building. Some of the delegates were of the opinion that if these things were done outside of school there would be no serious overcrowding in many schools here," said George E. Keneipp, chairman of the board's school committee, who led the tour.

Reason for the survey was the imminence of Congressional hearing on school conditions, especially with regard to granting WPA loans to Washington for the construction of additional school buildings. Cooper B. Rhodes, who made the tour yesterday, will report the delegations' findings to the Collins committee of the House. The Board of Trade will hear Keneipp's report March 19.

British Checking Exports of Money

By the Associated Press.

Fiscal authorities heard with considerable interest last night that the British have acted to check exports of money from Great Britain.

Advices from abroad said the British government had asked insurance and investment companies to discontinue capital exports to this country.

Officials here indicated they regarded this move as in line with the French-American-British accord last fall, an agreement designed to prevent damaging fluctuations in currencies. They would not, however, hazard a guess as to its possible effect until they have a chance to observe future developments.

For some time officials of the United States Treasury, Federal Reserve Board and Security Commission have been considering possible methods of taxation to stem the inflow of capital into the United States lest it have a disturbing effect on both domestic economy and international monetary relationships.

Meanwhile, Secretary Morgenthau and members of the Reserve Board's open market committee were giving attention also to other fiscal affairs. They discussed tentative plans today for the Treasury's March financing.

Screen Star Arranges Help for Grandfather

Beatrice, Nebr., Feb. 24 (AP).—Jacob A. Brugh, 82-year-old grandfather of screen star Robert Taylor, isn't alone and without funds any more.

He has moved from his old house at Holmesville, where he was a $16-a-month pensioner. Today he lives with Roy Brugh, his son, on a farm northwest of here. And the elderly man is no longer a pensioner.

Recently county relief officials sought to get the movie star's help in caring for his paternal grandfather, and from Hollywood Taylor said he would arrange to have the proper care given.

Drive Is Begun On Racketeers In 2d Precinct

'Short Beats' Ordered by Capt. Bobo to Stop Gambling.

An intensive drive on known small-time racketeers was begun yesterday by Capt. James E. Bobo, of the Second Precinct, center of the Capital's gambling district.

The police captain ordered a "short beat" in the 1100 block of Ninth street northwest, and within a few hours a twice-raided establishment was closed and dark.

He ordered another "short beat" in the 1100 block of Fourteenth street northwest. When they saw a policeman whose only duty was to patrol within a few feet of a store in the block, patrons apparently found it advisable to order cigars, cigarettes, and tobacco instead of placing bets.

"We are going to drive all gamblers and all gambling out of the precinct," stated Bobo.

"If they move from one place to another within the limits of the precinct, we'll follow."

Special objects of the captain's vigilance, it was said last night, are Mickey McDonald, widely known gaming character arrested in numerous raids, and his alleged "front man," "Nubby" Knuckles.

Several weeks ago Knuckles himself appeared at the precinct station to bail out men taken in one of the raids on the Ninth street establishment, which closed yesterday.

Another "short beat," Bobo said, will be placed in the 1000 block of Fourteenth street northwest, where gamblers are said to frequent a place there to place their bets.

Roper Asserts Courts Frown on 'Sit-Downs'

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Roper, asked yesterday for comment on sit-down strikes, replied:

"Any sit-down strike that undertakes to take over private property is a serious and fundamental thing and in my opinion would not be long endured by the courts."

Roper added he was giving his personal views.

'Glacier Priest' Is Debunker Of Hollywood Eskimo Sagas

Father Hubbard, Explorer of Ice-Banked Volcanos, Shivers at Washington Cold While Singing Alaska's Praise.

By Liam Lenihan.

Just as we are all set to do something romantic, turn sourdough, marry a green-eyed Eskimo gal and live in an igloo, along comes an unfeeling fellow to prick our Hollywood-inspired bubble.

The debunker is none other than Father Bernard Rosecrans Hubbard, familiarly dubbed the "Glacier Priest," who has won renown by his explorations into the gas-ridden infernos of the Far North.

"Alaska," said Father Hubbard yesterday, stomping his feet to keep warm, "has much milder weather on the whole than the District. Take Juneau for instance, the coldest it gets there is five below. Tch, Tch, I never heard such unmitigated nonsense."

"But the white nights, the hard-drinking, quick shooting sourdoughs?"

All Dead or Jailed.

"Bosh," the good father said. "White nights are unknown below the Arctic Circle. As for your intemperate sourdough heroes they are all dead or in jail."

"Ah, but you cannot rob us of our pagan Eskimo girls and our trysts in some hidden igloo."

"What penny-dreadful novels have you been reading?" Father Hubbard tried to be patient. "The Eskimos are moral, well educated. Wife trading, as depicted by Hollywood, may have been the vogue centuries ago, but there is more of that in Park avenue today than in Alaska. As for the igloos, you had better go to Greenland."

The question period over, the "Glacier Priest" now did the talking.

"The population of Alaska is only 160,000," he commented. "Why, the country can support 20,000,000 of the right type."

Wants Rugged Type.

The "right type," according to the explorer, are the rugged individualists, not the red-plush pioneers you will find at Matanuska.

"I will not criticize the Government's colonization project, and I certainly leave politics to Father Coughlin," the 220-pound priest said. "Matanuska got a bad break, however. Most of the colonists were reliefers who were failures as farmers. You cannot expect them to take the initiative or to stand the hard grind."

Things are better now in Matanuska, he conceded. The undesirables and those not fitted are being gradually weeded out.

"There is a waiting list of very desirable families now," Father Hubbard continued. "But the job is not a job for softies and only real pioneers will survive. They will have their reward, however, for Alaska is the modern land of promise and Canaan was a barren waste in comparison with this clime."

Plans One-Year Trip.

Father Hubbard, now on a lecture tour, will leave in May for King Island off the Seward Peninsula where 190 Eskimos live. There he will spend one year studying the customs of that primitive settlement and its language. The results will be shown with 300,000 feet of film. From there he will set out in his new electrically-welded Diesel engine-equipped boat for the frozen wastes of the North Pole. He expects to discover islands hitherto unseen by man. The latter part of the journey will be undertaken with dog teams and on foot but he will carry a short wave set, both sending and receiving. A seaplane will be held in reserve—just in case. Four or five picked huskies will accompany him on the trip.

Fake Relief Checks Found.

By the Associated Press.

The secret service reported yesterday that 35 counterfeit relief checks totaling $2,000 had been passed in Chicago. All were detected, the service said, as they cleared to the Federal Reserve Bank and other Chicago banks this morning.

Blonde Loses Rubinoff Suit, Faces Inquiry

Heart Balm Case Dismissed; State to Investigate Origin of Trial.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Peggy Garcia's $500,000 breach of promise suit against Dave Rubinoff was switched suddenly from a civil court to the district attorney's office today. An assistant prosecutor, Eugene J. Finnegan, said he would invite the beauteous blonde from Virginia to do some explaining at his office after he had studied the charges she made before a supreme court jury against the violin maestro.

"I want to know," said Finnegan, "whose idea is was to start and prosecute this suit."

The trial was halted shortly after Miss Garcia and her attorney returned from a melodramatic trip to Virginia, where they sought to straighten out her marital history.

Was Married Woman.

In discontinuing the action, Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo held that Miss Garcia technically was a married woman at the time she claims Rubinoff swept her off her feet with his "big beautiful smile," and seduced her with a promise of marriage.

The former "Follies" girl herself testified this morning that she was married at the age of 11 to "a boy I didn't know very well."

Explaining her previous denials of having been involved in any such ceremony, she said she "wouldn't call it a marriage," because her husband's mother thought is was "ridiculous," and kept them apart.

Rubinoff smiled broadly when the case was halted but his lawyer protested loudly against being deprived of an opportunity to clear him of the "fantastic charges" made by Miss Garcia.

Ardent Love Charged.

Miss Garcia, who said she adopted the name of a cigar in an effort to get a job as a Spanish tango dancer, testified last week that the violin player made ardent love to her in 1933 after they met in a Harlem night spot.

Rubinoff denied ever meeting the girl, formally or informally.

Assistant District Attorney Finnegan said he would study the minutes of the trial with a view to determining whether there was any element of extortion involved.

Miss Garcia's reversal of previous testimony that she never had been married prior to her alleged romance with Rubinoff satisfied him, he said, that she had "cleared herself of perjury."

He planned to examine the principals in the case within the next few days.

Accompanied by Father.

Miss Garcia and her attorney, Bernard H. Sandler, returned from Roanoke a few hours before court opened this morning. They were accompanied by her "pappy," 64-year-old Cornelius H. Taylor, whose handle-bar mustache quivered with excitement as he emerged into the hurly-burly of Pennsylvania station.

Justice Cotillo thereupon halted the trial, saying the court could not go into the "collateral matter" of whether the marriage was legal or not.

Miss Garcia, now the wife of Michael La Rocca, a building supplies salesman, said she received several theatrical offers and marriages proposals during the trial.

Yellow Fever Hero Is Given Military Rites

U. S. Honors Charles Sonntag With Burial in Arlington.

Charles Sonntag, the Spanish War veteran who risked his life in Dr. Walter Reed's famous battle against yellow fever, was honored by the Government yesterday with a full military burial.

Standing in the falling snow at Arlington National Cemetery, high ranking officers of the Army Medical Corps attended the rites for Sonntag, who died at his Calhoun County, S. C., farm Friday at the age of 64. The body of the brave Carolinian who played so important a part in the Nation's war against the insidious disease, then was lowered to a hero's grave.

Last of Test Band.

Sonntag was the last of the band of men who submitted to the bites of the yellow fever bearing mosquito in Dr. Reed's experiment to prove the insect carried the disease, Brig. Gen. Jefferson R. Keen, Army Medical Corps, recalled.

"He had the last case of experiment fever at Camp Lezear, Cuba, in 1901," asserted Keen, who was chief Army surgeon in western Cuba at the time.

Dr. Reed's experiment consisted of volunteers submitting themselves to the bite of the mosquito. Those bitten by the mosquito contracted the disease. After he had recovered from the yellow fever contracted from the insects, Sonntag was rewarded with a commemorative medal.

Brother Is Present.

Only one member of the veteran's family at the Arlington rites was Otto Sonntag, retired Washington policeman. Sonntag, a brother, said the widow, Mrs. Hattie Pou Sonntag, now was totally blind.

Lieut. Col. O. J. Cohee, Fort Myer chaplain, was in charge of the rites.

Representative Fulmer, of South Carolina, who attended, announced he would introduce a bill giving Mrs. Sonntag a $125-a-month pension for the remainder of her life.

Among the members of the Army Medical Corps who attended were Maj. Gen. C. R. Reynolds, Surgeon General of the Army; Col. James E. Fife, Col. William R. Sheep, Maj. Gen. Merritt Ireland and Col. E. E. Jones.

$5,000,000 More Asked For Huge Navy Drydock

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Swanson asked the Budget Bureau yesterday for a $5,000,000 increase in the $10,000,000 appropriation already set aside for construction of the world's largest floating drydock to be stationed at Honolulu.

When the Navy advertised for bids for construction last fall, the lowest offer was far above the $10,000,000 appropriated for the drydock.

Whitaker Confirmed.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate confirmed yesterday the nomination of Sam E. Whitaker, of Chattanooga, Tenn., to be an Assistant Attorney General.
